In 1823 the then shebait of the debsheba of K. instituted a suit for the recovery of the alienated lands against the then shebait of the sheba at C., and in that suit it was declared that the sheba was independent of the debsheba, and thus the plaintiff was referred to a regular suit. In a suit for such an allowance brought by a younger brother against the elder, who had succeeded their deceased father in the possession of the estate,—Held that an order made dismissing a claim for maintenance preferred by such younger brother against their father in his lifetime, founded on an ikramnama, did not afford a defence under section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that the brothers having made an agreement, fixing the allowance for maintenance at a certain sum, the younger brother agreeing to receive a less sum for a defined period, he could only obtain a decree for the allowance so reduced. AHMAD HOSSEIN KHAN v. a certain fixed amount, and was not entitled to recover more in the shape of profits in respect of the share claimed. Held that it was not a decision that such fixed payment represented a mere claim to maintenance, and not a substantial right or interest in the property itself, so that on partition she must be regarded as having no claim to share in the land. It should be inquired into (the decree being so construed) whether the acceptance of a fixed payment was on forfeiture of all rights to the property, and whether it extended only so far as the widow's right is concerned, or whether it affected the son's right likewise. MAN KOONWER v DILAWUR HOSSEIN KHAN. 1 Agr., Rev., 36

The mortgagee subsequently sued upon his mortgage, making the purchaser a defendant, but pending the suit the latter died, and the suit was not revived against his representatives. A decree was, in 1876, obtained, and in execution of that decree the property in question was purchased by the plaintiff, who now sued to recover possession of the same from the representatives of the purchaser at the former execution sale. Held that the matter was not res judicata by reason of the mortgage suit, inasmuch as that suit having been under Act VIII of 1859, the abatement had not the effect which such an abatement under Act X of 1877 would have had, viz., being a bar to a fresh suit in the same cause of action. NISTARINI DEBI v. 38. ——— Landlord and tenant.—Sale for arrears of rent—Deposit to protect under-tenure—Set-off—Voluntary payment—L. and R., the holders of a putni estate, granted in 1856 a dur-putni lease to S at an annual rent, the lease stipulating that S should have full power of sale and gift, but should not sub-let without the putnidar's consent. The lease contained no stipulation for the registration of any vendee or donee. In 1860 S sold the dur-putni lease to K, the deed of sale, which was duly registered, providing for mutation of names in the putnidar's books. No such mutation was ever effected by K, who was never recognised as their tenant by L. and R., the rent of the dur-putni being paid in the name of S. In 1864, the rent due from the putnidars being in arrear, the zemindar proceeded to sell the putni under Regulation VIII of 1819. Thereupon K, in order to protect his under-tenure, deposited in the Collectorate, on 17th November 1864, a sum of money, on which the sale was stayed. K, being then in arrear in the payment of his dur-putni rent, claimed to set off the amount deposited in the Collectorate against the rent due to L. and R. This L. and R. refused to allow, and they brought a suit in the Collector's Court against S and his sureties to recover the arrears of rent. In that suit K intervened, claiming the benefit of the set-off, to which, however, the High Court, on 26th June 1866, on appeal, held that he was not entitled, the deposit being merely a voluntary payment by K. On 30th October 1867 K brought a regular suit against S. and L. and R. to recover the amount of the deposit and obtained a decree, but the decision was reversed on appeal and the suit dismissed for want of jurisdiction. On 6th June 1869 K filed his plaint in the proper Court. Held that he was entitled to recover the amount deposited by him in the Collectorate, and that the suit was not barred as being res judicata by the decision of 26th June 1866. *LUCKINARAIN MITTER v. been no sale to him, but the cloth had been delivered to him on commission sale. The Magistrate entertaining this objection disallowed it, on the ground that the charge of adultery against the wife was not established. The husband subsequently again objected to the payment of the allowance on the same ground. The Magistrate entertaining the second objection allowed it, and directed the husband to discontinue paying the allowance. His order was based on proof of adultery by the wife before the date of the order of the former Magistrate. Held, on the general principle of the rule of res judicata, that the second Magistrate was wrong in law in reopening matters already adjudicated upon, and his order directing the discontinuance of the allowance on the ground of facts antecedent to the former Magistrate's order must be held to be illegal. *LARATI v. The first defendant afterwards gave a ticca of the lands to the second defendant, who turned the plaintiff out of possession before the term of the zur-i-peshgi lease had expired. Plaintiff then sued the first and second defendants, basing his cause of action on the dispossession by the second defendant, and praying for the recovery of the mortgage-money by sale of the mortgaged property. The suit was dismissed, the Judge observing that plaintiff's proper remedy was to bring a suit for possession. The purchaser of plot 155 sold it to A, who in 1873 sued the tenant of a portion of the land for rent. In this suit A prayed that it might be declared that he was the owner. The tenant alleged that B, the purchaser of plot 147, was the owner of the land in respect of which rent was sought to be recovered, and B was made a party to the suit. A. subsequently did bring a suit with that object against his coparceners, but allowed it to be dismissed against him for default. B now brought a suit against A and his coparceners for possession of A.'s share in such family property. After the death of the widow, her daughter sued the same defendant on behalf of her two minor sons, as being entitled in reversion to their grandfather's share, to recover the share which was the subject of the former suit. The defendant was summoned as a witness, but failed to attend. Held that the suit was not barred under section 2, Act VIII of 1859, as being res judicata, until it was shown that the former decree had been obtained after a fair trial of the right, so as to bind not only the widow but the reversioners. A second suit, on the same cause of action, was then brought in the Court of the Munsif, who again decided for the plaintiffs, but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the suit was prohibited by Bombay Regulation II of 1827, section 21. The High Court, on special appeal, reversed that decision, and remanded the suit; and the District Judge then threw out the claim, under section 2 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that the cause of action had already been heard and determined. In a second special appeal against this decision,—Held that the plaintiffs were not precluded from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action, and that the case came within the spirit of section 36 of Act VIII of 1859, as there being no express power given by the Code to reject a plaint after it had been registered by reason of the claim being improperly valued, the doing so ought to have only the same effect as if the plaint had been originally rejected DULLABH JOGI v NARAYAN LAKHU. ment, alleging that the note had been obtained by the plaintiff by fraud and false representation. Previously to the filing of the present suit by the plaintiff, the defendants had brought a suit against the plaintiff in which they prayed that the said promissory note might be delivered up to be cancelled. Their plaint in that suit contained allegations of fraud and want of consideration identical with those contained in their written statement in the present suit. The plaintiffs in the former suit (the present defendants) having failed to give security for costs, the suit was dismissed under section 381 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). It was now contended that the defendants were estopped from pleading, as a defence to the present suit, the fraud and want of consideration which had been alleged by them as plaintiffs in the former suit which had been dismissed. Held that the defence might be pleaded, and that the question of fraud and want of consideration was not res judicata within the meaning of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. The previous suit had been dismissed by reason of the plaintiffs' (the present defendants') failure to give security for costs; and a Court cannot be said to "hear and decide" a matter which it is relieved from hearing and deciding by the plaintiff's default. Under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) a defendant may be precluded from pleading as a defence matter which is res judicata. Quare,—Whether a plaintiff, whose suit has been dismissed under section 381, can again litigate the subject-matter of the dismissed suit. *RUNGEAV RAVJI v. The suit was dismissed "in the form in which it was brought" because the plaintiff had not filed with the plaint the sale-certificate. K subsequently brought a fresh suit. Held that the dismissal of the former suit "in the form it was brought" did not amount to permission to sue again contemplated by section 373 of the Civil Procedure Code, and such dismissal must be regarded as a "decision" thereof in the sense of section 13, explanation III, and therefore as a bar to the fresh suit. *GANESH RAI v. The suit was dismissed "in its present form" (bahastiyat maujudat), upon two grounds,—first, with reference to section 10 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), that the suit was undervalued and the plaintiff had failed to pay, within the time fixed, additional court fees required by the Court; and, secondly, for misjoinder. The purchaser subsequently brought a second suit. Held that the dismissal of the former suit was not, under the circumstances, a decision within the meaning of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code such as could bar the second suit by way of res judicata. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The object of section 10, and indeed of the whole of the Court Fees Act, is to lay down rules for the collection of one form of taxation, and the rule that statutes which impose pecuniary burdens or encroach upon, or qualify the rights of, the subject, must be strictly construed, applies with special force to such provisions of the Act as provide a penalty, whatever its nature may be. Section 10 is simply a penal clause to enforce the collection of the court fees, and dismissal of a suit under its provisions cannot operate as res judicata. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The condition in section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the former suit must have been "heard and finally decided," means that a former judgment proceeding wholly on a technical defect or irregularity, and not upon the merits, is not a bar to a subsequent suit for the same cause of action. It is not every decree or judgment which will operate as res judicata, and every dismissal of a suit does not necessarily bar a fresh action. It is necessary also to show that there was a decision finally granting or withholding the relief sought. Ramnath Roy Chowdhry v Bhagbut Mohapatra, 3 W. R., Act X, 140; *Shokhee Bewah v. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The words bahausiyat maujuda must be taken as amounting to a permission to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit, within the meaning of section 373 of the Civil Procedure Code, and could only mean that the Judge using them in his decree had no intention to decide the case finally, so as to bar the adjudication upon the merits of the rights of the parties in a future litigation between them. The procedure provided by Chapter XXII of the Code is not the only manner in which a plaintiff can come into Court for the second time to ask for adjudication upon the merits of his rights, which were not adjudicated upon on the former occasion owing to some technical defect which proved fatal to the former suit. *Ganesh Ray v. In 1880 plaintiff sued defendants for money due on account of a partnership entered into on 12th July 1876, for the sale of salt, and continued down to the end of 1878. Held that the plaintiff, having failed to prove in the former suit that any partnership existed between him and the defendants, was barred from bringing the present suit. *SAMARAPURI CHETTI v. 78. — Refusal to execute decree.—Reopening questions by successor to Judge who decided them—On an application being made for the execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor made three objections to its execution. The first of these objections the Court executing the decree, the Subordinate Judge, allowed, and refused to execute the decree. On appeal by the decree holder, the District Judge disallowed all three such objections, holding that the decree should be executed, and remanded the case for that purpose. When the case came back to the Subordinate Judge, the judgment-debtor again raised the second and third of such objections, but the Subordinate Judge refused to entertain them, on the ground that they had already been determined by such District Judge. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, the successor of such District Judge ordered the Subordinate Judge to determine all three such objections. Held that such succeeding Judge could not reopen such questions, his predecessor having already finally determined them, and his predecessor's order, so far as such application for execution of the decree was concerned, was final. BALLABH SHANKAR v NABAIN SINGH I. decision that an application for execution is not time-barred has a similar effect. On the 15th April 1868 the plaintiff applied for the execution of a decree held by him against the defendant, and certain houses were thereupon attached. In April 1869 the attachment was raised on the intervention of a third person. The plaintiff then brought a suit to establish his right to attach the houses, and obtained a decree on the 28th February 1871. An appeal was made, and the suit was finally decided in the plaintiff's favour in April 1873. After the plaintiff had obtained his original decree, and while the appeal was pending, he applied for the sale of the houses in execution on the 30th November 1871, and subsequently made three other applications within three years of each other, the last of which was dated the 30th October 1876. The Court rejected this last application on the 28th November 1876, on the ground that the execution of the decree was barred, as more than three years had elapsed between the first and second applications (i.e., the applications of the 15th April 1868 and 30th November 1871). The plaintiff appealed against the order, but his appeal was rejected because he had failed to produce with it a copy of the order appealed against. The plaintiff took no further steps in that proceeding, but made a fresh application for execution on the 10th August 1878. The Subordinate Judge rejected it, on the ground that the execution was barred, the matter being res judicata. On appeal the District Judge reversed that order and allowed execution. On appeal to the High Court,—Held, on the authority of Mungul Peishad Dicht v. Gya Kant Lahiri Chowdhry, 1 L. R. 8 Cal. 51, that the rule of res judicata applied, and that the application of the 30th November 1871 was time-barred, and, a fortiori, every subsequent application was barred. Semble.—A proceeding in execution is a proceeding which terminates in a decree as defined by section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), and is, therefore, a suit within the meaning of the Code *MANJUNATH BADRABHAT v. Order as to possession and mesne profits—Subsequent suit for possession.—Certain lands having been divided under a butwara between A and B, who together took one portion, and C, who took the remainder, A, in 1847 mortgaged his share to B under a usufructuary mortgage. In 1851 a dispute arose as to the boundaries under the butwara, and ended in C surrendering 51½ bighas, which B. was allowed to take possession of under an ikramamah executed by A to secure the costs incurred by B. in the dispute. In 1874 A. sued to recover possession of a moiety of the lands held jointly by him with B., and in 1875 obtained a decree for possession and wasilat, no specific mention of the 51½ bighas being made in the decree. In execution of the decree, wasilat in respect of a moiety of the 51½ bighas was allowed, an objection by the defendant to such wasilat being charged having been overruled. In 1878 B. sued to recover possession of the moiety of the 51½ bighas, which had been taken by A under his decree. Held that, in rejecting the objection raised by B, and allowing wasilat in respect of the 51½ bighas, the Court had interpreted the decree passed, and declared that under it possession of a moiety of the 51½ bighas had been decreed and given to A, and that the suit instituted in 1878 was therefore barred. Held, also, that this matter having been decided under section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, between the parties in execution of a decree, could not be made the subject of a suit.

82. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s 230—Limitation.—Vatandars (Bom.) Act, III of 1874, s 10.—Collector's certificate.—A decree of a District Court, dated 5th October 1863, declared the plaintiff to be a hereditary deputy vatandar of a certain desh-pande vatan vested in the ancestors of the defendant as hereditary vatandars, and that the plaintiff, as such deputy, was entitled to receive a certain sum annually out of the income of the vatan. The decree did not explicitly deal with the claim to future payments then set up by the plaintiff as hereditary deputy vatandar. The plaintiff received moneys from time to time under the decree until 1875, but he neglected to have himself registered as a representative vatandar under Bombay Act III of 1874, section 56. In 1875 he made a claim for certain arrears of the allowance which he alleged to be due under the decree, and he attached certain moneys out of the income of the defendant's vatan. The Collector issued a certificate under section 10 of the Vatandars Act (III of 1874) for the removal of the attachment, and the attachment was accordingly removed by the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiff appealed from the order of removal, but the Appellate Court confirmed that order. On second appeal to the High Court, it was held on 23rd June 1879 that the lower Courts were right in raising the attachment, that the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to register the plaintiff as a representative vatandar, and that the Collector was the proper authority to be referred to. Thereupon the plaintiff applied to the Collector to cancel the certificate which had removed the attachment, and to register him as a representative vatandar. The Collector rejected the plaintiff's application on 31st March 1881. In 1881 the plaintiff presented a fresh dakhast to attach the same vatan property in virtue of the said decree of 1863, but the application was rejected as res judicata by both the lower Courts. They held that the certificate of the Collector, which remained uncanceled, operated as a bar. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held, reversing the order of the lower Courts, that the decree was one capable of execution. Held, as regards the Collector's certificate, that under section 10 of the Vatandars Act (Bombay), III of 1874, the certificate was exhausted

The suit was rejected, as it was proved that (though the plaintiff was the heir of F) F's guardian had mortgaged the land for necessary purposes to C, the two defendants A and B being merely tenants of C. The plaintiff then sued C for redemption of the mortgaged premises. Held that the second suit was not barred under section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that the fact of the document under which C held the land being described in the Court's judgment in the earlier suit as an instrument of sale, was not conclusive in the second suit as to the real nature of the instrument. *VALLABH BHULA v. OOMANATH ROY CHOWDHRY v. RAGHOONATH MITTER . . . Marsh., 43: W. R., F. B., 10
[1 Hay, 75]

96. ———— Subsequent suit in which same question arose.—Where a Court in a former suit against the present plaintiffs to set aside a mortgage decided that the mortgage as to a certain share of the property was invalid, although it was not a matter for adjudication then before the Court, —Held that that decision was no bar to a subsequent suit for recovery of the mortgage debt as to that share, and that the question of the genuineness or otherwise of the mortgage by defendants to plaintiffs was open to be decided on the merits. BUSTEE RAM v. NEWAZ SINGH 2 Agra, 62

97. ———— Decision as to validity of document.—Matter in issue.—Defence not relied on.—A suit was brought by A. to recover property, in which, on appeal to the Privy Council, two questions arose, —viz, whether the property was to pass as divided or undivided property, and whether such property was conveyed away to A's father by a deed of testamentary disposition. The lower Court had decided only the latter point, and the Privy Council remanded the case for determination of the former point. On a second appeal to the Privy Council, that Committee were about to enter upon the question as to the validity of the testamentary paper, when A. gave up the point that the paper was in any sense testamentary in its character, and disclaimed having any title under it as a testamentary devise, and the Privy Council therefore did not decide that question. Held that a subsequent suit by A, in which he sought to recover the property by setting up the paper as a valid will and testament, was a suit instituted without bona fides, and could not be allowed to proceed, because the nature of the paper was in issue in the former suit, and what was in issue must be taken to have been decided by the judgment. *RAGHOONADHA PERYA OODYA TAYER v. 98. ———— Deed of sale or mortgage.—Parties.—Question decreed in former suit.—R obtained, on the 7th January 1862, a decree declaring a deed of sale in his favour, dated the 7th January 1854, to be a genuine, authentic, and valid instrument. The question whether the sale was changed into a conditional sale or mortgage by an agreement entered into by him with the vendors on the same day that the deed of sale was executed, could not be raised by any of the parties to that suit or their representatives in a suit brought by R. to obtain proprietary possession of the subject of the sale, in virtue of the deed and the decree DHUNDI v. RAM LAL 7 N. W., 149

99. ———— Suit for possession under deed of gift.—Subsequent suit by heir of donor to set aside deed of gift as invalid.—G executed a deed of gift of his whole property in favour of J. J. sued for possession and obtained a decree. On the death of G., his heir sued to set aside the deed of gift, alleging that, notwithstanding the decree, J did not obtain possession till after the death of G., and that the deed of gift was, under the Imames law, invalid. Held that this might have been a good defence on the part of G to the suit brought against him by J, but that after the decision of that suit, it was not open to G. to dispute the title of J., nor was it now open for his heir to do so. FURZUND ALI v. JAFFEREE BEBEE 5 N. W., 118

100. ———— Deed of gift.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 2—Matter not determined in former suit—Suit on different cause of action.—M. brought a suit to obtain her share of the entire property of A, her deceased father. It was pleaded, with respect to a certain portion of the property, that A. had made it over by parol gift to his minor son. The case came before the High Court on special appeal, when it was contended on behalf of M., the appellant, that the gift was not proved, and that some portion of the property was “mush’a” (undivided), and the gift in regard to it invalid. The High Court refused to allow the last plea, which had not been taken in the Court of first instance, to be taken in appeal, the point raised being one of fact, and as the gift had been established by evidence, dismissed the appeal. F., the purchaser of the rights and interests in A.’s estate of W., a defendant in the suit, brought a suit against his vendor, M., and the guardian of the minor, to obtain possession of the property conveyed by the sale in which property affected by the gift was included, and claimed the setting aside of the gift because a portion of the property conveyed by it was undivided. Held that his suit was not barred by section 2 of Act VIII of 1859. IMAMAN v. FAZUL KARIM 7 N. W., 251

101. ———— Suit for same object on different cause of action—Decision in former suit.—Plaintiff, claiming as grandson of one S. M., the only undivided brother of S., sought to recover half of the village sold by S. to first defendant’s father in 1855, the village having been (as alleged) family property, and sold without the consent of plaintiff’s father, who succeeded his father, S. M., and not for family purposes. In a former suit (No 3 of 1855), brought by the plaintiff’s father against S and R., the father of the present first defendant, and the present second defendant, the paternal nephew of the first defendant, for possession of the whole of the family property belonging to him and S. as coparceners, and to rescind the sale to R., the plaintiff stated, amongst other things, that

S. was imbecile; and that the sale-deed was obtained by taking a fraudulent advantage of his imbecility, and that it was invalid as being made without plaintiff’s consent. The Court decided that S was “both physically and mentally qualified to manage, and legally competent to deal with the estate, supposing it to be undivided, to the extent of his own share,” and dismissed the suit. In 1862 the plaintiff again sued the present defendant for the whole of the village on the same ground of imbecility and fraud. The Civil Court decided that the suit was barred by the decree in the first suit, and on appeal the decree was affirmed. Held that the present cause of action,—namely, the plaintiff’s right as coparcener to a moiety of the property, and the invalidity of the instrument of sale to pass that right to the defendant,—was not res judicata. CHINNIYA MUDALI v. VENKATACHELLA PILLAI 3 Mad., 320

102. ———— Former suit on same cause of action.—Suits stating different grounds for right to succeed to estate.—Plaintiff sued to recover a zemindari from his step brother, alleging that the zemindari was hereditary property belonging to the family, the succession thereto being governed by the law of primogeniture; that his father died in 1859, leaving the plaintiff, defendant, and another, his sons, the former by the first wife, and the latter two by the second wife, and that the defendant (respondent) unlawfully enjoyed the estate, while plaintiff, as the eldest son, had a legal claim thereto. In defence it was pleaded that the claim was res judicata by the decree in a suit which was brought by plaintiff to obtain a declaration of his status as the son of his father’s pattaba stri, or royal wife, in which suit the plaintiff’s father was first defendant, and defendant’s mother was second defendant, and wherein they both denied that plaintiff was son of the pattaba stri and affirmed that second defendant was first defendant’s first wife, and that her sons were preferential heirs to the zemindari. Among the points recorded was for “plaintiff to prove his status and right as alleged,” and that issue was set down for defendants to rebut. The Judge disbelieved that plaintiff was the son of his father’s first wife, and added, “Plaintiff further pleads that he is the eldest son, a position not denied, but one which cannot confer on him the status he now claims.” The Judge decided that plaintiff had failed to prove that his mother was the pattaba stri, and that he was heir to the exclusion of second defendants’ sons. On appeal to the Sudder Adawlat the decree below was confirmed and the Court made the following observation: “It has been attempted at the hearing of the appeal to maintain the plaintiff’s right to succeed as being the eldest son. This, however, was not the position taken in the Court below, where the succession was allowed to depend on another circumstance,—namely, the mother being the pattaba stri, and the Court, therefore, held the argument to be an inadmissible one.” Held, on appeal, that the present suit was barred by res judicata, a different

103. ——— Suit for enhancement of rent.—Subsequent suit for admitted rent—A suit for enhanced rent after notice having been dismissed on appeal, plaintiff sued to recover rent for the same year at the rate admitted by the defendant in the former suit. Held that the cause of action in the subsequent suit was not the same as in the former, and that the law of res judicata did not apply in bar. KHEDARONISSA BIBEE v. BOODHEE BIBEE

[13 W. R., 317]

104. ——— Suit for rent against same tenant as in former suit.—Decision in former suit.—A and B were co-sharers in a certain talook to the extent of 7 annas and 4 annas respectively. B. died in 1868, and in 1872 A., who used to collect the rents on behalf of B., brought a suit against one of the ryots for the rent of the 11 annas. An issue having been raised as to the extent of A.'s share, omitting that of B., it was decided to be 7 annas only, and he got a decree accordingly. In a subsequent suit by A.'s widow against the same tenant for the rent due for the 11 annas share,—Held that the decision in the former suit did not debar her from showing that she was entitled to the rent due on account of B.'s 4 annas share. SHAMADANISSA BEEBEE v. FERA-SUTOOLLAH SIRDAR. 2 C. L. R., 23

105. ——— Claim as heir to property as joint and undivided.—Subsequent claim as reversioner on death of widow—A, a brother's son, in 1847 claimed, on the ground that he had title as heir to the moiety of an estate, prior to the other brother's widow, on the plea that it was joint and undivided, and that suit was dismissed. In a subsequent suit accepting the decision of 1847, and regarding the widow's title to be prior to his, and as holding a life interest in the whole estate before him, A. claimed as heir next in reversion after the widow, regarding her property as separate, with a view to a declaration of his right as such heir to have a certain alienation by the widow (alleged by him to be illegal under Hindu law) set aside. Held that the two cases and causes of action were essentially different. SUNKUR DYAL SINGH v. PURMESSUR DYAL SINGH. 6 W. R., 44

106. ——— Dismissal of former suit to set aside assignments.—Subsequent suit for possession by reversioner—C., the reversioner expectant in the life interest of a Hindu widow, instituted a suit in her lifetime to set aside sales of the estate. It had first been sold in execution of a decree against the widow and purchased by A., and then for arrears of revenue due by A. and had been purchased by B.; but this suit was dismissed under Act I of 1845, section 24, on the ground that more than a year had elapsed since the sale for arrears of revenue. After the death of the widow, the reversioner sued B. for recovery of possession of the lands. Held that the plaintiff was not barred by the dismissal of the suit instituted in the lifetime of the widow, the object of that suit being to set aside the assignments of the widow's interest, and not for the assertion of the plaintiff's right to the reversion. DOORGA CHURN v. KASSY CHUNDEE MOITREE

[Marsh., 539: 2 Hay, 646]

107. ——— Suit to set aside alienation by widow.—Subsequent suit to recover property as reversioner—A widow (a life-tenant of an ancestral estate), having executed an ikrar transferring a share to N., her granddaughter, afterwards sued to set it aside on the ground that N. had not conformed to its terms. While the suit was in the appeal stage the widow died, and her reversioner applied to be made, and was admitted as, her kaem mukam, to carry on the appeal on her behalf. He afterwards sued to recover possession of the share as reversioner, alleging that the succession opened out to him on the death of the widow. Held that the causes of action in the two suits were different, and that it was not necessary for the reversioner, when he took up the widow's case in its appeal stage, to disclose his title and claim as reversioner, as he was not competent then to introduce any pleas arising out of a new state of facts not existing when the suit was instituted. DEORANEL KOOWAR v. INDURJEET KOOWAR

108. ——— Dismissal of suit to establish plaintiff's adoption.—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Representation of estate by Hindu widow—Decree in favour of widow—Admission by widow subsequent to decree.—In 1877, S., claiming to be the adopted son of M., sued A., the widow of M., to recover his estate. A. denied the adoption. S. failing to adduce any evidence, the suit was dismissed under section 158 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. In 1882, by an agreement made between A. and S., A. acknowledged the title of S. as adopted son of M. A. having died, a suit was brought against S. by a reversioner of M. to recover the estate of M. Held that S. was estopped by the decree in the former suit from setting up his claim as adopted son against the plaintiff, and that the subsequent agreement between A. and S. did not affect plaintiff's right. ARUNACHALA v. PANCHANADAM

110. ————— Deed inadmissible as being unregistered—Subsequent suit on registered bond—I., to whom the obligee of a bond for the payment of money in which immoveable property was hypothecated had assigned by sale her right thereunder, sued in virtue of the deed of sale on such bond for the money due thereunder, claiming to recover by the sale of the hypothecated property. This suit was dismissed on the ground that the deed of sale, not being registered, could not be received in evidence, and consequently I.'s right to sue on such bond failed. I., having procured the execution of a fresh deed of sale and caused it to be registered, brought a second suit on such bond in virtue of such deed of sale, claiming as before. Held that the second suit was not barred by the provisions of section 13 of Act X of 1877. ISHRI DAT v. HAR NARAIN LAL . . . I. L. R., 3 All., 384

111. ————— Dismissal of suit for amount due on document—Subsequent suit for same amount—The defendants and two others jointly executed a document (A), whereby they promised, on the 27th April 1874, to pay to the plaintiff Rs25 at the end of April 1875, and also to give to the plaintiff, in April 1875, a certain quantity of gram by way of interest. Held in a suit on the document (KERNAN, J., dissenting) that the suit was not barred by the dismissal of a suit in 1877 in which the plaintiff sued the defendants for a proportionate amount due by them under the document (A), alleging a verbal promise by the defendants, in November 1876, to pay such proportionate amount. 112. ————— Suit for sum due on mortgage—Decisions in former suits for interest—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 13—Sale of mortgaged property in execution of decree—Certain immoveable property was mortgaged to R. and then sold to N. It was then brought to sale in execution of a decree against N. and was purchased by H. The balance of the sale-proceeds after satisfaction of that decree was paid to N. Under the terms of the mortgage to R. interest on the principal amount was payable annually, and its payment was charged on the property as well as the payment of the principal amount. The mortgagors having failed to pay the interest annually, R. in 1875 sued them and N. and H. to recover the interest due. It was decided in that suit that N. was primarily and personally liable for the interest then due on the mortgage, as he had received the sale-proceeds of the property, and that the property was only liable in case he failed to satisfy the claim. N. subsequently paid into Court the sale-proceeds he had received and R. was paid the same. In 1878 R. again sued the same persons for interest and again N. was declared primarily and personally liable, on the ground that he had not at once made over the sale-proceeds to R. In 1880 R. sued the same persons to recover the principal amount and interest due on the mortgage, by the sale of the mortgaged property. Held that, whatever might have been the rights and relations of the parties so long as any portion of the sale-proceeds remained with N., their position towards him assumed an entirely different character when once he had discharged himself of those moneys, and with this change in the situation the ratio decidendi of the suits of 1875 and 1878 no longer existed, and therefore the decisions in those suits did not preclude R. from bringing a suit to recover the principal and interest due on his mortgage from the mortgaged property. 113. ————— Suit declaring right to redemption—Subsequent suit by representative for redemption—Where D. sued for redemption, and obtained a conditional decree, and subsequently the plaintiff sued D. to establish his right to the mortgaged property and obtained a decree,—Held that a suit by the plaintiff for redemption was not barred by section 2, Act VIII of 1859. 114. ————— Dismissal of suit for ejectment—Subsequent suit for redemption—Failure in a suit of simple ejectment does not bar a subsequent suit for redemption, notwithstanding that the defendant had asserted the existence of his mortgage in the former suit. 115. ————— Suit for redemption—Issue as to sale of equity of redemption—Subsequent suit under a different title for same object—In 1870 the plaintiffs sued to redeem a mortgage of certain lands from the defendants' predecessors in title. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiffs' equity of redemption had been sold in execution of a decree to A. B. The plaintiffs having repurchased the equity of redemption from A. B., brought a second suit to redeem the lands in the defendants' possession. Held that the question whether the equity of redemption of the lands in suit had been sold to A. B. was res judicata and could not be reopened by the defendants on the ground that the plaintiffs were litigating under a different title in the former suit. 116. ————— Foreclosure in the Central Provinces—By a bond, dated 10th February 1857, a certain village was mortgaged by one G. to the appellants and their father as security for a loan, the bond providing that, "if I fail to pay the money as stipulated, I and my heirs shall, without objection, cause the settlement of the said village to be made with you." The interest of G. in the village was described as that of a malguzar, and his proprietary right therein was declared by the revenue authorities shortly after the execution of the mortgage; but his payments of revenue being in arrear, the Board of Revenue granted a lease of the village for ten years to the appellants' father. The mortgagees in a suit on the bond obtained the following decree [on 3rd November 1860] "As the defendant acknowledges the plaintiffs' claim, it is ordered that a decree be given to the plaintiffs for principal and interest and costs against the defendant and the mortgaged property." In proceedings in the Civil Court taken under this decree, the mortgagees asked for possession of the village, and obtained, on 17th July 1862, an order, in pursuance of which they were put in possession, an appeal by G. being rejected. G. took various steps to recover possession of the mortgaged property, or a declaration of his proprietary interest therein, but failed in his endeavours, an application for a grant of the proprietary right in the village, and an appeal from an order cancelling his pottah, being rejected by the revenue authorities, on 8th December 1864 and 27th July 1865, respectively; and on 12th August 1867 G. conveyed the village by deed of sale to the respondents. In a suit brought by them to redeem the mortgage and obtain possession of the property,—Held, the suit was not barred by the order of the Civil Court of 17th July 1862, nor had the orders of the revenue officers of 8th December 1864 and 27th July 1865 effected such a transfer of any right which G. might have had to the appellants as to render the sale to the respondents invalid. *GOKULDASS v. 117. ———— Limitation —

Declaratory mortgage-decree for redemption not executed for 15 years—In 1866 S. obtained a decree authorising him to recover certain property on payment of a certain sum to the mortgagee, but not declaring that S. would be foreclosed if he did not exercise his right of redemption,—Held that S. was not debarred from bringing a suit to redeem the same property in 1881. *SAMI ACHARI v. 118. ———— Decree for redemption.—Second suit to redeem.—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 244—A decree obtained by a mortgagor, which declared that the mortgagee should deliver up possession on payment of the sum found due to him, not having been executed for three years, a purchaser of the equity of redemption sued the mortgagee to redeem. Held that this suit was not barred by the former decree and that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem. *Sami v. 119. ———— Omission to direct foreclosure—Neglect to redeem.—Second suit to redeem—Hindu family—Suit by manager in his own name—Representative character—Practice—Parties.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 50—In 1856 V., a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued the defendants, and obtained a decree for the redemption of certain immoveable property, but the decree was never executed. At the date of that suit V. was the manager of the family, consisting of himself and the plaintiff N who was then a minor. The decree did not provide for the foreclosure of the mortgage in the event of V. failing to redeem. In 1878 N brought another suit to redeem the same property. The Lower Court held that as the former decree did not direct foreclosure, the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee continued between the parties, and that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by the former decree. The defendant appealed. Held (PINHEY, J., dissentiente), reversing the decree of the Lower Court, that the plaintiff's suit was barred. A decree for redemption, on the default of the decree-holder to pay the money declared to be due within the time fixed by the decree, or if none be fixed, within the time allowed by the law for the execution of the decree, operates as a judgment of foreclosure, and debars the mortgagor from afterwards bringing a second suit to redeem the same property. *GAN SAVANT BAL SAVANT v. 121. ———— Dismissal of suit for rent.—Subsequent suit for possession—A suit for rent, in which the sole defendant denied the plaintiff's title, alleging that B. and A. were his landlords, having been dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove his title, another suit was brought by the plaintiff against A., B., and C. for possession. Held that the suit was barred under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. *GOPAL DASS v. 126. ————— Suit for khas possession—The plaintiffs, as talookdars, brought a suit against their tenant M for recovery of rent at enhanced rates of land held by him, as to two cottahs of which he denied that they were part of his holding, but alleged that they were part of the lakhraj holding of one H, and H intervened in that suit and claimed the two cottahs as lakhraj. The result of that suit was that the rent was assessed on the land admitted by M to be in his possession, excluding the two cottahs. The plaintiffs then brought a suit against H for a declaration that these two cottahs were their māl lands, and obtained a decree simply declaring their māl rights over the land in dispute. In a suit brought by the plaintiffs against H after serving him with notice to quit, for recovery of khas possession of the two cottahs with mesne profits, and praying that he might be ordered to remove a mud house erected by him on the land, the defence was that as the plaintiffs had already claimed khas possession and obtained a decree simply declaring their right to receive rent, the suit was barred, and that as H had been twenty years in possession and had erected a house without any opposition from the plaintiffs, they had no right now to sue for khas possession. Held that the suit was not barred by section 2, Act VIII of 1859, and the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for khas possession. *ESHAN CHUNDER GHOSE v. 127. ————— Suit for declaratory decree. —Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13 —Dismissal of suit for declaratory decree and to have deed set aside.—Subsequent suit for possession with respect to same property and to set aside same deed—In December 1878 H, a Hindu widow, in possession, by way of maintenance, of a certain estate, of which R owned one-third, and P, B, and S one third jointly, made a gift thereof, to N. H died in January 1879. In February 1879 R and P, B, and S joined in suing N for a declaration of their proprietary right to two thirds of the estate and to have the deed of gift set aside. The Court trying this suit treated it as one for a mere declaration of right, and dismissed it with reference to the provisions of section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, on the ground that the plaintiffs had omitted to sue for possession although they were not in possession and were able to sue for it. In November 1879 R and P, B, and S again joined in suing N. In this suit they claimed possession of two thirds of the estate and to have the deed of gift set aside. Held by the Full Bench (reversing the judgment of PEARSON, J, and affirming that of OLD-FIELD, J) that the decision in the former suit was no bar to the determination in the second suit of the question as to the validity of the deed of gift. *RAM SEWAK SINGH v. 130. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—Instalment-bond.—Hypothecation.—Declaratory decree—In 1864 the obligee of an instalment-bond, in which certain immoveable property was hypothecated as collateral security for the payment of the instalments, brought a suit upon such bond "against Z and A. (the obligors) and the property hypothecated in the bond, defendants," claiming to recover instalments which were due and unpaid, and a declaration of his right to recover instalments which were not due, as they fell due. He obtained a decree in such suit for "the amount claimed" against the "two defendants." It was also provided in such decree that, "until the satisfaction of the entire amount of the bond, the plaintiff can realise the amount of each instalment by executing this decree." The obligee applied in execution of such decree to recover, by the sale of such property, which had passed into the hands of third parties after the passing of such decree, instalments which had become due after the passing of such decree, and had not been paid. Such execution having been refused on the ground that such decree was a money decree, the obligee brought a second suit upon such bond to recover such instalments by the enforcement of the lien therein created on such property. Held that, although the enforcement of such lien was claimed in the former suit, yet, inasmuch as it was very questionable whether the Court was competent to grant the second relief claimed in that suit, viz., a declaration of right to recover instalments which were not due in execution of a decree for instalments which were due, and the claim in the second suit was not the same as that in the former suit, the plaintiff asking for instalments said to be actually due, and not for a declaratory decree for instalments not due, the second suit was not barred by section 13 of Act X of 1877. *UMBAO LAL v. VIII of 1859, that defendants' admission, which was merely an admission in plaintiffs' favour, gave no new cause of action; and that if the Courts failed to decide all the matters in dispute which they had before them in the former suit, their judgment could not be revised in a new suit, such revision being contrary to the provisions of section 3, Act VIII of 1859. *GHASEE KHAN v. The defendant also claimed it as his share obtained by partition. The Court rejected the plaintiff's claim, holding that no partition had taken place, and that the field was the joint property of five coparceners, including the plaintiff and defendant. In 1878 the plaintiff brought a second suit for a partition of the field, including the portion for which his former suit had been instituted. Held that the present suit for partition was not barred by the previous suit which was brought to establish the plaintiff's sole right to the lands in question. *SHIVRAM v. 134. ————— Former suit for declaration of right to partition.—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), s. 2.—A Hindu of the Southern Maratha Country having two sons undivided from him, died in 1871, leaving a will disposing of ancestral estate substantially in favour of his second son, excluding the elder who claimed his share in this suit. In 1861, a suit brought by this elder son against his father and brother to obtain a declaration of his right to a partition of the ancestral estate was dismissed, on the ground that he had no right in his father's lifetime to compel a partition of moveables; and that as to the immoveables, the claim failed, because they were situate beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. In a suit by the elder son against his brother after the father's death for a share of the property on the ground that it was ancestral estate, Held that this suit was not barred under Act VIII of 1859, section 2; the proceedings of 1861 not having amounted to an adjudication between the brothers as to their rights in the estate arising on their father's death. *LAKSHMAN DADA NAIK v. Commission, and no actual partition was cometo. In 1873, A obtained a decree for an account, and for payment, or in default for sale of the property. In 1878, B's share was put up for sale, and purchased by C and C was put into possession. In 1881, C brought a suit against A for partition. Held that the decree obtained by A in 1873 put an end to B's right to redeem, unless he paid the amount found due against him, and therefore at the time of the sale to C, B's right to redeem had ceased to exist, and the property was no longer subject to partition under the decree of 1870, and therefore the partition asked for under the suit of 1881 could be granted.

136. ————— Decree in former suit for partition — Partial and general partition. — Account. — In a previous suit between the plaintiff and the defendant, the plaintiff alleged that there had been a partition of the family property into two parcels, and, under a deed of partition drawn up at the time, claimed one of these parcels. The deed being held invalid, the suit was rejected, with liberty to the plaintiff to sue for a general partition. In the second suit the plaintiff prayed for a general partition as a member of an undivided Hindu family. Held that the second suit was not res judicata, for, although the plaintiff might in the first suit have made an alternative case and prayed for a general partition in case he failed to establish the previous partition which he alleged, yet it could not be said that he ought to have done so. Held, also, that in the case of joint enjoyment by the members of the whole family, or enjoyment by different members of different portions of the family property, the Court will not, except under special circumstances, order an account to be taken of past transactions, but will make division of the property actually existing at the date of partition. Lakshman Dada Nark v Ramchandra Dada Nark, I. 145. ——— Suit for ejectment based on alleged lease—Subsequent suit to eject tenant as trespasser founded on ownership—The present plaintiffs in 1869 sued the present defendants to eject the latter from a certain piece of land, alleging that the defendants held it under certain leases dated July 1864. The genuineness of the alleged leases was put in issue in that suit and was decided by the Subordinate Judge in favour of the plaintiffs, who accordingly obtained a decree. On appeal the District Judge reversed that decree, being of opinion that the alleged leases were not proved. In 1874 the plaintiffs brought the present suit to eject the defendants. In this suit the plaintiffs sued simply as owners, and alleged that the defendants were in occupation as tenants paying rent to the plaintiffs, and that they (the defendants) had refused to give up possession. Held (MELVILL, J., dissentiente) that the plaintiffs were not barred by the judgment in the former suit. The fact of both the suits being against the defendants as tenants of the plaintiffs did not imply that the suits were on the same cause of action. The term "tenancy" may be applied to a great many different relations between the occupier and the owner of property, agreeing perhaps only in the single circumstance of a holding by the one of the property of the other. The test in each case is, not whether a tenancy has in both suits been sued on, but whether the particular contract or relation put forward in the first case was the same specific contract sued on in the second. A cause of action reduced to the concrete form in a contest between individuals implied a specific right and a specific infringement of the right; and a judgment that one such specific right had not been made out, was not a trial and determination of a cause of action resting on another specific right. The specific rights on which the plaintiffs relied in the two suits were different, and would have to be proved by different evidence. GIEDHAR MANOERAS v DI YABHAI KALABHAI. . . . I. L. cedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11.—On the 30th June 1855, S., a Langayat priest, died possessed of moveable and immoveable property. The right of succession to it being disputed, the District Judge placed it under the management of the nazir, under Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827, section 9. In 1869, B., representing himself as the disciple of S., and claiming, as such, to be entitled to the whole of the property left by S., brought a suit (No 962 of 1869) against the defendant to establish his right to the property in question, and to recover possession of it. The suit was compromised by an agreement, upon which the Court passed a decree on the 23rd March 1870, dividing the property of S. in certain shares between B. and the defendant. When B. and the defendant applied for possession of the property in execution of this decree, the nazir, who had it in his charge, resisted them. The execution proceedings dropped in consequence of the death of B. The plaintiff thereupon (as a disciple of B., deceased), and the defendant sued the nazir separately, each claiming the whole property of S. The plaintiff's suit was rejected on the ground that he failed to prove himself the disciple of B. In that suit the plaintiff produced neither the compromise made between B. and the defendant, nor the decree passed on it in suit No. 962 of 1869. The defendant succeeded in his suit, and obtained possession of the whole property. The plaintiff then sued, as the disciple of B., to recover from the defendant the portion of the property of S. which fell to the share of B. according to the compromise on which the decree in suit No. 962 of 1869 was made. Held by West, J., that the suit was barred, first, because the plaintiff had been judicially pronounced not to be the disciple of B. in his suit against the nazir to which the defendant was a party as the true successor or prima facie successor represented by the nazir in that suit. It was not open to those who had as heirs sued the official representative of an estate, and failed, to sue the owner, when ascertained, a second time on the same right. Secondly, because the plaintiff, in his suit against the nazir, was bound to bring forward every ground on which he could claim the property; and if the compromise effected by B. was such a ground, that compromise and the decree founded on it ought to have been brought forward to sustain the claim, as it would have shut out a ground of defence consisting of the defendant's superior right. As the plaintiff omitted to do so, the more recent decree, which pronounced him not entitled to any part of the property of S., superseded the earlier one, which ineffectually awarded B. a moiety of that property as against the person not in possession, and while that decree was unreversed, another decree could not be made awarding to the same plaintiff one-half of the same property in the same right as against the defendant whom the nazir represented in the earlier suit. Held by PINNEY, J., that the property claimed in the present suit had been specifically awarded to B. by the decree of the 23rd

March 1870, and if that decree were not time barred, B. or his legal representative could obtain possession by taking out execution proceedings on that decree. The present suit, therefore, was barred alike by section 2 of Act VIII of 1859 and section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, and the fact that execution of the decree in suit No. 962 of 1869 was time-barred did not confer on B., or any legal heir of his, a new right to sue for the estate of S. or any part of it.

It was decided that the villages had formed a mokasa jaghir from a date prior to that of the permanent settlement, and that, as they did not constitute a portion of the assets of the zemindari at the date of the settlement, there was no right of resumption. Pending those suits, an order was issued by Government which plaintiff construed as a transfer to him of the Government right in the villages, and he founded the present suit upon the lapse of the mokasa to Government, and the order transferring the right to him. Held that the present suit was not res judicata. 157. ——— Suit for right to share in ancestral property.—Cause of action different—Judgment in former suit.—A suit to establish the plaintiff's right to a share of ancestral property, part of which was in his sole possession, cannot operate as a res judicata in a subsequent suit to recover possession of a part of the ancestral property which was, as he alleges, in his sole possession, and from which he was forcibly evicted by the defendant during the pendency of that suit. HURONATH ROY v. GOOROO DOSS ROY. GOOROO DOSS ROY v. HURONATH ROY. . . . 7 W. R., 423

158. ——— Causes of action identical.—Title—Test for determination as to res judicata.—The plaintiff purchased certain lands from the heirs of a Mussulman proprietor the defendant M. purchased other lands of the same estate from their co-heirs. In 1864 the plaintiff sued to have the sale to the defendant M. set aside. In the course of the suit, however, he admitted that he was in possession of all the lands he had bought, and his claim was, therefore, rejected. In 1869 the plaintiff brought a suit, in the form of a partition-suit, praying for demarcation of the lands bought by the defendant M. and himself. It was treated as substantially an ejectment suit, and rejected on the same grounds as the first suit, namely, his admission as above stated. In appeal to the High Court it was urged by the plaintiff that, since the date of his admission in the first suit, some of his tenants had attorned to the defendant M., and thus deprived him of part of his land, but as this allegation had not been made in his plaint, the Court refused to allow the point to be raised. The present suit was founded on the attornment of plaintiff's tenants to the defendant M. alleged to have been made in 1868. The plaintiff contended that, although the cause of action was in existence when the second suit was brought in 1869, yet that it had not been adjudicated upon, and that in appeal he had been prevented from arguing it. Held that the plaintiff was estopped. The causes of action in the second and third suits were identical. Having striven to establish his title by one means and failed, the plaintiff could not establish the same title by other means which were equally at his command when the previous suit was instituted, and which were so connected with the grounds on which he in that suit relied, that they ought to have been submitted together for the consideration of the Court. In determining whether a question is res judicata, the Court will have regard to the substance of the previous suit rather than its form. If the cause of action is based on a right identical in both suits, or on the same group of facts infringing that right, the second suit is barred. HASAM IBRAHIM v. MANCHARAM KALIANDAS

159. ——— Suit for share of joint property under an agreement.—Subsequent suit as heir—A Hindu of the Sudra caste died in 1850, leaving him surviving his two widows, B and S, a son M, and daughter D the children, respectively, of B and S, and an illegitimate son, the plaintiff. The plaintiff and M continued to live together for some time after their father's death. But subsequently, owing to domestic quarrels, they lived separately, and the plaintiff was allowed by M, a portion of the family property, under an agreement in writing. They were, however, joint and undivided in estate, and continued to be so until the death of M in 1865. In 1866 the plaintiff brought a suit on the agreement, and obtained a decree against B, S, D, and R (a lessee of B) for the property mentioned in the agreement. In 1870 the plaintiff brought a second suit as heir of his father and brother, and claimed the whole of the ancestral property. Both the lower Courts rejected his claim as barred by the previous suit. Held in special appeal by MELVILL and NANABHAI HARIDAS, JJ., that the claim was not barred, inasmuch as the former suit was brought on the agreement, while the latter was instituted to establish plaintiff's general rights as heir of his father and brother. *SADU v. 160. ——— Suit on a family arrangement.—Second suit for the same subject-matter as co-sharers—Causes of action.—The defendant's great-grandfather was uncle of one B. H., who was the great-grandfather of the plaintiffs, and they (i.e., the defendant's great-grandfather and his nephew B. H.) were entitled in equal half shares to a certain vatan property. The defendant and his brothers now represented the former, and were entitled to his half share, and the plaintiffs represented the latter, and were entitled to his half share. The plaintiff's father, B. R., lived with the defendant and the defendant's brothers, M and K., as members of an undivided family up to the year 1845, in which year the plaintiffs' father, B. R., being then absent from the village, the defendant's brothers, M and K., executed a deed of partition whereby they divided the ancestral property into two equal shares, one half of which the plaintiff's father was to receive, the other half going to the defendant and his brothers. The deed, among other recitals, contained a clause to the effect that the plaintiff's father being then absent from the village, the defendant's brothers would manage his share during his absence, and on his return hand the same over to him on his paying the expenses incurred by them in such management. In 1873 the plaintiffs' undivided brother brought a suit against the defendant and others on an agreement alleged to have been executed between him (plaintiffs' brother) and the defendant and his brothers by which the said brothers had bound themselves to return one-third share to him (the plaintiffs' brother). This suit was dismissed as against the defendant, as he had not been a party to that agreement, and plaintiffs' brother was referred to a separate suit for partition against the defendant. The plaintiffs, therefore, now brought the present suit, claiming their share in the vatan estate. The defendant (inter alia) contended that the suit was barred as res judicata by the former suit, that neither the plaintiffs nor their forefathers had enjoyed the property during the previous 150 years, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Both the lower Courts allowed the plaintiffs' claim. The defendant preferred a second appeal to the High Court. Held, confirming the decree of the lower Court, that the former suit having been brought on an alleged agreement, it did not bar the present suit, which was based on the plaintiffs' hereditary right to sue as members of the family. *NILO RAMCHANDRA v. 174. ——— Attachment, Application to remove.—Removal of attachment unknown to applicant.—Failure of application.—Second attachment.—Second application to remove.—New cause of action.—The plaintiff, mortgagee in possession of certain property, applied for the removal of an attachment placed on it by the defendant in execution of a decree against a third party. In default of payment of court fees by the defendant the attachment was removed, but in ignorance of this fact the plaintiff's application was proceeded with, and ultimately rejected. The plaintiff then brought a suit for a declaration of his right, but it was dismissed, on the ground that the attachment had already been removed. Subsequently the defendant placed a second attachment on the property, which the plaintiff again applied to remove. The defendant contended that the plaintiff's application was barred by the proceedings on the first attachment. Held that the decision on the plaintiff's first application having no object existing on which to operate, the attachment having then been removed, it could not properly be regarded as res judicata at all, since no one was seriously interested in having it decided in a different way; and that supposing submission to that decision on the part of the plaintiff for a certain time could have given it a final effect, there had, as a matter of fact, been no such submission, the plaintiff having done all that was incumbent on him to get the summary inquiry and orders replaced by a formal trial and judgment and that there was nothing, therefore, in these proceedings disentitling the defendant to oppose the second attachment. Held, also, that the second attachment, after the first had been removed,

Held that there was no identity between the subjects of the two suits, and J.'s former suit for all that he was then entitled to sue for on the cause of action that he had on the attachment did not deprive him of his right to a fresh and independent judgment in the present case. The Judge decided the questions in issue (namely, of the factum of the contract and the authority of the person who executed it in A.'s behalf) in favour of B., and gave him a decree. On the 21st of April, a second suit was brought by B. against A. on the same contract. The claim was for damages sustained by the plaintiff by reason of A.'s having failed to supply straw as agreed from the 20th of February to the 17th April. That suit was dismissed, the Judge holding that the matter was res adjudicata, as he considered that the contract was an entire one, and that B. had shown by suing on it for general damages, that he treated it as such, and had elected to rescind it. On the 9th of May a rule nisi was granted for a new trial, and on the 16th of May the rule was made absolute. On the 12th June, at the new trial, a decree was made in favour of B. for so much of the damages claimed as had been sustained subsequently to the date of the decree of the 25th March. A second suit was then brought by the judgment-creditor against both sharers, for the purpose of making the share of the co sharers, who had not been previously sued, available to satisfy the defendant, and praying that the order releasing the property from attachment might be set aside. 186. ——— Suit to enforce lien on mortgaged property.—First and second mortgagees.—In 1870 M granted a certain person a lease of a certain zemindari share, for a term of years, at an annual rent, L, as the lessee's surety, hypothecating a mouzah called A as security for the payment of such rent. In 1871 L gave B a bond for the payment of certain moneys, hypothecating mouzah A as security for then payment. In 1872 and again in 1873 M obtained a decree in the Revenue Court against his lessee and L, his surety, for arrears of rent. In execution of the decree of 1872 M caused L's rights and interests in mouzah A to be put up for sale, and purchased them himself. In 1874 B sued L and M to enforce his lien on mouzah A. M defended this suit on the ground that he was the holder of a prior lien on the property. The Court gave B a decree in 1875, holding that he was entitled to an order for the sale of the property, but that it would be competent to M to sue to enforce his lien, and that, when he did so, the purchaser under B's decree would have the option of discharging the first incumbrance. The property was accordingly put up for sale in execution of B's decree, and was purchased by B himself. In 1876 M sued L and B to enforce his lien on the property, claiming to recover by the sale thereof the amount of the arrears of rent awarded by the decrees of 1872 and 1873, together with the costs awarded him in the Revenue Court, and interest. Held, affirming the judgment of STUART, C J., that the decree of 1875 did not preclude M from claiming to enforce his lien on mouzah A, nor was his claim affected by the circumstance that he had brought to sale in execution of the decree of the Revenue Court the rights and interests of L in that mouzah. All that was then sold was the equity of redemption, which was sold to satisfy the money-decree held by M. No doubt the proceeds of the sale would, after satisfaction of the costs of the decree, go pro tanto to the satisfaction of the sums secured by the first incumbrance but M by selling in execution the mortgagor's equity of redemption did not forego his incumbrance. Held, also, that M could not enforce his lien for the recovery of the costs incurred by him in the Revenue Courts, as the surety-bond did not provide for the payment of such costs; that he could enforce his lien for the recovery of interest, as that bond did provide for the payment of interest; and that the moneys realised by the sale of the equity of redemption of the property in the execution of the Revenue Court's decree of 1872 must be applied, in the first place, in satisfaction of the costs of the suit in which that decree was made, and then in satisfaction of the arrear sued for in that suit, or the balance of that arrear, and of the arrear sued for in the second suit, with interest at the rate agreed upon in the surety-bond from the date

In contravention of this agreement A appealed and obtained a decree for possession of the entire piece of land, whereupon B instituted a suit claiming to have possession of the same in terms of the agreement. Held that the agreement was valid, although its effect was practically to render the former suit inoperative, and further, that the previous suit between the parties was no bar to B's suit, a new cause of action having arisen upon the breach of the agreement. *JATI RAM TALOOKDAR v. 191. — Decree not in conformity with judgment.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13.—Omission to make reservation in decree though in judgment.—It is by the decree and not by the judgment that a question of res judicata must be decided. In 1881 A sued K and others claiming a declaration of his title to certain land and an injunction against interference with his possession. K claimed part of the land by purchase from M. The Munsif decreed for A, and this decree was confirmed on appeal by the District Judge, but in his judgment the District Judge recorded that K's claim was not adjudicated upon and that he should bring a fresh suit if he had any claim. In 1883 K sued A to recover the land, which he claimed by purchase from M. A pleaded that the claim was res judicata by virtue of the decree in the former suit. The District Munsif and, on appeal, the District Judge, held that the claim was not res judicata and decreed for K. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that as no reservation was made in the decree of K's right to bring another suit, the plea of res judicata was good, but that, under the circumstances, an opportunity should be given to K to apply to the District Court to have the decree in the former suit brought into conformity with the judgment. This having been done, the decree of the lower Courts was confirmed. AVALA v KUPPU

192. — Finding in judgment not embodied in decree.—Suit for enhancement of rent.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13.—N. brought a suit against P for enhancement of rent. P's defence was, first, that no notice of enhancement had been given; secondly, that the rent was not enhanceable, as he and his predecessors in title had held it at a fixed rent from the date of the permanent settlement. The suit was dismissed on the ground that no notice had been given; but the Munsif stated in his judgment, that he considered the rent enhanceable, because he did not believe in the genuineness of the documentary evidence produced by P. The decree merely ordered that the suit should be dismissed, the portion of the judgment as to the enhanceability of the rent not being embodied in the decree. P, therefore, had no right of appeal against that portion of the judgment. In a subsequent suit by N. against P., for enhancement of rent of the same tenure,—Held that, on the rule laid down by the Privy Council in Soorjeemonee Dayee v Suddanund Mohapatra, 12 B. L. 193. — Objections by respondent to decree.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss 13, 540, 561, 584—In a suit to obtain possession of certain property, and to set aside a deed called a deed of endowment (wakfnama) on the ground that the defendant had fraudulently obtained its execution, the defendant pleaded (1) that the deed was a valid one, and (2) that she was in possession of the property in satisfaction of a dower-debt, and her possession could not be disturbed so long as the debt remained unsatisfied. The Court of first instance held that the deed was invalid, but that the defendant was entitled to remain in possession of the property till her dower-debt was satisfied, and the Court passed a decree which merely dismissed the suit, without embodying the finding as to the deed. On appeal by the plaintiff to the District Judge, the defendant filed objections under section 561 of the Civil Procedure Code in regard to the first Court's decision that the deed of endowment was invalid. The Judge dismissed the plaintiff's appeal, affirming the finding as to dower, and, refusing to decide the question of the validity of the deed as being unnecessary for disposal of the claim, disallowed the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (OLDFIELD and MAHMOOD, JJ, dissenting) that if a decree is, upon the face of it, entirely in favour of a party to a suit, such decree being the thing which by law is made appealable, and nothing else, that party has no right of appeal therefrom. If, in the judgment of which such decree is the formal expression, findings have been recorded upon some issues against that party, and he desires to have formal effect given to them by the decree, so as to allow of his filing objections thereto under section 561 of the Civil Procedure Code or of appealing therefrom under section 540, he must take steps under section 206 to have the decree properly brought into conformity with the judgment, so that there may be matter on the face of it to show that something has been decided against him; but if he fails to take this course, the decree, though in general terms, will stand good as finally deciding the issues raised by the pleadings upon which the ultimate determination of the cause and the decree itself rested. The findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of, as to the plaintiff's right to any portion of the relief sought by him as declared by the decree, amount to no more than obiter dicta, and do not constitute a final decision of the kind contemplated by section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that, in the present case, the Judge was right in holding that the question as to the validity or otherwise of the deed of endowment was wholly immaterial. The judgment of STRAIGHT, J., in Lachman Singh v. Mohan, I. L. R., 2 All., 497, approved and followed. Per OLDFIELD, J., contra, that the decree, to agree with the judgment and fulfil the requirements of section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, should contain the material points for determination arising out of the claim and material for the decision thereon; that if this has not been done, the defect is a good ground of appeal, notwithstanding that the decree, on its face, may be altogether in favour of the appellant, and notwithstanding that he may not have applied for amendment of the decree under section 206, or for review of judgment; and that, in the present case, the defect in the decree would afford a good ground of appeal. Per MAHMOOD, J., that inasmuch as the provisions of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code relate as well as to the trial of issues as to the trial of suits, and in the present case the validity or otherwise of the deed was a matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties, and was adjudicated upon, the finding of the first Court upon that issue was not a mere obiter dictum, but would be binding upon the defendant as res judicata, notwithstanding the fact that the suit against her was dismissed on the ground that she held possession of the property in lieu of dower, that whatever has the force of res judicata is necessarily appealable; that the word "from" as used in section 540, or section 584, and the expression "objection to the decree" in section 561, refer not only to matters existing upon the face of the decree, but also to those which should have existed but do not exist there, and that the defendant in the present case was aggrieved or injured by the omission in the decree of the first Court and was therefore entitled to file objections to it, and, for the same reason, to appeal to the High Court from the decree of the lower Appellate Court. Also per MAHMOOD, J., that it was doubtful whether the reliefs contemplated by sections 206 and 623 were open to the defendant; but that, even conceding that she ought to have sought her remedy under either of those sections, her neglect to do so did not make her incapable of obtaining the same result by the exercise of her right of appeal. *Anusuyabai v. 194. ————— Incidental finding.—Appeal from favourable decree—The plaintiff sued for a declaration that certain lands were his, and for possession of them. Defendant No. 1 claimed the ownership of the lands; defendant No. 2 claimed to be mortgagee in possession. The decree simply dismissed the suit; but the lower Court found, as a fact, that the ownership of the lands was in the plaintiff, although the plaintiff was not entitled to possession of them by reason of the mortgage to defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 1 now appealed on the ground that, although the decree itself was entirely in her favour, she would be prejudiced in any future proceedings if the finding of fact as to the ownership of the lands were left unchallenged. Held that the appeal would not lie; for the decree is what must be looked to to see what was conclusively decided, and there was nothing in the decree actually passed which the plaintiff could afterwards use as res judicata in his favour; and an appeal is not admissible on any point not having the authority of res judicata. An adjudication is only conclusive evidence of the facts established therein or properly tending thereto; hence from a simple judgment against him a party cannot deduce any thing in his favour as res judicata, for nothing in his favour can have been an essential element of an adverse decree. *ANUSUYABAI v. Provision was also made for forfeiture by either of the sons in case they disputed the will, in which event the whole estate was to go to the other son. under the will. In 1859 S. brought a suit against C, B, and certain persons who claimed portions of the property under deeds executed by C, to cancel those deeds, to cancel the will, to set aside the adoption of B, and for maintenance. In this suit he alleged that C. had no power to make any of the devises of real estate contained in the will, inasmuch as the whole estate, consisting of property inherited by C and property acquired by him from the income of such inherited property, was ancestral. The only issue raised in that suit referring to the will was whether it was assented to by S. The first Court found that it had been so assented to, that the adoption of B. was valid, and that S.'s conduct justified C. in disinheriting him the suit was accordingly dismissed. S. appealed to the High Court, and in his grounds of appeal raised the same contention as before, viz., that the whole of the real property was ancestral, and therefore C. had no power to dispose of it without his consent. The High Court, in 1863, varied the decree of the first Court and held that the will must be set aside so far as it affected the right of S. in the ancestral property, but that the ancestral property only included that inherited, and not that acquired by C with the income of the inherited property. In a suit brought by S., after the death of B. and C., against B.'s widow and the parties to the former suit, or their representatives, to obtain possession of the whole estate of C. on the ground that both the inherited property and the property acquired from the income thereof were ancestral,—Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that, although the issue as to the assent of S. to the will clearly embraced only a portion of the controversy between the parties, the Court had jurisdiction, and indeed was bound, to decide whether or not the will was operative as to all or to any, and what portion, of the property, and that its decision on that point was binding on the parties. According to the general law relating to res judicata, where a question has been necessarily decided in effect, though not in express terms, between parties to a suit, they cannot raise the same question as between themselves in any other suit in any other form. Section 2, Act VIII of 1859, does not prevent the operation of this general law. The establishment of the adoption alleged in the first suit would have obliged the father of the present plaintiff to share with the adopted son his ancestral estate. That adoption having been negatived, the son, in this suit, ought to be estopped from making title on the ground that the adoption had placed the person, from whom he claimed to inherit, in the relation of father's brother to him. VENKATA MAHIPATI GANGADHARA RAMA RAU v BUCHI SITAYYA . . . *PITTAPUR RAJA v. Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, expls. I and II, and s. 44.—L. was the owner of a 4-anna share in a village. On the 1st March 1880, his childless widow R., and his nephew B., who had separated from his two brothers and lived for some years with both L. and R., sold to S. one third of the 4-anna share. The brothers of B. sued the vendors and the vendee to enforce a right of pre-emption, alleging that they, as well as B., had acquired and entered into exclusive possession of the estate of L. as his heirs. In the second appeal in this suit the High Court held that, as it was proved that the 4-anna share was L.'s separate estate, and R. had succeeded to it and was in possession of it, and thus the plaintiffs had not established a title to, or acquired possession of, any part of the share, the plaintiffs were not in a position to assert a preferential claim to purchase the property in dispute. The plaintiffs also pleaded that the question of the right and title asserted by them as the actual heirs of L. should have been tried and determined in the suit; but the High Court rejected this plea on the ground that the suit had been based merely on the allegation of de facto possession, and that their claim was to obtain by purchase one-third share only, and not for any remedy in respect of their right to possession by inheritance of the entire 4-anna estate. Subsequently to this decision, the same plaintiffs, alleging equal rights with B. as reversionary heirs of L., sued the same defendants for a declaration of the incompetence of R., the widow, to alienate the property, and that the sale-deed might be declared, as against them, null and of no effect. The cause of action was stated to be the execution, on the 1st March 1880, of the deed of sale. Held that the plea of res judicata failed. The matter now substantially in issue between the parties, viz., the presumptive title of the plaintiffs to possession of the property, had not been "heard and finally decided" in the sense of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Such title was not "alleged and denied" by the parties in that suit, within explanation I, section 13. It was not matter which "might and ought" to have been made the ground of attack in the former suit, within explanation II. The law does not require a plaintiff at once to assert all his titles to property, or to be thereafter estopped from advancing them. A plaintiff may with the leave of the Court (section 44,

212. — Issue as to account.—Suit for money due on bond—Act X of 1877, s. 13—M. sued R. in the Court of the Munsif for a bond, alleging that he had satisfied the bond-debt, and for a certain sum which he alleged had been paid by him to R. in excess of the bond-debt. On the 24th November 1875 the Munsif, having taken an account and found that R188-7-4 of the bond-debt were still due, made a decree dismissing the suit. R. appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who on the 16th September 1876, finding that R520-2-2 of the bond-debt were still due, affirmed the Munsif's decree. M. appealed to the High Court on the ground that an appeal by R. did not lie to the Subordinate Judge, as R. was not aggrieved by the Munsif's decree. The Division Bench before which the appeal came, on the 10th August 1877, holding that R. was not competent to appeal to the Subordinate Judge, set aside the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge. In deciding the case the Division Bench made certain observations to the effect that the account between the parties was not finally settled, but might be taken again in a fresh suit. In November 1877 M. instituted a fresh suit against R. to recover the bond on payment of R188-7-4, the sum found by the Munsif in the former suit to be due by him to R. Held, on the question whether the finding of the Munsif in the former suit was final and conclusive between the parties or the account might be again taken, that that finding, being a finding on a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit which was heard and finally decided by the Munsif, was final and conclusive between the parties and the account could not be again taken. Held, also, that the observations of the Division Bench in the former suit were mere "obiter dicta" which did not bind the Courts disposing of the fresh suit. MOHAN LAL v. RAM DIAL. I. L. 213. — Issue as to satisfaction of money-bonds.—Subsequent suit on bonds.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 45.—Matter directly and substantially in issue—Meaning of "suit" in Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—S. sued K. for four bonds, alleging that the same had been satisfied. K. had formerly sued S. on two of these bonds. S. had alleged in defence of that suit that those two bonds, as also the other two, had not been satisfied. It was decided in that suit that not one of the bonds had been satisfied. Held by PETHERAM, C J., and OLDFIELD, BRODHURST, and DUTHOIT, JJ., that the only issue in the former suit which had to be decided being whether the bonds on which that suit was brought had been satisfied or not, the second suit was, under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, res judicata only in respect of those bonds, and not in respect of the other two bonds. The Court which tried the former suit had not jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit. Per MAHMOOD, J—This being so, if the word "suit" in section 13 were taken literally, it might, with some plausibility, be contended that there was no res judicata in respect of any of the bonds. The word "suit," however, must be understood to mean such a matter as might have formed the subject of a separate suit independently of the special provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, such as section 45, which enables the plaintiff to unite several causes of action in one and the same suit. Adopting this interpretation, it was clear that the two bonds which were the subject of the former suit could not be allowed to form the subject of litigation again. As to the other two bonds, which were not the subject-matter of the former suit, they did not, in the former suit, constitute a "matter directly and substantially in issue," within the meaning of section 13, and, even if they were "directly and substantially in issue," the decision in the former suit would not support the plea of res judicata, because the Court which tried that suit was not a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the subsequent suit in which the plea was raised. *SHEORAJ RAI v. 214. — Issue as to validity of mortgage.—Suit for possession—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13, expts I and II—H, the proprietor of a one-third share of a certain undivided estate, made a gift of such share to P. He subsequently, in February 1875, gave a mortgage of such share, in his capacity as P's guardian, to N and S, the two other co-sharers of such estate. In March 1878 P, having attained his age of majority, brought a suit, as a co-sharer of such estate, under such gift, against N and S for possession of certain land appertaining to such estate, on the ground that they were using such land as if they were the sole proprietors thereof. The lower Appellate Court, observing that such land was the property of the three co-sharers, that the mortgage of P's rights to N and S did not affect those rights as such, and that N and S were not justified in using such land as if they were the exclusive proprietors thereof, gave P a decree for possession of one-third share of such land. N and S appealed to the High Court on the ground that P should not have been awarded possession, as they were in possession of such land as mortgagees. The High Court remanded the cases for the determination of the issue thus raised by N and S, and the lower Appellate Court found that N and S were in possession of P's share of such estate as mortgagees under the mortgage made by H above referred to, and of such land as such. P did not take any objection to this finding, and it was adopted by the High Court and embodied in its final decree. In October 1879 P sued N for possession of his share in such estate, claiming under the gift from H, and alleging that the mortgage of such share by H to N

215. — Issue as to interest on instalment bond.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—"Subject-matter" of suit—The obligee of a bond payable by instalments sued the obligor for four instalments, claiming, with reference to the terms of such bond, interest on such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligor contended in that suit that, on the proper construction of the bond, the interest on such instalments should be calculated from the dates of default. The obligee obtained a decree for interest as claimed. The obligee subsequently again sued the obligor for four instalments, again claiming interest on such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligor contended again in the second suit that interest should only be calculated from the dates of default. Held that the question as to the date from which interest due on the defaulting instalments was exigible under the terms of such bond was res judicata. It is the "matter in issue," not the "subject-matter" of the suit, that forms the essential test of res judicata in section 13 of Act X of 1877. PAHLWAN SINGH v. RISAL SINGH [I. L. 216. — Issue as to right to property.—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, expt I—Issue previously determined—N sued W for a moiety of a brick-kiln, claiming by right of inheritance, and alleging in respect of the other moiety that it was his own property. W in her defence to the suit denied that N had any right in the kiln and that a moiety of the kiln belonged to him. An issue was framed on the point whether a moiety of the kiln belonged to W which the Court of first instance decided in N's favour. N eventually obtained a decree for a moiety of the kiln which he claimed by right of inheritance. W appealed, contending, inter alia, that it was not proved that a moiety of the kiln belonged to N. The appeal was decreed, and the decree of the Court of first instance in N's favour was set aside. W subsequently sued N for the value of bricks which he had wrongfully taken from the kiln. N set up as a defence to the suit that a moiety of the kiln belonged to him. Held that the issue whether a moiety of the kiln belonged to N was res judicata, under section 13, explanation I, of the Civil Procedure Code. *WILAIAT BEGAM v. 218. ——— Issue of law erroneously decided.—Decree prohibiting erection of temple—Rights of rival religious sects—Right to open temple for worship—The erroneous decision by a competent tribunal of a question of law directly or substantially in issue between the parties to a suit does not prevent a Court from deciding the same question, arising between the same parties in a subsequent suit, according to law. In a suit in 1850 between the Tenkalais and Vadakalais, rival religious sects, represented by the plaintiffs and defendants respectively, the Vadakalais, having endeavoured to open a temple for public worship in a certain public street, were, by the decree of the Sudder Court, prohibited from erecting a temple or instituting public worship on the spot of ground objected to by the Tenkalais and which lay within the range of the Tenkalai temple, ie, within the usual range of the processions conducted in connection with the temple worship. In 1879 the Vadakalais opened a temple for public worship on another site, their private property, in the same street. Held that the decree of the Sudder Court in the former suit was no bar to the action of the Vadakalais. *PARTHASARADI v. 219. ——— Issue as to validity of grant.—Issue not decided in former suit—In a suit to recover, with mesne profits and other incidents, a jeryati village alleged by the plaintiff to form part of the zemindari, and to be wrongfully held by defendant by virtue of the execution of a decree of the late Commissioner of the Northern Circars passed in 1844, the defendant pleaded that he held on a permanent lease subject to a fixed quit-rent, that he and his ancestors had held on that tenure since and previously to the permanent settlement, and that the quit-rent had been received from him by the plaintiff. The Agent dismissed the suit, on the ground that the matter had become res judicata against the plaintiff by a former decree in 1807. Held that the matter of the present claim was not res judicata, because the question of the existence and validity of the alleged grant, on which the defendant relied, was not determined in the former decree. *VAIRICHARLA SURYA NARAYANA v. 221. ——— Issue as to tenancy.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Questions decided by decree.—A landlord having tendered a pottah at a certain rate, sued his tenants in the Court of the District Munsif to recover rent for Fash 1289 (1879-80). The tenants pleaded that they were not bound to accept the pottah tendered by virtue of an implied contract, which entitled them without exchange of pottah and muchalka to hold the land permanently at a lighter rent. The District Munsif and, on appeal, the District Court, decided that no implied contract had been proved by the tenants. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the pottah tendered was not one which the tenants were bound to accept under Act VIII of 1865 (Madras). The landlord then sued in the Revenue Court to compel the tenants to accept a pottah for Fash 1291 (1881-82), and the tenants again put forward the same plea. Held that the question whether the tenants were entitled to hold permanently at a lighter rate without exchange of pottah and muchalka was not res judicata by virtue of the decree in the former suit. *MUTTUKUMARAPPA REDDI v. It being found that the crops in question had been purchased by the plaintiff as alleged by him, he obtained a decree for damages for their removal. The plaintiff now brought a second suit as transferee of the jote to recover possession of it from the defendants who again pleaded that the transfer was invalid. Held, reversing the decision of FIELD, J., that the defendants were not estopped under section 13, explanation II, of the Civil Procedure Code, from setting up that defence, inasmuch as the question of the transferability of the jote was immaterial in the first suit and had not in fact been determined, and the question of estoppel was not raised by the parties themselves. *CHURN MANJEE v. Issue as to right of pre-emption—continued

(28)—Second appeal—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 565, 566—Determination of case by High Court—In a suit for pre-emption, based on the wajib-ul-urz of a village, the Court of first instance dismissed the claim on the ground that no right of pre-emption had been proved to exist in the village. The lower Appellate Court, dissenting from this opinion, reversed the first Court's decree, and remanded the case under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code for a decision on the remaining question of fact, viz, the amount of the consideration for the sale. On appeal from the order of remand, the High Court, on the 3rd January 1884, observed that it was not disposed to interfere with the finding of fact that the plaintiffs had a right of pre-emption, and accordingly dismissed the appeal, but added that the Judge was in error in remanding the case under section 562 of the Code, that his order must so far be set aside, and that he should proceed under section 565 or section 566 as might be applicable. The Judge, on receipt of this order, replaced the case on his file, remitted an issue to the Court of first instance, under section 566, as to the amount of consideration, and, accepting the first Court's finding upon that issue, decreed the plaintiff's claim. In second appeal by the defendants the High Court was of opinion that the Judge had disposed of the case upon a condition of things which the plaintiffs had never asserted, inasmuch as he had treated the right of pre-emption which was in issue as one arising from custom, and not, as alleged by the plaintiffs, as arising from a contract between the ancestors of the parties. All the evidence necessary to the determination of the case was on the record. Held by the Full Bench that the defendants were not prevented by the operation of the High Court's order of the 3rd January 1884 from disputing the right of pre-emption, inasmuch as that order was a decision of a merely interlocutory character passed in the same suit, and the questions of fact involved therein were decided only so far as was necessary for the purpose of passing the order, and it could not be regarded as determining the main question in the suit which was still open, and must be decided in the final decree in the suit. Per STRAIGHT, J., that the jurisdiction of the High Court in appeal under section 588 of the Code from the Judge's order of remand was, like the jurisdiction of the Judge in passing the order, limited by the terms of section 562, and hence the remark made in the High Court's order, dealing with the plaintiffs' right of pre-emption, could only be regarded as an obiter dictum, and not as determining any question as to the pre-emptive right. *DEOKISHEN v. Issues were framed both as to title and as to the letting, but the Munsif, without trying the question of title, dismissed the suit on the ground that the oral lease was not proved. Held that a fresh suit to recover possession of the land on the ground of title was not barred as being res judicata. This application was refused by the District Judge, who granted a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to one G. Upon this, B sought his remedy in a suit before the Subordinate Judge, who held that the property being that of the husband, the widow's will passed nothing to plaintiff, and that, although the evidence in favour of G was doubtful, yet the Court could not say that he was not her heir. In a suit by G against B for the rents of the property accruing since the widow's death, where G contended that the decision of the Subordinate Judge operated as a bar to the questioning of his title, Held that the principle of res judicata did not apply. *GOOROO CHURN SIRCAR v. acquired a plot of land, X, under a Government grant. In 1851 N, claiming to be the owner of the adjoining plot Y, granted a lease of it to R, but in 1853 another lease of the same plot was granted by an agent of N to G. In 1859 G sued T. to recover possession of lot X, as being part of plot Y, and obtained a decree, against which T. appealed to the Privy Council. Pending the appeal R. sued G. for possession of plot Y, and obtained a decree against G. Meanwhile, R having failed to pay rent, plot Y was put up for sale, and purchased by the present respondent. In 1872, the respondent, who was unable to get possession of his purchase, obtained leave to be admitted a party respondent in the appeal to the Privy Council, and filed a case averring that the interests of the original respondents had ceased, and that he was, pending the appeal, precluded from enforcing his rights. The Privy Council held that the plaintiff G had not proved that plot Y, included plot X, but they stated that they did not adjudicate upon any question of title between the respondents on that appeal, or N or any other person's interest in plot Y. The present respondent subsequently sued T's representative for possession of plot X as being parcel of plot Y. Held, reversing the judgment of the High Court, that the respondent's claim was res judicata by reason of the previous judgment of the Privy Council. *BELCHAMBERS v. 229. — Order of remand—Decision of question of title—Suit for possession—In 1814 litigation commenced between a zemindar and his tenants by reason of his having dispossessed them of lands held under a jote tenure, and a decree having been obtained by the tenants the zemindar assessed the jote lands at a certain rent. Subsequently this rent fell into arrear, and under a decree the jote lands were in 1836 sold in satisfaction of the arrears to J, who was put in possession in 1839. Another suit, which was pending between the tenants and their mortgagee, in which a question arose whether these jote lands were included in the mortgage, was decided in favour of the mortgagee in 1841. J, the then jote tenant, was no party to that suit, and continued in possession of his jote lands. Disputes arose, and by an order of the Sudder Court in 1845 the jote lands were directed to be put in possession of the mortgagee. In 1856 a suit was brought by J's representative to set aside that order and to recover possession of the jote lands. The Privy Council held that, as J, the jote tenant, was not a party to the suit under which the decree was made in 1841, the decree was not binding upon him or those deriving title through him, and remanded the case in order that the issue whether the land was parcel of the jote or not might be tried. Held that this order of remand was conclusive that the question of the title of the representatives of J to the jote lands could not be reopened. *JUGGODUMBA DOSSEE v. 230. — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s 13—Suit for right to malikana and for registration of names.—Decision in previous suit—Court of competent jurisdiction—Previous to 1825 dearah X, accreted to mouzah Y, and some time before 1860 the maliks of Y, executed two conveyances in favour of A. and B. respectively. In 1860 A. sued B in the Munsif's Court for possession of a share in X, which B claimed under his conveyance. In that suit A. succeeded on the ground that B's conveyance did not cover the share claimed by him in X, but merely covered the share in the mouzah itself, whereas by his conveyance A had acquired the right to the share in X, which he claimed. In 1866 the Collector refused to recognise B's right to malikana payable in respect of the share in X, which had been the subject of the suit in 1860 or to register his name in respect thereof, but acknowledged A's right thereto, relying on the decision of the Civil Court in the suit between A and B. Subsequently B's representatives, C and D, in 1876 sought to have their names registered in respect of the same malikana, but they were opposed by E, who alleged that A had been acting throughout as his benamidar. Their application was eventually disallowed on reference by the Collector to the Civil Court. C and D. thereupon instituted the present suit against E in the Court of the Subordinate Judge for a declaration of their right to the malikana and for a reversal of the order refusing to allow their names to be registered in respect thereof. Held that the suit was barred as res judicata, on the ground that the right to malikana was substantially the same question as the proprietary right to the share in the dearah, and that this issue had been tried and decided in the suit in 1860 in favour of A, who must be taken to be E. In a suit for malikana the issue between the parties substantially raises the question of the proprietary right to the estate in respect of which the malikana is claimed, and when the question of the proprietary right has been decided in a previous suit between the same parties, a subsequent suit for malikana will be barred as res judicata. *GOPI NATH CHOBBY v. 232. ——— Landlord and tenant—Suit for ejectment—Issue previously heard and determined—Estoppel—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s 13—In a suit by a landlord against his tenant for ejectment, the defences were (1) no notice to quit had been served, and (2) the tenure was a permanent one. The suit was dismissed on the first ground, the Court holding at the same time that the tenure was not a permanent one. In a subsequent suit for ejectment from the same holding, brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, the defences were (1) the tenure was permanent, and (2) the plaintiff was estopped by the conduct of his predecessor in title from asserting as against the defendant that the tenure was not a permanent one. The lower Appellate Court found the question of estoppel in favour of the defendant, and dismissed the suit. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the decision was right, and must be affirmed. Semble,—That where a former suit between the same parties in respect of the same subject-matter has been dismissed on a preliminary point, a finding in that suit on the merits in the plaintiff's favour will not bar the defendant from putting forward the same defence on the merits in a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff against the same defendant. Semble,—That the case of Niamut Khan v Phadu Buldia, I L R, 6 Calc., 319, has been impliedly overruled by the case of Ran Bahadoor Singh v Lucho Koer, L R, 12 I. 233. ——— Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877, s 13—Matters directly and substantially in issue in a suit—Where a decree, awarding to one of the parties money deposited in a treasury by a third party, as the compensation for land taken by the latter for railway purposes, was based upon the right to the land, the question of title having been directly and substantially in issue between the parties,—Held that the contest of title was conclusive between them under section 13 of Act X of 1877. In a suit brought by a ghatwal to resume, as determinable at will, an under-tenure granted by one of his ancestors of land, part of the ghatwal mehal, it was alleged for the defence that the under-tenure was permanent. A prior judgment upon conflicting claims made by the ghatwal and the under-tenure-holders to receive the above-mentioned compensation-money, which had been paid in respect of lands in part comprised in the under-tenure, determined that the ghatwal was entitled to the money, being founded on the under-tenure-holders having been in possession of it by the mere sufferance of the ghatwal, who could put an end to it at any time. Held that the question whether the latter had a permanent tenure, having been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, could not be

234. ——— Question incidentally decided—Boundary dispute—Where, in a suit for some land, a Judge had considered it necessary to find out the boundary between two villages, and had given a decision in favour of one of the parties, who in a second suit of the same kind, but with reference to some other land, brought in the former decision to show that the land in dispute in the second suit must be his if the finding as to the village boundary in the former suit was correct,—Held that the finding as to the village boundary in the former suit was conclusive only as to the land in dispute in the former case, but did not make the former decision conclusive as to the boundary line itself. MONI ROY v RAJBUNSEE KOER

235. ——— Defence not raised in previous suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s 13, expl. ii—Estoppel—Explanation ii of section 13 of Act X of 1877 was meant to apply to a case where the defendant has a defence which, if he had so pleased, he might, and ought to, have brought forward, but, as he did not bring it forward, the suit has been decreed against him. Under such circumstances the defendant is as much bound by the adverse decree as if he had set up the defence, and he is equally estopped from setting up that defence in any future suit under similar circumstances. The explanation was never intended to enable a party to treat a point of law as having been decided in his favour in a former suit which was in fact not so decided, and which it was not necessary, for the purposes of the suit, to decide at all. GHURSOBRIT AHIR v RAMDUT SINGH

236. ——— Party raising only one defence, having others—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 2—When a plaintiff claims an estate, and the defendant, being in possession, and knowing that he has two grounds of defence raises only one, he shall not, in the event of the plaintiff obtaining a decree, be permitted to sue on the other ground to recover possession from the plaintiff. Woomatara Debra v Unnopoonna Dassee, 11 B. L. R., 153. Where, therefore, the defendants purchased an estate in the plaintiff's possession and sued him to recover possession of it, and the plaintiff resisted the suit merely on the ground that he was the auction-purchaser of it, and the defendants obtained a decree, and the plaintiff then sued claiming a right of pre-emption in respect of the property, a claim which he might have asserted in reply to the former suit,—Held that he was debarred from suing to enforce such claim. BALDEO SAHAI v BATESHAR SINGH

237. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2; and 1877, s. 13—Omission to raise defence.—Subsequent suit.—In a suit for rent and for ejectment, the defendant pleaded that his tenure was transferable and istemrari, and consequently protected by the Rent Law. In a former suit for arrears of previous years in which the defendant pleaded that his tenure was istemrari, the plaintiff obtained a decree for ejectment on non-payment of rent within fifteen days. In that case the defendant saved his tenure by payment within the time stated. Held that inasmuch as the defendant might in the former suit, in which the nature of the tenure was put in issue, have urged that his tenure was both transferable and istemrari, he could not in the present suit be allowed to alter his defence and rely upon the tenure being transferable. *Woomatara Debia v. The father of A. and B. having died, A. alleging that his father's assets amounted in value to Rs12,000, and admitting that he (A.) had received Rs1,000, part thereof, in 1866, sued B., whom he alleged to be in possession of the rest of the property, for Rs5,000, as the residue of A.'s share, and obtained a decree for a half share in immoveable property of their father of the value of about Rs700, and no more. In 1871 B. sued A. for a moiety of the Rs1,000, which A., in his suit in 1866, had admitted to be in his possession. Held that such a suit could not be maintained, as the claim on which it was founded must be deemed a res judicata in A.'s suit in 1866. *MAKTUM VALAD MOHIDIN v. 241. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13—Ancestral property.—Partition—Omission to insist on property being brought into hotchpot—Property out of the jurisdiction.—Subsequent suit for partition—The three defendants, G., R., and K., and their brother M., the grandfather of the plaintiff, were members of one family possessing undivided ancestral property consisting of the villages of B., P., and S., the two former being situated in the Poona Zillah, and the latter in the Satara Zillah. In 1866 the three defendants (each in a separate suit) sued M. in the Poona Courts for partition of the villages of B. and P. They in their plaints alluded to the village of S., stating that it was their own, and not subject to partition. M. in his answer contented himself with denying the right to partition of the villages of B. and P., and made no claim, in the alternative, to a share in the ownership of S. The plaintiff, the grandson of M., now sued the defendants in the Satara Courts for partition of the village of S., contending that he was not concluded from so doing by the former proceedings in the Poona Courts. Held that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata, and that his suit was concluded under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), section 13, explanations I and II. A member of an undivided family, suing his coparceners for partition of family property, is bound to bring into hotchpot any undivided property in his own possession, in order that there may be a complete and final partition, and cannot claim to withhold any such property on the ground that it is situated within another jurisdiction. That being so, the plaintiff's grandfather M. having neglected in the previous suit to make the exception of the village of S. a ground of defence, the judgment which followed involved the decision of every claim of title upon the cause of action, and must be taken between the parties as amounting to a positive adjudication of all such claims, including the claim to the village of S. *HARI NARAYAN BRAHME v. 242. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—S. and B. jointly sued N. for the redemption of a mortgage of an 8-anna share of a village, B. suing as the purchaser from the mortgagor of a moiety of such share. N. did not in defence of such suit assert a right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, although such right had accrued to him on its sale by the mortgagor to B. S. and B. obtained a decree in such suit, and the mortgage was redeemed. N. subsequently sued B. and his vendor to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety. Held that it was incumbent upon N. in the former suit to have asserted in defence his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, inasmuch as if that right had been established, it must, so far as B. was concerned, have proved fatal to his title to redeem, and that, as he had not done so, the suit to enforce his right of pre-emption

243. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 13—B, who held a decree for money against I, caused certain property to be attached in execution of such decree as the property of his judgment-debtor. M, the wife of I, objected to such attachment, claiming such property as her own. Her objection was disallowed, and she consequently brought a suit against B to establish her right to such property. She died while that suit was pending, leaving by will such property to her sons. That suit proceeded in the names of her sons, who claimed such property under such will. The lower Courts only decided in that suit that such property belonged to M and not to I, and it was therefore not liable to be sold in execution of B's decree against the latter. They did not consider the question whether M's sons were entitled to such property under their mother's will. In second appeal in that suit B contended that I, as heir to M, was entitled to a fourth share of such property, and such share was liable to be sold in execution of such decree. M's sons did not contend before the High Court that they were entitled to the whole of such property under their mother's will to the exclusion of I. The High Court allowed B's contention. B brought a fourth share of such property to sale in execution of his decree and purchased it himself. Thereupon M's sons sued him for such share, claiming it under their mother's will. Held that their mother's will was a matter which should have been made a ground of defence by M's sons in the course of the trial of the second appeal in the former suit between them and B, and that, not having been so made, it was res judicata in the sense of section 13, explanation II, Act X of 1877. SULTAN AHMAD v MATLA BAKHSH . . . 248. ————— Judgment in rem.—Decree obtained by fraud.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 13.—Evidence Act, s 44—Where a decree in a suit has been honestly obtained without fraud it cannot be subsequently disputed by the parties thereto or their privies, or by persons who were represented by such parties. Strangers to the suit (i e, persons neither privies to nor represented by the parties thereto) are not bound by such a decree if it be a decree inter partes, but if it be a decree in rem and passed by a competent Court, they are bound by it and cannot controvert it. Where a decree has been obtained by means of the fraud of one party against the other, it is binding on parties and privies, and on persons represented by the parties, so long as it remains in force, but it may be impeached for fraud, and may be set aside if the fraud is proved. In the case of judgments in rem the same rule holds good with regard to persons who are strangers to the suit. Where a decree has been obtained by the fraud and collusion of both the parties to the suit, it is binding upon the parties. It is also binding upon the privies of the parties,—except, probably, where the collusive fraud has been on a provision of the law enacted for the benefit of such privies. whether as plaintiff or defendant, treat the previous judgment so obtained by fraud and collusion as a mere nullity, provided the fraud and collusion be clearly established. The same rule applies with regard to strangers where the previous judgment is a judgment in rem. Section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) is not exhaustive as to the effect of res judicata. It does not deal with the case of judgments in rem, nor with that of parties represented by, though not claiming under, the parties to a former suit. Quare.—As to the proper construction of section 44 of the Evidence Act. AHMEDBOHY HUBI-BHOY v. 249. ——— Decree against Hindu widow.—Fraud—Reversioner.—Upon the death of R, a Hindu, who was separate from his brother S, his widow G became life-tenant of his estate, and his daughter B became entitled to succeed after G's death. In 1882 a suit was brought by S and G against V to recover the value of a branch of a mango tree wrongfully taken by the defendant, and for maintenance of possession over the grove in which the tree was situate. The suit was dismissed, and it was decided that R was not the owner of the grove, nor was G the owner. In 1885 B brought a suit against G, S, V, and A, to whom V had sold some of the trees, claiming a declaration of her right and possession of the grove, upon the allegation that the proceedings of 1882 were carried on in collusion between S and G on the one hand and V on the other, for the purpose of improperly preventing her from asserting her rights. Held that if the suit of 1882 was a genuine suit and was properly contested by the then plaintiffs, though S might have been improperly joined as plaintiff, any decision then passed against G would be binding upon the present plaintiff, and estop her again litigating questions which were then decided. Held, also, that if the plaintiff's specific allegation of fraud and collusion in the proceedings of 1882 were established, and even if the decree of 1882 did dispose of the question now sought to be reopened, the decision in that suit would not be binding on the plaintiff under the circumstances. Katama Natchiar's case, 9 Moore's I. 251. ——— Reversioner.—On her husband's death, a Hindu widow obtained possession of his estate as his heir, and, in a suit against her for possession thereof by certain persons claiming to succeed to the estate as rightful heirs, a decree was obtained by them. Held that such decree was a bar to a new suit against those persons by the daughter claiming the estate in succession to the widow, the decree having been fairly and properly obtained against the widow. NAND KUMAR v. RADHA KUARI . . . I. L. R., 1 All., 282

252. ——— Decree in suit by Hindu widow.—Reversioners, Suit by—Alienation by life-tenant—Adverse possession.—A daughter succeeded to a share of her father's estate, and transferred it in full property by a formal instrument or ikranama, dated March 1849, to her granddaughter, expressly naming her and treating her as her heiress, —the transfer being in the nature of a release, reserving maintenance and other advantages to the donor. Upon the application of the granddaughter before the Collector for the mutation of names according to the terms of the ikranama, the reversioners (collateral heirs of the father) affected to contest the unauthorised nature of the alienation, but dropped their opposition. In 1857 the diaras, or alluvial lands attached to the estate, were perpetually settled with the granddaughter. The alienor quarrelled with her granddaughter, and in 1857 brought a suit against her to set aside the ikranama, upon the ground of the non-performance of a condition subsequent. The plaintiff succeeded in the first Court, but the judgment was reversed (October 1858) on appeal to the Zillah Judge. Pending the appeal the plaintiff died (February 1858), and the reversioners applied to be, and were, admitted as her heirs to conduct the appeal. The granddaughter remained in possession from the date of transfer until 1866, when she died. In April 1867 the present suit was brought by the surviving reversioner, who claimed to be entitled to recover possession of the property by right of inheritance from the alienor's father. He was one of the reversioners who had been admitted to conduct the appeal in the former suit upon the death of the alienor. Held (on special appeal and review), there had been no adverse possession; the instrument enured as a transfer of the donor's life-interest only, the judgment in the former suit

255. ———— Decree in suit by manager of joint family. — Manager of joint family as representative of other members — Subsequent suit by another member on same cause of action — A Hindu family is regarded as a corporation whose interests are necessarily centred in the manager, the presumption being that the manager is acting for the family, unless the contrary is shown. Before the introduction of the Civil Procedure Code this was so equally with regard to litigation as to other transactions, and it was not then obligatory, or even customary, for a Hindu manager to set forth that he sued in a representative character (as now required by the Code, section 50), or to add the co-owners as parties to the suit (as required by English law). A suit, therefore, brought in 1856 by the manager of a joint Hindu family consisting of himself and the plaintiff, and no fraud or collusion being alleged, bound the plaintiff, though then a minor, and he could not afterwards bring a second suit on the same cause of action. GAN SAVANT BAL SAVANT v NARAYAN DEOND SAVANT

He had been dispossessed by the defendants under a decree declaring their title to the land against the plaintiff's elder brother, who claimed it on behalf of the Vadasheril illam. Held that the plaintiff was not estopped by the former decree from recovering the land. Per INNES, J. — The question whether a decree obtained against the karnavan of a Nayar tarwad or of a Nambudri illam in Malabar is binding on the family is purely one of procedure. The dictum in Varanakot Narayanan Namburi v Varanakot Narayanan Namburi, I L R., 2 Mad., 328, that in the absence of fraud or collusion a decree against the karnavan, as such, is binding on the anandravans of the tarwad, is not warranted by any provision of the Code of Civil Procedure. Every member of the tarwad is entitled to be made a party, or to have notice under section 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in any suit the object of which is to affect the tarwad property. Explanation 5 of section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not refer to bona fide defences, but to bona fide claims, and does not make a decree binding on a person not a party to it where the actual defendant was jointly interested with such person in the subject-matter of the suit and defended the suit bona fide. Hazir Gazi v Sonamonee Dassee, I L. 260. ———— Sale in execution of decree — Mitakshara law — Alienation, voluntary and involuntary, by the members of a family governed by the Mitakshara law — A, a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law, after the attachment of a property, part of his ancestral estate, to which he and his minor son B were jointly entitled as members of a joint Hindu family, conveyed by a deed of gift the whole of his interest in the ancestral property, including the property under attachment, to B. Five days after the execution of the deed of gift, the property was sold in execution for the decree of the attaching creditor C, and was purchased by C at such sale. Ten days after the sale, A instituted proceedings under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859 to set it aside on the ground of irregularity. These proceedings were afterwards continued in the name of A, but virtually on behalf of the minor B, under the control and direction of the Collector, who had taken charge of his estate, and appointed a manager under Act XL of 1858. These proceedings terminated in 1874 by the application to set aside the sale being dismissed, and the sale was therefore confirmed, and C took possession of the property. In 1877 a suit was instituted on behalf of B by the manager appointed by the Collector against C. and A. to recover possession of the property, on the grounds — (1) that when it was sold it was not the property of A, the judgment-debtor, and (2) that the property of a joint Hindu family could not be sold or alienated by, or taken in execution of, a decree against a single member of that family. Held that the fact that the plaintiff, through his guardian, had actively intervened in the proceedings under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859, was no bar to the institution of the present suit on his behalf. *COLLECTOR OF MONGHYR v. It was finally decided in that suit that such estate was a share of such undivided property and not the separate property of G., and that such sale was invalid, having been made without the consent of N., a co-sharer of such undivided property. G. subsequently redeemed such estate, and having done so, sold it a second time to K. N. thereupon sued K. to set aside such sale on the same ground as that on which he had defended the former suit. Held that the issue in such suit whether such estate was a share of undivided property or the separate property of G. was res judicata, inasmuch as K., though not in name, yet in fact, was a "party" to the former suit in which such issue was raised and finally decided. *KHUB CHAND v. occupied by his paternal grandmother, on whose death the defendants had taken wrongful possession. The defendants claimed to be legally entitled to the premises in question, and contended that the plaintiff's suit was barred under section 2, Act VIII of 1859, by reason that the plaintiff had already, during his grandmother's lifetime, brought a suit against her and the defendant's father, as a co-defendant, to establish his right to the same premises, which suit had been dismissed. The defendants also pleaded limitation. It appeared that in the former suit the relief sought by the plaintiff was substantially to restrain his grandmother from acts of waste in alienating property which had belonged to her deceased husband by assigning it to her co-defendant, but that, as regards the property now claimed, although it was mentioned in the plaint, no charge had been made that she had assigned it, or intended to assign it, to her co-defendant, nor any allegation to show that the co-defendant had any interest in it. Held, reversing the decisions of the lower Courts, that, under the circumstances, the decision in the former suit was not a decision in a suit between the same parties, or parties under whom they claimed, and that the cause of action in the present suit was not determined in the former suit. Held, also, that the defendant's plea of limitation could not be determined without a finding as to whether the plaintiff's grandmother, who died within the period of limitation, had held the premises with the plaintiff's leave, or as a trespasser. ZAMINDAR OF PITTAPURAM v. The name of B. only was recorded in the revenue registers in respect of the zemindari property left by G. February and November 1884 the daughters of G. obtained ex parte decrees against A. and B. in suits brought by them to recover their shares by inheritance in the 5 biswas. In 1885 S. brought a suit upon his mortgage of 1878, claiming the amount due thereon and the sale of the whole 5 biswas. To this suit he made defendants A. and B., G.'s daughters, and X., alleging that the decrees of February and November 1884 were fraudulently and collusively obtained, and as to the auction sale of January 1884, that the 2½ biswas were sold subject to his mortgage, he not having been made a party to the suit brought by X. upon the deed of 1876, and therefore not being bound by any of the proceedings taken therein or consequent thereto. On behalf of the daughters it was contended (inter alia) that the decrees obtained by them against A. and B. in February 1884 were conclusive, by way of res judicata, against the plaintiff, who, as mortgagee from A. and B., claimed under a title derived from them. Held that, there being no evidence to show that the decrees of February and November 1884 were fraudulently and collusively obtained, the Court of first instance was right in exempting the shares of the daughters from the lien sought to be enforced by the plaintiff, and that, inasmuch as the deed of 1876 was prior in date to the plaintiff's deed of 1878, and there was no allegation of fraud or collusion in regard to it, the decree and sale in enforcement of the former deed would defeat the rights of the plaintiff under the latter. Khub Chand v. Kalian Das, 1 L. R., 1 All., 240, and Ah Hasan v. Dharya, 1 L. R., 4 All., 518, referred to. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The decrees of February and November 1884 did not operate as res judicata against the plaintiff, inasmuch as a mortgagee cannot be bound by a decision relating to the mortgaged property in a suit instituted after his mortgage, and to which he was not a party. After a mortgage has been duly created, the mortgagor, in whom the equity of redemption is vested, no longer possesses any such estate as would entitle him to represent the rights and interests of the mortgagee in a subsequent litigation, so as to render the result of such litigation binding upon and conclusive against such mortgagee. The plaintiff in the present suit could not be treated as a party claiming under his mortgagors, within the meaning of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that section must be interpreted as if, after the words "under whom they or any of them claim," the words "by a title arising subsequently to the commencement of the former suit" had been inserted. *Duma Sahu v. 270. — Illegitimacy, Question of.—

Execution of decree—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11—The questions which, under section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, may be determined by a Court executing a decree, must be between parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and must relate to the execution of the decree. A person who was not on the record when the decree was made does not constitute himself a party to the suit by applying for execution, and a question as to his legitimacy is, consequently, not one which the Court executing the decree is competent to entertain. A declaration by a Court in execution proceedings, that a person not a party to the suit applying for execution is legitimate, since it is made without jurisdiction, cannot, under section 2, Act VIII of 1859, be pleaded as a bar to a regular suit in which it is sought to establish the illegitimacy of the applicant. *ABIDUNNISSA KHATUN v. It was decided in that suit that M. had been lawfully married to K., that S. was the lawful son of K. by M., and that A. was not the adopted son of K. In 1880 S. sued A. for possession of C.'s share in such estate, C. having died, claiming as C.'s step-brother and heir. A. set up as a defence that M. was not K.'s wife, nor was S. K.'s son. Held that, inasmuch as, although in the former suit A. and S. stood together in the same array, they were in fact opposed to each other, S. being on the side and supporting the case of his mother, and A. being the true defendant, such suit was one between the same parties as the second, and the matter of S.'s legitimacy having been raised and finally decided in the former suit by a competent Court, was res judicata and could not be again raised in the second suit. *SHADAL KHAN v. The usual mortgage-decree was passed in favour of the mortgagee, who, in execution thereof, sold a portion of the mortgaged property to B. In the course of the litigation which ended in that decree, Z purchased certain immoveable property from B, N, A, and K. Z was subsequently dispossessed of such property in execution of the decree of August 1876. He thereupon sued the holders of that decree for possession of the same, alleging that his vendors had inherited it from D; that the figures of the total of C's property given in the plaint in the former suit were erroneous, that the property now in suit was not affected by that decree, and that he had been improperly dispossessed of it. It appeared that there was in fact a mistake in the total of the extent of C's property as stated in the plaint in the former suit. Held that the plaintiff having purchased pendente lite was bound by the decree of the High Court against the persons through whom he claimed, that the claim in the former suit having been decreed in full, the property now in suit was then decreed to the present defendants, and that the claim of the plaintiff to go behind that decree could not be entertained. *HUKM SINGH v. The person whom the widow had appointed by her will, now contending that he was not bound by the order, having been, when the former suit was instituted, a minor, without any duly appointed guardian, it was held that, whether he had, or had not, by acts after attaining full age (having been nominally a party), become estopped from setting up the above, he was, at all events, bound by the order; on the ground that the widow, holding an estate at least as large as that of the Hindu widow in her husband's property, was the full representative of the estate in the former suit, the appointment made by her being such as would operate only on her death. Held also that, although a manager of the estate had been appointed under the provi-

Decision in former suit.—In execution of a decree of the Revenue Court in a suit brought by K. for arrears of rent of a certain putni, the putni was put up for sale and purchased in the name of G. The rent having again fallen into arrear, K. took proceedings against G. under Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819 for the sale of the putni, but the arrears having been paid the putni was not sold. In a suit for arrears of rent of the same putni subsequently brought by K. against G., P., and B. (the wife of P.) jointly, on the allegation that the putni had been purchased by G. benami for P. and B.,—Held that the suit was not barred by the former proceedings instituted by K. against G. under Regulation VIII of 1819. *PROSSONNO COOMAR PAL CHOWDREY v. 281. — Suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title—

A. brought a suit for a debt against B., obtained a decree, and attached certain land in execution. C. intervened, claiming the property as his, but, on the 28th March 1868 his claim was disallowed, on the ground that in two suits previously brought against C. and others for possession of the same property, on the 30th December 1863, by X and Y., whose interest had, pending the suit, been purchased by B., it had been decreed that the land belonged to B. The decrees in these suits were dated 13th and 19th January 1864, they were in favour of B., and ran in his name alone. C. had purchased a moiety of the property at an auction sale on the 7th March 1859, X and Y. claimed under a pre-existing mortgage over the same property, the equity of redemption under which had been foreclosed. C. now brought a suit against A. and B. for confirmation of his possession and a declaration of his title to the property. He alleged that B. was his servant, and had purchased the interest of X and Y. in the property benami for him, that he (C.) had made the purchase with his own money in the name of B., that the suits originally brought by X and Y. had really been compromised, that while the decrees of the 13th and 19th January 1864 were nominally in favour of B., they were really in his (C.'s) favour, and that the suit brought by X and Y. had been allowed to proceed in B.'s name, in order that C.'s title might be strengthened by a decree in his favour, B. being only nominally the decree-holder. C. also stated that, since his purchase on 7th March 1859, he had always been in possession, and he dated his cause of action from the 28th March 1868, when his claim to the property which had been attached by A in his suit against B was disallowed. The Subordinate Judge gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff C B alone appealed to the High Court. Held that C, not having been disturbed in his possession, and seeking a declaration of his title only and no relief, should have stated clearly and precisely what that title was, that as against A, who had not appealed, the decision of the Subordinate Judge was final, that as between B and C the matter was res adjudicata, that C could not go behind the decrees of the 13th and 19th January 1864 which had been passed in favour of B, and show that the purchase by B and subsequent decrees were really benami for C, and in his favour.

282. ——— Suit for share of estate of Mahomedan.—Lien for dower.—A Mahomedan died, leaving among others a widow and a sister entitled to shares in his estate. The widow got possession of the whole. The sister died, and after her death her husband, on behalf of himself and grandson, sued the widow to obtain the shares to which the deceased sister was entitled, and obtained a decree for payment of the same, after satisfaction of the widow's lien for dower, in certain proportions to himself and grandson. The husband's interest in the decree was subsequently confiscated by Government for having taken part with the enemy in the Mutiny. He subsequently died leaving his grandson. The widow died during the Mutiny, and her brother was put into possession of the property by the Government as her heir. The grandson now sued the widow's brother to recover his own and his grandfather's share, alleging that the lien for dower had been satisfied. Held, the suit was not barred by Act VIII of 1859, section 2. 285. ——— Suit for rent.—Enjoyment of and receipt of rent, Proof of.—Plaintiff sued for rent of land alleged to be a 3 annas 15 gundahs share held by him on a defined right. Defendant admitted the claim. An intervenor appeared, alleging that the land was situate in the 7 annas share of the talook, and that he had purchased 3 annas 15 gundahs of this share, for which a decree had been given to him, and that he held it as a joint coparcener. Held that as the decree did not state patently the subject-matter to be that of this suit, the principle laid down in the case of Syud Ahmed Reza, 5th August 1863, did not apply, and that as it did not clearly adjudicate against the plaintiff's right, the principle laid down in the case of Tarnee v. Bamundoss Moakhef, 1 W. R., 331, had no bearing. Accordingly the intervenor was bound to show actual and bona fide receipt of rent as required by section 77, Act X of 1859. In a previous suit instituted by one of the present defendants against the tenant for rent, one of the present plaintiffs (representing the right now claimed by all of them) intervened as a defendant, on the ground that he was the person entitled to the rent, and failed to establish his claim. Held, following the Full Bench case of *Hurri Sunker Mookerjee v. When once it is made clear that the self-same right and title is substantially in issue in two suits, the precise form in which either suit was brought, or the fact that the plaintiff in the one case was the defendant in the other, becomes immaterial. *GOBIND CHUNDER KOONDOO v. for possession of it and joined as defendants to the suit C, D, and M., to whom belonged the remaining one third share in the village. These latter persons contended, inter alia, that the family was a joint one, and that B was not competent to alienate her deceased husband's share in the village. The Court decided that the family was joint. After B's death her daughter K, whose name had been recorded in place of her mother's, made a usufructuary mortgage of another village in which her deceased father had formerly owned a share. A suit was brought by certain persons who had purchased the right in the same village of the representatives in interest of C, D, and M., against K, her mortgagee, and their vendors, to set aside the mortgage and recover the interest which they had purchased. They contended that the family was joint, and that the question whether it was joint or divided was res judicata by reason of the decision in the former litigation. Held that the question whether the family was joint or divided had not, in the former suit, been determined among the defendants inter se, but simply as against the plaintiff, and could only be res judicata against him or parties claiming under the same title; and the decree in that suit was therefore not binding against K in the hands of the present plaintiffs, who were not the assignees of the plaintiff in the former suit, but of persons who were arrayed in it as defendants along with B., K's mother, and on the same side. *Shadal Khan v. sion is given in evidence as conclusive. The words "Court of competent jurisdiction," used in section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, include the meaning that the first Court must not have been precluded by the pecuniary limit of its jurisdiction from deciding the question raised in the other. The two Courts must exercise such concurrent jurisdiction in regard to the pecuniary limit of their powers that the subject-matter of the second suit would not have been beyond the powers of the Court which disposed of the prior one. The defence made to a suit on a bond for ₹12,000 and interest thereon, in a Court having no pecuniary limit of jurisdiction, was that in a prior suit for ₹1,665, balance of interest, brought in a Court with power to try suits not exceeding ₹5,000 in value, the principal sum due on that bond had been decided to be ₹4,790. Held that the issue as to the amount of principal due on the bond had not been heard and finally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of section 13. *Misir Ragho Bardial v. 304. — Act VIII of 1859, s. 2.—Act X of 1877, s. 13.—Cross-appeal—Practice.—The decision in a suit in order to be final and conclusive, as res judicata upon an issue raised in another suit, must be the decision of a Court which would have had jurisdiction to decide the question raised in the subsequent suit, in which the prior decision is given in evidence as conclusive. This proposition, stated in the judgment in Edun v. Bechun, 8 W. R., 175, and affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Misir Ragho Bardial v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 439, is applicable equally to cases under Act VIII of 1859, section 2 (as supplemented by the general law), and to cases under the more complete enactment in Act X of 1877, section 13, which is not to be construed as having altered the former law. A suit was brought in the Court of a Subordinate Judge by a Hindu against the widow of his deceased brother, claiming his property by right of survivorship, the issue being whether, at the death of the latter, the ownership of the brothers was joint or separate. An order under Act XXVII of 1860, granting a certificate to the widow, did not, on the above issue, operate as res judicata in the widow's favour, being a proceeding of representation, and not otherwise of title. Held, also, that a decision of the same issue, in a Munsif's Court in a rent suit brought by the widow, the surviving brother, on his application having been made a party defendant under section 73 of Act VIII of 1859, did not constitute res judicata in her favour. Krishna Behari Roy v. Brajeswar Chowdhram, L. R., 2 *I. entitled by reason of the brothers having been, in fact, joint in estate), the widow could have supported the decree, without filing a cross-appeal as to that finding, on the ground that the decree had been rightly made (though not for the reason given) in her favour. RUN BAHADUR SINGH v LUCHO KOER

305. ——— Court without power to make final decision.—Issue decided in a suit not subject to appeal—Same issue raised in a subsequent suit subject to appeal—Small Cause Court suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s 13—Meaning of the words “competent to try such subsequent suit”—In 1879 the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants to recover ₹119 which he alleged had been wrongfully exacted from him by the defendants as enhanced rent of certain land in his occupation. He claimed to be owner of the land subject to a quit-rent payable to the defendants. The defendants denied his ownership, and asserted their right to levy the enhanced rent. The lower Court held that the defendants were entitled to the enhanced rent, and dismissed the plaintiff's claim, and the decree was confirmed, on appeal, by the District Court. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, which held that the plaintiff's claim being for an amount less than ₹500 and within the cognisance of a Court of Small Causes, no second appeal lay. In 1883 the plaintiff brought the present suit in the District Court to recover from the defendants the sum of ₹689 alleged to have been wrongfully exacted from him by the defendants as enhanced rent of the land in question. He made the same allegations as in the former suit. The District Judge dismissed the suit, holding it to be res judicata. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held that, although the material question in both suits was the same,—viz, as to the defendant's right to enhance the plaintiff's rent,—yet the decision of the District Court upon that point in the previous suit was not res judicata so as to prevent the question being again raised between the parties. From the decision in the former suit there was no appeal by reason of the suit being one for an amount less than ₹500. Had that suit been for a larger amount, the decision of the District Court would have been subject to an appeal to the High Court. It could not have been intended by the Legislature that a decision should acquire a conclusive importance from the fact of its being made in a suit for a small amount which it could not have had if the amount was larger. The former decision could not be appealed against to the High Court, and thus, though the District Court which gave that decision was in one sense “competent to try” the second suit, and did try it, yet it was not competent to try the second suit with final effect, as it had tried the earlier one. In section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the words “competent to try such subsequent suit or issue” must mean “competent to try the suit or issue with conclusive effect.” The District Court could not in the present suit have tried with conclusive effect, and disposed of the issue tried in the first suit, and hence the prior decision was not res judicata. *BHOLABHAI v. 306. ——— Decision in superior Court of suit cognisable by inferior Court.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 13—In a suit for possession of immoveable property before the Subordinate Judge, it was objected that the suit ought to have been instituted before the Munsif, the value of the property being less than ₹1,000. An issue having been framed on this point, other issues were also framed as to the sanity of the plaintiff, his having had possession of the property, and evidence upon all the issues was gone into. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit on the first issue, but expressed his opinion that the other issues ought also to have been decided against the plaintiff. In a subsequent suit by the plaintiff for the same relief in the Court of the Munsif,—Held that the questions depending on the issues raised, other than the issue as to the valuation of the suit, were not res judicata. *RAM GOBIND JHA v. gift exceeded the limit of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsif's Court. The suit was dismissed, but on appeal the claim of S under the deed of gift was adjudicated upon and rejected, and P obtained a decree for the land. In 1882 S. sued P to recover all the property comprised in the deed of gift: Held that S. was estopped by the decree in the former suit from claiming the house. It was contended by P. that the deed of gift was invalid. Held that, as to validity of the deed of gift, the decree of the Munsif's Court was not the decree of a competent Court within the meaning of section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and, therefore, that S. was not estopped from showing that the deed was valid, and claiming the rest of the property comprised therein. PATHUMA v SALIMAMMA

309. — Jurisdiction of Court at time suit is brought.—Decision of Munsif—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—In a suit for malikana the issue between the parties substantially raises the question of the proprietary right to the estate in respect of which the malikana is claimed, and when the question of the proprietary right has been decided in a previous suit between the same parties, a subsequent suit for malikana will be barred as res judicata. The fact that the previous suit had been brought in a Munsif's Court, whereas the present suit was brought before a Subordinate Judge, did not affect the question, inasmuch as the property was the same, and it was not shown that the present suit, if brought in 1860, would not have been within the jurisdiction of the Munsif, nor was it alleged that the suit in 1860 was beyond his jurisdiction. In section 13 of Act XIV of 1882 the words "in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit" refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the first suit is brought. Thus, when the first suit is within the jurisdiction of a Munsif, and the subsequent suit, by reason of an increase in value of the property, is beyond his jurisdiction, such subsequent suit would nevertheless be barred, inasmuch as if the subsequent suit had been brought at the time when the first suit was brought, the Munsif would have been competent to try it. *GOPI NATH CHOBEY v. Where, therefore, a suit was brought and decided in 1867 in the Court of a Deputy Collector, that Court being at the time of suit the only Court competent to try suits of the nature of the one brought, and subsequently a second suit, regarding the same subject and between some of the same parties and the re-

The Court of S. held that the land was an accretion to A's estate in the district of S. In a subsequent suit brought by B in the Court of G against A. for the land to which the subject of the former suit had been found to be an accretion.—Held that the holding in the former suit necessarily decided that the land claimed by B. was in the district of S., and therefore that the Court of G., under Act VIII of 1859, section 14, had no jurisdiction. *PAHALWAN SINGH v. By the 5th section authority was conferred on the Governor General to determine in Council, inter alia, "to what extent the decision of the Agent in civil suits shall be final." In 1834, by an order of the Governor General, it was ordered that no appeal should lie from the orders of the Agent to the Sudder Court. Held that an order of an Agent within the districts to which the Regulation applied, made previous to the passing of the Regulation, declaring A. to be the rightful heir of B., was not affected by the Regulation, and was not judicial in its nature; and that, therefore, in a subsequent suit relating to the inheritance to the same property, the heir of A. could not set up the order as conclusive. *BINODE KOOMAREE v. Held that, as the Small Cause Court could not have jurisdiction to decide as to the lien, its decree would only be relevant as showing that the defendants at the time owed the money to the plaintiff, and that it would be open to the defendant to question the execution and bona fides of the bond as affecting the property which he had taken by conveyance. *POHOLI MULLICK v. 347. ——— Decision as to validity of document.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 2—Former suit in Revenue Court.—In a suit by a tenant to recover possession of land from which he had been dispossessed by defendant under colour of a sub-lease alleged to have been extorted by force, it appeared that plaintiff had, on this very cause of action, sued the defendant in the Court of the Collector, who had found the sub-lease to be good and valid, and had dismissed the suit. Held that the suit, having once been dismissed by a Court of competent jurisdiction, could not again be entertained by the Civil Court. *HOLLOWAY v. The suit, however, was dismissed on other grounds. HEEBA RAWUT v. RACHA RAWUT

Their application was refused, and then they brought a suit in the Civil Court to set aside the Collector's order and register their names. Held that proceedings authorised to be taken in the Collector's Court under section 27, Act X of 1859, were not proceedings in a suit; and consequently that such proceedings were no bar to a suit in the Civil Court under section 2, Act VIII of 1859. *CHANDRA NARAYAN GHOSE v. 374. ——— Estoppel—Suit for a declaration of proprietary right—In 1864 the defendants served a notice upon the plaintiff demanding rent for land in his possession for which the plaintiff had not paid them rent previously. The plaintiff thereupon instituted a suit in the Revenue Court contesting his liability to pay rent for such land on the ground that he was the proprietor thereof. A decree was made in that suit on the 16th August 1865, directing the plaintiff to execute a kabuliat to pay the defendants rent for such land at a certain rate. The plaintiff did not appeal from that decree, but from its date until August 1877 paid the defendants rent for such land. On the 8th August 1877 the plaintiff instituted the present suit against the defendants in the Civil Court, in which he claimed a declaration of his proprietary right to such land, and to be maintained in possession thereof as proprietor, free from the liability to pay rent, and to have the decree of the Revenue Court dated the 16th August 1865 declared null and inoperative. Held that the plaintiff's suit in the Revenue Court not being one which that Court was competent to entertain, the decision in that suit could not be held final on the question of title raised in the present suit, and that there was nothing in the conduct of the plaintiff which estopped him from instituting the present suit. DEBI PRASAD v. plication under s. 39 of Act XVIII of 1873.—The plaintiffs in this suit, landholders, had caused a notice of ejectment to be served on the defendants, their tenants under a lease, on the ground that the tenancy had expired. The defendants applied to the Revenue Court, under section 39 of Act XVIII of 1873, contesting their liability to be ejected, on the ground that the lease was a perpetual lease. The Revenue Court held, with reference to the word "istemrari" contained in the lease, that the lease was perpetual, and defendants were not liable to be ejected. The plaintiffs thereupon sued in the Civil Court for the cancelment of the word "istemarari" in the lease, on the ground that it had been inserted fraudulently. Held, on appeal from the decree of the lower Appellate Court dismissing the suit as barred by the decision of the Revenue Court, that it was not so barred, the matter in dispute being peculiarly within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, and not one which a Revenue Court was competent finally to determine on an application under section 39 of Act XVIII of 1873. HUSAIN SHAH v. The Revenue Court decided that K held the land under a right of occupancy, and not under such lease. S thereupon sued K in the Civil Court, claiming possession of such land, on the allegation that K was a trespasser wrongfully retaining possession thereof after the expiration of his lease. Held that the decision of the Revenue Court did not render the matter in issue res judicata. Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—Act XVIII of 1873 (N.W. P. The plaintiff thereupon, under the provisions of section 39 of that Act, preferred an application contesting his liability to be ejected, alleging that he had a right of occupancy in such land jointly with the defendants and was not their sub-tenant. The Assistant Collector trying the case finally decided that the plaintiff was the sub-tenant of the defendants, and the plaintiff was ejected. The plaintiff then sued the defendants in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right as an occupancy tenant to such land and possession of the same. Held that the decision of the Assistant Collector as to the respective rights of the parties could only be regarded as incidental and ancillary to the main point to be determined by him, viz., whether, assuming the relation of landlord and tenant to exist between the parties, the plaintiff was liable to be ejected, and such decision was not a bar to a fresh determination of such rights in the Civil Court. BIRBAL v. The landholder set up as a defence to this application that S was not entitled to the occupancy of the land by inheritance, but that she was a trespasser. The Revenue Court determined that S was entitled to the occupancy of the land by inheritance, and granted her application. The landholder then sued S in the Civil Court for the possession of the land. Held, per PEARSON, J. and TURNER, J., that the question of S's title to the occupancy of the land was, with reference to the decision of the Revenue Court, res judicata, and could not again be raised in the Civil Court. Per SPANKIE, J., and OLDFIELD, J., contra. SHIMBU NARAIN SINGH v. certain land under a lease from the zemindar, alleging that the defendant was their sub-tenant, under section 36 of the N.W. P. Rent Act, 1881, caused a notice of ejectment to be served upon the latter under the provisions of that Act. The defendant did not make an application under that Act contesting his liability to be ejected, and the plaintiffs applied under sections 40 and 95 (f) of that Act for assistance to eject him. The Revenue Court trying this application rejected it, on the ground that the defendant was not a sub-tenant of the plaintiffs, but a co-sharer in their tenancy. The plaintiffs thereupon sued the defendant in the Civil Court for a declaration that the latter was not a partner with them in the lease, and for possession of the land by his ejectment therefrom. Held that the relief sought in the suit by the plaintiffs was not one which a Revenue Court could give under any of the clauses of section 95 of the Rent Act, which presupposes an admitted relation of landlord and tenant; and therefore the determination by the Revenue Court of the plaintiffs' application for ejectment of the defendant was not the decision of a Court competent to try the suit, and was no bar to its maintenance in a Civil Court, within the principle of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. LODHI SINGH v. P. Rent Act, and obtained an order for the resumption of certain plots of land, on the finding that they were resumable rent-free grants. The occupiers of the land were ejected, and the zemindar obtained possession. Subsequently the occupiers brought a suit in the Civil Court to obtain a declaration that they held the plots in question, under a license from the zemindar's predecessor in title, as orchard land, without payment of any rent or other allowance to the landlord, and that they were entitled to retain the land on this footing, so long as it should continue to be occupied with trees. They sought to recover possession of the soil and timber, asking also for "a determination of the nature of their tenure" therein. Held that the cognisance of the suit by the Civil Court was not barred by the provisions of section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to entertain it was not ousted by section 95 of the Rent Act, since the "matter" presented by the plaintiffs was not one "on which an application of the nature mentioned in that section" could by them have been made to a Court of Revenue, clauses (a), (c), and (n) of the section not being applicable to the case. AJUDHIA PRASAD v. The tenant then sued in the Civil Court to establish his right to compel the landlord to grant him a pottah at favourable rates for the next year, by virtue of the special agreement put forward by him in the suit in the Revenue Court. Held that the decision of the Revenue Court was no bar to the suit. HARIKA RAMAYYAR v. 385. ——— Decision as to right to possession.—Dismissal of application by Collector to raise attachment.—S, the mortgagee of a talookdar village, obtained a decree upon his mortgage against his mortgagor, the talookdar of the village, under which S attached the village. The Collector of the district in which the attached village was situated thereupon came in under section 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, and sought to raise the attachment, but, as he failed to appear when the matter came on for adjudication, his application was dismissed. The village was then sold under the decree and was purchased by S, the mortgagee. Upon S seeking to obtain possession of the village, he was resisted by the Collector, whereupon S (after proceedings ineffectually taken by him under section 269 of the Code) filed a suit against the Collector praying to be put in possession of the village. Held by the Appellate Court (affirming the decision of TUCKER, J.) that the right of S to be put in possession of the village was, as between him and the Collector, res judicata by reason of the dismissal of the Collector's application under section 246 of the Code (to set aside which dismissal the Collector had not filed a suit within the year allowed for that purpose), and that S ought therefore to have been at once put in possession of the village without further proof of his title. COLLECTOR OF AHMEDABAD v. B.* one fourth of the field, and to S. N. and B. N. conjointly he awarded one fourth, but as to the remaining one half he passed no decree, as it had not been claimed in the plaint. *S. passed a decree in their favour. This decree was confirmed by the Joint Judge. Held that the decrees of the lower Courts were erroneous, and that the claim of the plaintiffs was barred by the provisions of section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, but leave was granted to them to apply to the Court below for a review of the decree passed in the former suit. VYASRAV BALAJI v. SUBHAJI NARAYAN

[5 Bom., A. C., 173]

391. ——— Plaint in former suit, Description of property in.—Variance between body of plaint and schedule.—The father of the appellant obtained a decree against G.'s widow and his reversionary heirs, who had intervened in the suit, for possession of property mortgaged by the widow. In the schedule annexed to the plaint the mortgaged property was described as "Mouzah B., usli with dakhil,"—that is, Mouzah B. K. and Mouzah M. B.,—but in the body of the plaint it was described simply as "Mouzah B." On the death of plaintiff in that suit, the reversionary heirs of G. sued the appellant for an adjudication of their right to 16 annas of Mouzah M. B., and it was found that Mouzahs B. K. and M. B. were not usli with dakhil but distinct mouzahs, and that the mortgage-deed did not include Mouzah M. B. Held, affirming the judgment of the High Court, that in the first suit the Court was called on to adjudicate upon the property as described in the body of the plaint, and not as described in the schedule annexed thereto, and that the question in the latter suit was therefore not res judicata. *HET NABAIN SINGH v. 392. ——— Refusal to decide question of title.—Reference of party to another suit.—In a suit between A. and B. a question of title was raised and decided in B.'s favour in the Court of first instance, but on appeal the Judge refused to go into it, saying that B. might bring a fresh suit. Held that a subsequent suit by B. raising the same question was not barred as res judicata. *Watson v. 394. ——— Issue advisedly left undecided in former suit.—In 1878 A., as the auction-purchaser of a talook, sued 35 persons for possession of a part of this talook. In this suit the issues raised were—(1) whether A. had purchased the whole talook, or an 8-anna share of the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors therein; (2) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the talook as given in the plaint. The Court held that A. had purchased the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors in the talook, and as it appeared that some of the defendants were not judgment debtors, and as it did not appear what portions of the talook were held by the several defendants, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit within the proper time. In 1880 A. brought a fresh suit against 16 of the same defendants and 19 others for possession of a portion of the same talook. The issues raised were—(1) whether the suit was barred under section 13 of the Code; (2) whether A. had purchased the whole or a portion of the talook; (3) whether the defendants were in possession of all the disputed land, and, if not, what portions of the talook were held by the several defendants, (4) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the talook. The Munsif held that the suit was not barred, and on the merits gave A. a decree. The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was barred, and refused to go into the merits. Held that the question whether A. had purchased the whole or only a portion of the talook was res judicata, but that the question as to what lands A. was entitled to by virtue of his purchase having been left undecided in the former suit, A. was entitled to a decision on that point. RAM CHARAN BHARDAR v. 395. — Judgment in former suit appealed from.—Stay of execution pending appeal.—Review—Held that a former judgment by a Court of competent jurisdiction upon the same cause of action was conclusive between the same parties in a subsequent suit brought in another Court, notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal against it, but that the Judge passing a decree in the subsequent suit might, upon application made to him, and security being given, stay the execution of it until the appeal in the former suit was decided, and might, if the decree in the former suit was reversed, entertain an application for the review of his own decision in the subsequent suit. BULKIRAM NATHURAM v. 398. — Point decided by lower Court, but not dealt with on appeal.—Issue as to enhancement of rent—Subsequent suit for enhancement—In a suit for enhancement of rent, the Munsif found that the service of notice was sufficient, but that the rent could not be enhanced. On appeal, the District Judge found that the service was insufficient, and dismissed the suit, expressly declining to consider the question whether the rent was enhanceable. In a subsequent suit for enhancement by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, the Munsif found that no sufficient ground for enhancement had been made out, and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge agreed with the Munsif on this point, and held also that the decision of the Munsif in the first suit, that the rent could not be enhanced, was res judicata. Held that where the decision of a lower Court is appealed to a superior tribunal, which for any reason does not think fit to decide the matter, the question is left open, and is not res judicata. CHUNDER COOMAR MITTER v. 399. — Effect of appealing against a judgment.—Civil Procedure Codes (Act VIII of 1859, s. 2; Act X of 1877, s. 13, expl. 4)—Title.—Trespass.—Damages—When the judgment of a Court of first instance upon a particular issue is appealed against, that judgment ceases to be res judicata, and becomes res sub judice, and if the Appellate Court declines to decide that issue, and disposes of the case on other grounds, the judgment of the first Court upon that issue is no more a bar to a future suit than it would be if that judgment had been reversed by the Court of Appeal. NILVABU v. NILVABU. I. L. R., 6 Bom., 110

400. — Effect of judgment pending appeal.—Dismissal of appeal for want of prosecution—The plaintiff sued to recover two villages from the defendants, claiming title from C, the purchaser. The first defendant alleged that her husband, not C, was the purchaser. This question was determined in a former suit, in which the present first defendant was plaintiff, and the present plaintiff defendant, in favour of the present plaintiff, by the Civil Judge, and the decision was confirmed on appeal by the Sudder Court. An appeal to Her Majesty in Council was dismissed for want of prosecution. 11. PRIVATE RIGHTS.

402. — Prescriptive right.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13, expl. 5.—Explanation 5 of section 13 of Act X of 1877 only applies to cases where several different persons claim an easement or other right under one common title, —as, for instance, where the inhabitants of a village claim by custom a right of pasturage over the same tract of land, or to take water from the same spring or well. Where, therefore, A, in defending a suit brought against him by B to have it declared that he had a right to build a wall across a drain, set up a prescriptive right to use the drain, and it was decided that no such prescriptive right existed in A, and subsequently C brought a suit against B, claiming to use the same drain as an easement, and asking for the removal of the wall in question in the former suit, and B set up the judgment in the suit between himself and A as a bar to the suit,—Held that the right claimed by C, not being one which he and other inhabitants of the neighbourhood claimed under one common title, but a prescriptive right which he claimed individually in respect of his own house and premises, and depending upon the length of time he had used the right, was a separate claim, and that the judgment in the suit between B and A did not operate as a bar to his suit. *KALISHUNKUR DOSS v. 405. — Right to fees for hereditary services.—Decision in former suit.—In an action to recover fees claimed for services as an hereditary family and village priest, it appeared that a deceased brother of the plaintiff had recovered judgment against one of the defendants and others in an action for similar fees. Held that the former judgment was not conclusive in favour of the plaintiff, nor as against a brother of one of the original defendants. *KRISHNAMBHAT BIN SHIVRAMBHAT v. In a former suit between the predecessor and the plaintiff and the first defendant, the claim to sit at the right side of the idol at festivals was admitted, but the right to receive a cake on the same occasion was disallowed. Held that the claim of the plaintiff, so far as it sought to establish the plaintiff's right, was res judicata. *AROHAKAM SRINIVASA DIKSHATULU v. 407. — Right to water for irrigation.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13, expl. 5.—In 1881 A sued B, C, and others for damages for the loss of his crops by the diversion of a water-channel by the defendants. A claimed a right common to himself and other ryots of his village to use the water during the day-time under an arrangement by which B, C, and the other defendants in the suit were entitled to use the water during the night-time. In 1882 A and four other ryots, not parties to the former suit, sued B, C, and thirteen others, not parties to the former suit, for a decree declaring that the plaintiffs were entitled to the exclusive use of the water in the channel by day. The lower Courts held that the suit was barred by section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that, as between the plaintiffs other than A and the defendants, and as between A and the defendants other than B and C, the suit was not barred by section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. THANAKOTI v MUNIAPPA . . . After the marriage B. lived at the house of her step-father, where A. visited from time to time. The marriage was not consummated. Eleven years after the marriage,—viz, in 1884,—the husband called upon the wife to go to his house and live with him, and she refused. —Hindu law.—Suit by Hindu husband out of caste at time of suit.—Decree for restitution conditional on plaintiff's obtaining restoration to caste.—In a suit by a Hindu, a Sunar by caste, against his wife for restitution of conjugal rights, it was found that the plaintiff, in consequence of having left his wife and cohabited with a Mahomedan woman (whom, however, he had left at the time of suit), had been turned out of caste, but that the misconduct of which he had been guilty was not of such a character as to render him liable to perpetual excommunication, and, upon making certain amends, he could obtain restoration to his caste. Held that, while the plaintiff was entitled to come into Court for the relief prayed, unless, in the circumstances above stated, the marriage had, under the Hindu law, been dissolved, the Court was bound, when asked to employ coercive process to compel a wife to return to her husband, not to disregard any reasonable objection she might raise to such process being granted, either on the ground that she had been subjected before to personal injury or cruelty at the hands of her husband, or that she went in fear of one or the other, or that the husband was actually living in adultery with another woman, or that, if she resumed cohabitation or association with him, he being outcasted, she would herself incur the risk of being put out of caste. Held, therefore, that in decreeing a claim of this description, a Court was entitled, if it saw good reason to do so, while recognising the civil rights of a husband to his wife, to put such conditions upon the enforcement of his rights by legal process as the circumstances of the case might fairly demand, and that, applying this principle to the present case, the defendant might reasonably ask the Court, before compelling her return to her husband, to make it a condition that he should first obtain his restoration to caste. Held also that, under the Hindu law, the fact that a husband had had adulterous intercourse with another woman, which had ceased at the time of suit, was not an answer to a claim by him for restitution of conjugal rights. *PAIGI v. [I. L. R., 8 All., 78]

13. ————— Ground for suit.—Mahomedan law.—Dower.—Loan of wife for dower.—In a suit brought by a husband for restitution of conjugal rights, the parties being Sunni Mahomedans governed by the Hanafi law, the defendant pleaded that the suit was not maintainable, as the plaintiff had not paid her dower-debt. The plaintiff thereupon deposited the whole of the dower-debt in Court. It appeared that the defendant's dower had been fixed without any specification as to whether it was to be wholly or partly prompt. It also appeared that she had attained majority before the marriage, and that she had cohabited with the plaintiff for three months after marriage, and there was no evidence that she had ever demanded payment of her dower before the suit was filed, or that she had refused cohabitation on the ground of non-payment. Besides the plea already mentioned, she also relied upon allegations of divorce and cruelty, but these allegations were found to be untrue. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, holding that inasmuch as the plaintiff had not paid the dower-debt at the time when he brought his suit, he had no cause of action under the provisions of the Mahomedan law. Held by the Full Bench that the lower Appellate Court's view of the Mahomedan law relating to conjugal rights and the husband's obligation to pay dower was erroneous; and that the plaintiff, under the circumstances of the case, had a right to maintain the suit. *ABDUL KADIR v. 14. ————— Hindu law.—Defence to suit.—Cruelty of husband.—A suit for restitution of conjugal rights may be maintained by a Hindu but quære, if the same state of circumstances which would justify such a suit, or which would be an answer to such a suit in the case of a European, would be equally so in the case of a Hindu. Where cruelty on the part of the husband has been condoned by the wife, a much smaller measure of offence would be sufficient to neutralise the condonation than would have justified the wife, in the first instance, in separating from her husband. But the act or acts constituting the offence must be of such a nature as to give the wife just reason to suppose that the husband is about to renew his former course of conduct, and consequently to entertain well founded apprehension for her personal safety. *JOGENDRONUNDINI DOSSEE v. Every person who receives a married woman into his house, and suffers her to continue there after he has received notice from the husband not to harbour her, is liable to an action for damages or injunction, unless the husband has by his cruelty or misconduct forfeited his marital rights, or has turned his wife out of doors, or has, by some insult or ill-treatment, compelled her to leave him. 18. ———— Divorce.—Hindu law.—Custom—Where a Hindu sued his wife for restitution of conjugal rights and the defendant pleaded divorce, it was held that though the Hindu law does not contemplate divorce, still in those districts where it is recognised as an established custom it would have the force of law. 2. ————— Grant in lieu of maintenance.—Limitation.—Although a grant of a mokurrari lease in lieu of maintenance may be resumable by the grantor and his heirs, yet, if the grantor or any of his successors receives distinct notice of a claim on the part of the grantee to hold in perpetuity and not subject to resumption, and allows twelve years to go by without contesting such claim, he (such grantor or successor) will be barred for the time of his own enjoyment. PETAMBAR BABOO v. NILMONY SINGH DEO

[I. L. R., 3 Calc., 793]

3. ————— Grant in lieu of maintenance.—Hindu law.—Alienation.—Impartible estate—The mere fact of the impartibility of an estate, or rather the mere fact that the succession to a zemindari is governed by the law of primogeniture, does not deprive the zemindar of his ordinary right to alienate it, or any portion of it, during his lifetime. Accordingly, an ordinary mokurrari lease, granted by a zemindar of lands forming portion of a zemindari the succession to which is governed by the law of primogeniture, is valid, and the lands comprised in it cannot be resumed on the death of the grantor by his successor. But a mokurrari khorposh, or allowance for maintenance, or an estate for life in lieu of maintenance, granted by the owner of a zemindari impartible by special custom but otherwise subject to Bengal law, to a member of his family, is resumable by his successor on the death of the grantor. UDDOY ADITTYA DEB v. 6. ——— Right to resume permanent tenure.—Forfeiture of tenure—Non-payment of Government revenue—Where an ancient and permanent tenure is held by several persons in separate shares, and some of the sharers make default in the payment of their quota of the Government assessment, the portion of the tenure held by the sharers who paid their shares of the assessment cannot be resumed or forfeited by the Government. 8. ——— Right to resume Neemuk Sayer mehals.—Beng. Regs. VIII and XXVII of 1793.—Right of Government as Sovereign—The resumption by Government of Neemuk Sayer mehals (saltpetre-duty estates) upheld, the sanads of the Subadar of Behar, the ruling power previous to the Company's accession to the Dewanny, purporting to grant the Government as mokurrari istemrari a permanent fixed rent, being declared forgeries. Quare,—Whether the Neemuk Sayer mehals being a sayer right was not wholly abolished by Bengal Regulation XXVII of 1793, and the Bengal Government in its Sovereign character had not an absolute right to resume. The settlement by the Government with a proprietor of the soil under the decennial settlement, made perpetual by Bengal Regulation VIII of 1793, relates to land revenue only, and not to sayer duties claimed by a party not a land proprietor. GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. RESUMPTION—continued.1. RIGHT TO RESUME—continued.*9. ——— Right to resume subordinate tenure by istemrardar.—Customary right—

A custom was alleged entitling a Patwī Thakur, or chief belonging to the Rathor clan of Rajputs, who was the istemrardar of an ancient and impartible talook in Ajmere, to resume land formerly part of it, but granted some generations back as a subordinate, estate to a collateral relation of the chief. The ground of the resumption claimed was that the last successor to the estate so granted had died without issue and without adopting. Held that the Commissioner's judgment, which was that a right of resumption exercisable merely on the above ground had not been established, was correct, being supported to some extent certainly by answers received by the Chief Commissioner on inquiry from the neighbouring durbars of Rajputana chiefs, and, on the whole, by the balance of the evidence. RAO BAHADUR SINGH v. 10. ——— Right of maafedar.—Recognition of right to resume.—Limitation.—Cause of action—Held that mere recognition of right to resume contained in the wajib-ul-urz, where the grant existed many years previous to the date of that document, does not re-grant to a maafedar so as to give plaintiff a new starting-point from which his right to resume should date. DAYUM KHAN v. 14. ——— Right of zemindar.—Presumption.—Land held under different sanads.—Limit of area in suit for resumption—When land beyond 100 bighas in extent is admittedly held by a lakhirajdar, the presumption is that it is held under one grant, and that it is resumable by Government, and not by the zemindar. To rebut the presumption, the zemindar must show that the land, though beyond 100 bighas in extent, is held under different sanads. JOGENDEBO NARAIN ROY v. HUBRY DOSS ROY

The release of lands covered by one such sanad from the claim of Government to resume, on the ground that they were under 50 bighas, does not bar the zemindar's right to resume them. ELIAS v. 18. ——— *Beng. 3. EFFECT OF RESUMPTION.

26. ———— Finality of proceedings.—Injury to parties—Diluvion—Resumption proceedings are final and not liable to question by the Civil Courts. But when proceedings take place in the nature of extensive settlements with other parties after intermediate and temporary settlements, and acts are done wholly without jurisdiction, or lands are taken not included in the original decree, there should be a remedy to parties deeming themselves to have been wronged thereby. If lands adjudged to Government in a resumption suit diluviate and re-form on the same site, Government does not thereby lose its rights to them, nor is it obliged to institute wholly new proceedings. Diluvion does not create any new right. COLLECTOR OF DACCA v. KISHEN KISHORE CHATTERJEE. JUGO BUNDHOO BOSE v. COLLECTOR OF DACCA . . . W. R., 1864, 273

27. ———— Finality of resumption-decree.—Settlement proceedings.—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—The ruling of the late Sudder Court as to the final and conclusive character of a resumption-decree was held not to apply to what was subsequently done administratively by a settlement officer, the proper distinction being that the decree of the resumption Court as to the liability of the resumed mehal to be assessed with a Government demand is final; but the subsequent dealing by the settlement officer with alleged proprietary right and claim to land not mentioned in the decree, is open to the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. MAHOMED GAZEE CHOWDERY v. XXVII of 1802.—In a suit against a Collector for an illegal seizure and subsequent usurpation of plaintiff's shares in an Agraharam village for non-payment of tirvai due from other tenants of the village, and to recover the increased tirvai imposed by the Collector,—Held that the plaintiff's right to enjoy his share of the village lands under the original pottah was not legally determined by resumption; and that, continuing liable only to the fixed rent, the plaintiff was entitled to the return of the amount paid under compulsion, in excess of such rent, at the date of the suit. *Madras Regulation XXVII of 1802 considered. The only question decided by the Government in resuming was that those who claimed the land as lakhiraj had not been able to prove that the land was held under any such religious or charitable trust as would debar Government from resuming. *LEELANUND SINGH BAHADOOR v. His not adopting either course for a long period was construed into assent on his part to receive the profits, minus the Government revenue, as security. JOY PROKASH NARAIN v. RADHA KISHEN . . . W. lands rent-free was ruled by Government to have ceased upon the death, but the inam was continued to his representatives subject to the payment of assessment, under the Government circular of 1854. Held that the original estate in the lands was not destroyed; that no new title in the inamdar's representatives was created, and that the lands continued chargeable in their hands with any valid specific liens created upon them by the inamdar. VISHNU TRIMBAK v. 40. ———— Effect on inamdar.—Inam.—Landlord and tenant.—On the resumption of an inam, the inamdar's right to exemption from the payment of the Government assessment ceases, and the inamdar becomes liable to pay such assessment; but all his other rights remain unaffected, and therefore those who were his tenants before the resumption do not thereby cease to be so, and can be ejected if they are not permanent tenants, or are not otherwise entitled to remain in possession. GANGABHAI v. In 1858 the Collector treated the defendant as occupant of the land in question for the purposes of assessment, and again in 1860 entered his name as occupant in the Government books. In January 1868 the widow of A. adopted the plaintiff as his son. In 1881 the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover possession of the land let to the defendant in 1857. The defendant contended that the land was not the private land of A., but belonged to the State of Kagvad, which was resumed on his death by the Government; and that the plaintiff's claim was barred by the law of limitation. The Subordinate Judge allowed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the land was the private property of A., and that the claim was not barred. The District Judge, on appeal, held that the land was not the private property of the Chief, but was the property of the State, and that, on the resumption of the State by the British Government, the defendant's lease came to an end, and the relation of landlord and tenant, previously existing between the Chief and the defendant, ceased. He also held that the plaintiff's claim was barred by

An order rejecting an application for registration under section 76 of the Registration Act of 1871, being, in respect of the Court pronouncing it, a final order of adjudication between the parties, is so far in the nature of a "decree" within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, as to fall within the operation of the sections of that Act which provide for the admission of a review. He was represented by a pleader at the adjourned hearing. He subsequently applied for the re-admission of the suit on the ground that he had been prevented by illness from depositing the money. Held that the application should not have been treated as one under section 119, Civil Procedure Code, but might fairly be regarded as an application for review of judgment under section 376, and in that view the misconstruction by the Munsif of the nature of the application was not a sufficient reason for depriving the plaintiff of the relief which he not inequitably obtained by the order passed in it; and the Court of first instance was directed to call on the plaintiff to pay the fee payable on his application for a review of judgment, and in the event of his complying with the requisition, to give effect to the Munsif's order for re-admission of the suit. RAM SUNDAR SINGH v. NARAYAN BIN SIDOJI v. DAVUDBHAI VALAD FATEBHAI . . . 9 Bom., 238

22. ——— Power after admission and hearing of special appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 376—A Judge is right in refusing to entertain an application for review where a special appeal has been admitted, tried, and disposed of. The words of section 376, Act VIII of 1859, "special appeal shall have been admitted," referred to cases which had advanced beyond the inchoate stage of appeals, and in which it had been shown prima facie that there were errors in law. RAJ DHAREE LALL v. MOHADEO SINGH . . . 11 W. R., 511

23. ——— Correction of clerical error—A lower Appellate Court has a right to grant a review of its own judgment for the purpose of correcting a clerical error, even after a special appeal from its decision has been heard and determined by the High Court. A lower Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to review its own judgment so as to modify its substance,—as, for example, to alter an award of costs after a special appeal from its decision has been heard and determined by the High Court. OOMANUND ROY v. SUTTISH CHUNDER ROY . . . 9 W. R., 471

24. ——— Power of lower Appellate Court after dismissal of special appeal.—24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15—Upon the dismissal of a special appeal by the High Court, the appellant in special appeal applied to the High Court for a review of judgment upon the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was rejected, on the ground that the Court could not take cognisance of the merits of a case in special appeal, and therefore could not admit a review upon fresh evidence. The special appellant then applied to the lower Appellate Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was admitted, and a review of the judgment was allowed. On application to the High Court under section 15 of the Charter Act,—Held the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to admit the application for review. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF JADUNATH MOOKERJEE

25. ——— Power where one of several defendants has appealed.—Application for review on behalf of other defendants—The preferring of an appeal against a decision by one defendant does not deprive another defendant of his right to apply for a review of the same decision with reference to section 376, Act VIII of 1859. *BUNKOO LALL SINGH v. A party petitioning, after the Code of Civil Procedure came into force, for the review of a judgment in appeal passed in 1849, is entitled to be governed by the terms of the old law (Regulation XXVI of 1814), which allows a review in respect to a decree from which "no further appeal" may have been admitted by a superior Court; and a "further appeal" included both a second or special appeal and a summary appeal. *JOOGUL KISHORE SINGH v. A review, therefore, should be presented with as much expedition as possible with a view to the re hearing before the same Judge. The exceptions to this rule are allowable only ex necessitate,—that is, from death of the original Judge or some unexpected and unavoidable cause which prevents him from hearing the review. 5. GROUND FOR REVIEW.

50. ——— Good and sufficient reason.—Change of incumbent of office of Judge—A Court has the power, for any reason that it may consider good and sufficient, to grant a review of its judgment; and if the application is made within ninety days, the Court's estimate of those reasons cannot be interfered with by an Appellate Court. The procedure is not different when there has been a change (during the ninety days) of office incumbents. MONTOORA v. ABLAK ROY. . . 11 W. R., 197

51. ——— Unfairness of decision.—Power to admit review.—When once a Civil Court has passed a final decision between the parties it loses jurisdiction over the suit, except for the purposes of executing the decree; and it cannot hold a new trial of the same unless, for some reason within the Procedure Act, the first trial appears to have been unfair between the two parties. *LULEET MOHUN ROY CHOWDHRY v. 63. ——— Further consideration of evidence.—Probability of different conclusion—It is not a proper ground for granting a review of judgment that a Judge by going through the evidence a second time might arrive at a different conclusion. CHUNDER CHURN AUGGRODANY v. LOO-DUNRAM DEB . 25 W. R., 324

64. ——— Opportunity to re-argue case.—Chance of altering decision—A review cannot be given merely for the purpose of allowing the parties to re-argue the case upon the evidence, upon the chance of eventually throwing doubt upon the decision already passed. KOLEMOODDEEN MUNDUL v. HERRUN MUNDUL . 24 W. R., 186

65. ——— Error in decision.—Additional evidence—Where a Subordinate Judge admitted a review on the representation of plaintiff that he (the Judge) had made a mistake as to the subject of a certain dakh in a Government halabadee chitta, the applicant filing with his petition for review another chitta and other evidence for the purpose of convincing the Court that it had made an error,—Held that an error of this kind was sufficient to found the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the review. *GUNESH RAM SURMAH v. 66. ——— Erroneous refusal to admit additional evidence—Where a Judge on appeal declined to admit additional evidence, on the ground that the application should have been made to the lower Court,—Held it was a ground for applying for a review of his order pointing out his mistake. *RAM LALL v. 67. ——— Decision of special appeal on ground not taken in lower Courts.—Review of special appeal—It is not a sufficient ground for a review of judgment passed on special appeal that the point which was then raised, and on which the Court's decision was based, was one not raised in either of the lower Courts, and especially, as in this case, where the question was pointedly raised in the special appeal, and the respondent had ample time to prepare himself to meet the statement therein. COWELL v. WISE . 12 W. R., 409

69. ——— Later Privy Council decision.—Facts not fully placed before Court—A review cannot be granted on the ground that if the facts had been better or more fully placed before the Court the judgment would have been different, or even on the ground of a subsequent decision of a question of law by the Privy Council in another suit where there has been no discovery of new evidence such as is contemplated in section 376 of Act VIII of 1859. *JADUB RAM DEB v. 80. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 376.—During the pendency of a suit for rent a plaintiff applied for postponement on the ground that he was unable to obtain a copy of a document which he had applied for from the Collectorate. The Munsif refused postponement and gave him a modified decree. The plaintiff subsequently obtained a review of judgment and a decree in full. The Judge on appeal decided that the Munsif was wrong in admitting the review, because the plaintiff had not mentioned that he was previously unacquainted with the existence of the document. Held that the review was properly admitted under Act VIII of 1859, section 376. GOOR DYAL ROY v. A third party, in execution of another decree obtained against the same defendant, put up for sale the property included in the plaintiff's mortgage, and himself bought the right, title, and interest of his judgment-debtor in the property mortgaged to the plaintiff. and brought a suit against the defendant and the third party to have it declared that the latter held the property subject to his mortgage. The suit was decreed by the Subordinate Judge, but eventually dismissed by the High Court, on the ground that the plaintiff, by suing for his money-decree only, had deprived himself of the benefit of his lien as against the third party. The plaintiff thereupon brought another suit against the same parties to recover possession of the mortgaged property, which suit eventually came up before a Full Bench, where it was decided that the plaintiff had no right to bring the suit for recovery of possession, but that his proper course was to sue to have his lien upon the property declared, the Court intimating that it would be open to the plaintiff to apply for a review of judgment in the suit originally brought by him. On the review coming on to be heard, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to a review of that judgment, and that the case was distinguishable from the general rule as to reviews laid down in Madhub Chunder Ghose v. Act VIII of 1859, s 377.—Just and reasonable cause for delay in filing petition of review—Upon the appeal of one of the defendants to the Privy Council, the judgment of the High Court was reversed. the 29th January 1883, a certain conveyance was filed with the plaint, but up to the hearing this conveyance had been protected from discovery. B.'s counsel had, however, had a copy thereof delivered to him at the time B.'s written statement was being drawn, and a copy briefed to him at the hearing. At the hearing, A.'s counsel stated that the effect of the conveyance was to vest the entirety of a certain property in A., this view was accepted by B.'s counsel, who did not read the conveyance. The only issue in the case was "who was in possession of the property," and the Court decided this issue on the 5th February in favour of the plaintiff. On the 26th February B. brought a suit against A. to set aside this conveyance on the ground of fraud. And in certain proceedings in this case taken on the 31st March, B.'s counsel discovered, as he alleged for the first time, that under the conveyance a moiety of a seven-twenty-fourth share remained in B. On that day instructions were given to B.'s counsel to draw up a petition of review of the judgment of the 5th February. This petition, owing to the Easter vacation, was not, and could not have been, presented till the 9th April. Held that the words "sufficient reason" in section 623 of the Code should receive a liberal construction, and should be construed so as to do substantial justice to the parties; that as in this case it appeared to the Court that the construction placed upon the conveyance by B.'s counsel was the correct one, "sufficient reason" had been shown for making the application. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF SOLOMON. GOPAUL CHUNDER LAHIRY v. SOLOMON

Held, on appeal, per GARTH, C. J.—Although it is difficult and perhaps undesirable to attempt to define precisely the meaning of the words "any other sufficient reason" in section 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, yet from the earlier part of the clause it is clear that a point which might have been, but which was not, discovered at the trial by the exercise of due diligence, was not intended by the section to afford any sufficient reason for review. Per WILSON, J.—Seemle,—If at a trial all parties, counsel on both sides, and the Judge, are under a misapprehension as to the contents of a document, or even if the Judge alone is misled on such a point, and in consequence a wrong decree is made, the mistake ought to be corrected on review. *GOPAL CHANDRA LAHIRI v. 103. ——— Discovery of new evidence.—Lapse of time—The discovery of new evidence may make it proper to grant a review, but the circumstances must be very special,—the more so when the application for review is made many years after the date of the decree, and the evidence discovered must be of a clear and conclusive character. *HEERA LALL GHOSE v. 105. ——— Adoption of daughter's son. — Custom — Breaches of custom. — Practice — New case set up in special appeal.—An application for review was presented to the High Court more than eighteen months after time, the applicant alleging that, soon after the decision sought to be reviewed, he was engaged in collecting instances of the special custom relied upon by him in support of his claim. The special custom was not set up in the Courts below, but an objection was taken for the first time in special appeal that an issue regarding it should have been raised in the lower Courts. No instance of such special custom had been given in evidence. It was urged that the applicant was a minor until shortly before the making of the High Court decree, and was only represented by his adoptive mother as his guardian. The High Court considered that there was no sufficient excuse for the delay, and rejected the application, observing that, unless upon very strong grounds and under very special circumstances, the Court would hesitate to permit a party at such a stage of his suit to set up a case which was not set up for him in the Courts below, where his professional representatives must have been well aware whether such a case could be legitimately set up, and abstained from any attempt to do so. GOPAL SAFRAY v. 106. ——— Just and reasonable cause — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 377.—The plaintiff in a suit applied, more than two years after the proper time, for a review of judgment in such suit, filing with his application a copy of a decision by the High Court, which had been passed subsequently to the date of such judgment, in support of a contention contained in his application which should have been, but was not, urged at the hearing of his suit. Such contention and the other arguments and statements contained in his application might have been adduced within the time allowed by law for an application for a review of judgment. Held that, as such contention might have been urged at the first hearing of the case, there was no "just and reasonable cause" for preferring the application after time, and the Court of first instance was therefore not warranted in granting the application and reviewing its judgment. MADHO DAS v. On this the plaintiff applied for a review of both judgments. Held that, though his

111. ——— Issue not noticed in the lower Court. — Arguments on appeal and review—In the first Court an issue was raised whether or no the hearing of this suit was barred by the law of limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was, that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated on the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it, for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge or in the first Court. On application for review, it was urged that the Court ought to have listened to this ground, but the Court adhered to its former decision. Counsel should not be heard to re-argue a case on review upon the same points as were argued on special appeal. RAJ KUNWAR v. INDIRJIT KUNWAR

After this, two of them applied for a review, and the decrees were modified (a portion of the claim being declared barred by limitation), but on a ground not applicable to all the defendants. Held that, if these decrees were separate decrees in each appeal, the High Court had no power to modify the decrees in which there was no application for review, and which therefore remained in force, and should be executed. *PEGOO JAN v. The defendant showed cause, but his objections were overruled, the review was granted, both plaintiff and defendant adduced new evidence, and a decree was given for the plaintiff. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed this decision on the ground relied upon by the defendant in showing cause in the lower Court,—namely, that the defendant had not established that with due diligence he could not have brought forward in the original trial the evidence upon which his application for review was based. Held, on special appeal, that the fact of the defendant having adduced fresh evidence in the Court below did not debar him from objecting before the Subordinate Judge that the review was wrongly granted, because the order admitting it was final. *PRANNATH BHADOORY v. This finding having been confirmed by the lower Appellate Court, an application was made for a review, and on review that Court reversed its former decree on the ground that no right of occupancy could be acquired. Held that on review the lower Appellate Court ought not to have entertained the objection that the land was not agricultural without remanding the case for the trial of a fresh issue on that point. KHORESH MAHOMED v MAHOMED TAKEE . 10 C. The lower Appellate Court at first doubted the genuineness of the pottah and reversed that decision, but, on an application for review, admitted additional evidence on both sides and dismissed the appeal. Held that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have allowed points to be explained away in the review stage by admitting additional evidence thereon, though in this particular case injustice was not done. TEKAET KHOD NARAIN SINGH v. The review having been admitted, the case was re-heard before the Judge last mentioned and another Judge, and a conclusion was arrived at contrary to the former decision. An application was made by the plaintiff for a review of this judgment, and notice was issued to the defendant, who came in thereupon, and judgment was then delivered at considerable length, in which the Judge delivering it said that no sufficient ground had been made out for the admission of a review, and that he dismissed the appeal. Held that the last judgment was a re-hearing, and that it dismissed, not the application for the admission of a review, but the case itself on its merits. LEKRAJ ROY v. 11. VERDICT OF JURY AND MISDIRECTION.

71. ——— Ground for interference with verdict.—Power of High Court—Verdict of jury not manifestly erroneous—The Court will not interfere with the finding of a jury unless their verdict is shown to be manifestly erroneous. A prisoner was charged under sections 302 and 304 of the Penal Code, and the Judge at the trial added a further charge under section 325. The Judge in his charge to the jury directed them that in the event of their finding the charges under sections 302 and 304 unsustainable, they might find the prisoner guilty under section 325. The jury unanimously acquitted the prisoner under the charge framed under section 302, and a majority of them acquitted him under the charge framed under section 304, but a majority of them found him guilty under the charge framed under section 325. The Judge disagreed with their finding as regarded the charge framed under section 304, and referred the case to the High Court under section 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The High Court refused to interfere with the verdict, on ground that the verdict could not be said to be manifestly erroneous, the Judge having heard the evidence and having expressed his opinion to the jury that they might find the prisoner guilty under section 325. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JACQUET . . . I. L. R., 11 Calc., 85 verdict, but when there is nothing which can, if believed, amount to proof, the case should not be put to the jury at all, as a verdict of guilty cannot under such circumstances be sustained. Under such circumstances the Court will set a conviction aside. QUEEN v. RUTTON DASS . . . 16 W. R., Cr., 19

SOHRAIE* . . . 13 W. R., Cr., 33

74. ——— Omission to charge jury properly.—Power of High Court to set aside verdict—Omission to sum up properly to the jury is, if the prisoner is thereby prejudiced, an error in law such as to justify a Court of Appeal in setting aside the verdict. REG v. FATTECHAND VASTACHAND [5 Bom., Cr., 85]

75. ——— Misdirection.—Trial by jury—Power to go into facts of case—Mode of dealing with directions of Judge to jury—In a case tried by jury the High Court has no power to go into the facts of the case in order to see whether or not the conviction was right, that standing entirely upon the verdict of the jury. The Court has only to consider the facts in order to see whether the Judge has done his duty in laying the case before the jury for their consideration. The mode of dealing by the High Court with the Judge's summing up to the jury pointed out, first as regards the law and then as regards the facts. QUEEN v. NIMCHAND MOOKERJEE [20 W. R., Cr., 41]

76. ——— Error in law.—Prejudice to accused—New trial—Improper advice given by the Judge to the jury upon a question of fact, or the omission of the Judge to give that advice which a Judge in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion ought to give the jury upon questions of fact, amounts to such an error in law in summing up as to justify the High Court on appeal or revision in setting aside a verdict of guilty. The power of setting aside convictions and ordering new trials for any error or defect in the summing up, will be exercised by the High Court only when the Court is satisfied that the accused person has been prejudiced by the error or defect, or that a failure of justice has been occasioned thereby. *QUEEN v. Defect not prejudicing persons required to show cause.

—Certain persons were convicted by a Magistrate of the first class of assault, an offence punishable under section 352 of Act X of 1877. The case was brought to the knowledge of the High Court by the complainant preferring a petition to it, together with a copy of the Magistrate's order. This petition was laid before STRAIGHT, J., who, observing that the case was one in which the Magistrate should have taken security from such persons for keeping the peace, as provided by section 489 of Act X of 1872, directed the Magistrate to summon such persons to show cause why they should not be required, under section 491 of that Act, to enter into a bond to keep the peace. The Magistrate accordingly summoned such persons as directed, the summonses setting forth that they were issued "under the orders of the High Court." The Magistrate took evidence on behalf of such persons, and eventually made an order requiring such persons to enter into a bond to keep the peace. Such persons were fully aware of the order made by STRAIGHT, J. Such persons applied to the High Court to set aside the order requiring them to enter into a bond to keep the peace, on the ground that the Magistrate had not proceeded of his own motion, but under the order of STRAIGHT, J., which was made without jurisdiction; and on the ground that the summonses had not set forth the report or information on which they were issued. Held by STUART, C. J., that, inasmuch as STRAIGHT, J., when he made his order, represented the full authority and jurisdiction of the High Court, such order was final, and the application could not be entertained. Held by PEARSON, J., SPANKIE, J., and OLDFIELD, J. (SPANKIE, J., doubting whether such order could be questioned), that the order of STRAIGHT, J., was one which he was competent to make as a Court of Revision under section 297 of Act X of 1872. Held by PEARSON, J., and SPANKIE, J., that, inasmuch as such persons had not been in the slightest degree prejudiced by the defect in the summonses which were issued to them, such defect was not a ground on which to set aside the Magistrate's order requiring them to enter into a bond to keep the peace. EMPRESS v. The District Court, on appeal, reversed this decree and rejected A's claim. The High Court reversed the decree of the District Court, and remanded the appeal. The District Court, on remand, made a decree confirming the original decree of the Court of first instance in A's favour. Subsequently to the last-mentioned decree of the District Court, B sold the house to C. B then preferred a special appeal to the High Court, but died before it was heard. Held, under Act VIII of 1859, that C. could not carry on the special appeal after B's death. MORESEWAR BAPUJI PHATAK v. KUSHABA SHANKHOJI

15. ——— Appeal from order prior to decree.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 363—Objections having been successfully raised, under section 246, Act VIII of 1859, against a decree-holder's attachment of a tenure as the property of his judgment-debtor, he brought a regular suit and obtained a declaratory decree that the property belonged to his debtor. He then took out execution, attached, sold, and himself purchased the property in question. The objector meantime appealed to the Privy Council, and, having obtained a decree reversing the declaratory decree, took out execution against the opposite party for costs and wasilat. The opposite party objected, but the Judge allowed the execution to proceed, and deputed an Ameen to ascertain the amount of mesne profits collected. Held that the Judge's order was not an order prior to decree within the meaning of section 363 of the Code, and that the opposite party was entitled to appeal against the principle that he was liable, without waiting the result of the Ameen's investigation. *GOPAL CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v. 17. ——— Appeal from original decision after review granted illegally has been set aside.—Where a suit under the rent law was dismissed, and the Munsif granted a review of judgment on fresh evidence without satisfying himself that it had been out of plaintiff's power to produce such evidence at first,—Held that the Munsif had acted illegally and without jurisdiction, and that the Subordinate Judge was right in reversing his judgment after the re-hearing, but that the decision did not prejudice plaintiff's liberty to appeal from the original decision. *BEITS v. 1. ——— Cultivating ryots at fixed rates.—Act X of 1859, s. 6.—Ryots holding since permanent settlement at varying rates of rent.—Act X of 1859 provided for two classes of ryots only, viz, those who have held and cultivated the land for a period of twelve years, and those who have held at fixed rates from the time of the permanent settlement; it made no provision for ryots who have held since the time of the permanent settlement at varying rates. Such a ryot acquired no right of occupancy on that ground. DINOBUNDHO DEY v. RAMDHONE ROY

If ryots were already in possession of the land when the interest was created, and the interest was a right, not to the actual physical possession of the land, but to collect the rents from the ryots, the interest is not ryoti. If, on the other hand, the land was jungle, or uncultivated or unoccupied, and the tenant was let into physical possession of the land, the interest would be ryoti, and the nature of that interest would not be altered by the fact of the tenant subsequently sub-letting to under-tenants. DURGA PROSUNNO GHOSE v KALI DAS DUTT . . . 9 C. The real question for trial is whether he was or was not a ryot, or one who held land under cultivation by himself or others who took for him under his supervision as a superior cultivator; or whether he was a middleman because he really did not cultivate in the sense of section 6, but was a general leaseholder or a speculator in land rent. RAM MUNGUL GHOSE v. 38. ——— Sir land.—N. W. P. Rent Act, XII of 1881, s. 8.—Act X of 1859, s. 6—Occupancy tenure.—Where land, originally the sir of a proprietor, has been transferred to a mortgagee, and has in his hands lost its character of sir, and has been leased to a tenant on the usual conditions of a tenancy, which otherwise do not bar the acquisition of a right of occupancy in the land, such a right will be acquired by twelve years' occupancy under section 8 of the Rent Act. In 1846 B. mortgaged a share in a village, together with certain land which was recorded as his sir, and which was so described in the deed of mortgage. After the mortgage it ceased to be recorded as his sir, and was recorded as land held by tenants in the same way as other lands in the estate. In 1857 it was leased to S., and in 1863 to H., and from 1863 to 1882 remained in the possession of the last-mentioned lessee. In 1882 B. redeemed the mortgage, and subsequently brought a suit against H. to establish that the land was his sir, and for possession of it. Held by the Full Bench that there being nothing in the terms of the mortgage-deed to indicate that the land was transferred to the mortgagee to be held as sir, and the land having ceased to be recorded as the sir of the proprietor, and not having been leased as the sir of the lessor, it had not retained its character as sir when the defendant's tenancy commenced, so as to prevent him from acquiring a right of occupancy therein under the provisions of section 8 of the Rent Act. Per MAHMOOD, J., that there is nothing in the law to prevent a zemindar from relinquishing his rights in sir land and converting it into land held by ordinary tenants, that the mortgage-deed of 1846 showed that the sir right in the land in suit had been relinquished by the mortgagor; and that the sir land once relinquished by the zemindar ceases to have that character, and cannot prevent the accrual of the occupancy right within the meaning either of section 6 of Act X of 1859 or of section 8 of Act XII of 1881. *HARPAL SINGH v. 51. ——— Nature of right.—Right independent of wish of zemindar or mortgagee—Acquisition under usufructuary mortgage—The right of occupancy conferred by the Legislature upon cultivators of more than twelve years' standing is a right wholly independent of the wishes either of the zemindar or his mortgagee in possession, and when a cultivator acquires such a right, it cannot be taken as in the nature of a grant from either of them. The right of occupancy may thus be acquired during the currency of a usufructuary mortgage and during the period of the mortgagee's possession of the zemindari rights, and the zemindar upon redeeming the mortgage cannot disturb the possession of such occupancy tenants on the ground that, when he mortgaged the zemindari, it was free of such occupancy tenures. Heeroo v. Dhoree, 2 N. W., 129, referred to. HARPAL SINGH v. BAL GOBIND I. L. R., 7 All., 586

52. ——— Conditions necessary for acquisition.—Non-payment of rent—Beng Act VIII of 1869, ss. 6, 22, and 52—Two conditions only are necessary for the acquiring of a right of occupancy,—viz, (1), the cultivation or holding of land for a period of twelve years; and (2), that the person holding or cultivating the land should be a ryot. The essential conditions of section 6, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, are fulfilled without showing the payment of rent, that only being a condition necessary for the maintaining of the right when created. In a suit brought to evict a tenant who had been in possession of certain land for a longer period than twelve years, when it was shown that rent had not been paid, and notice to quit had been given,—Held that a right of occupancy had been acquired, and that the ryot had the power to prevent forfeiture under the provisions of section 52, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. When there is no contract, and the Statute of Limitation does not apply, the ryot cannot, by occupying and cultivating, become the proprietor of the soil; neither can he, by occupying with the consent of the zemindar, and paying rent for the land to him, become entitled to the proprietorship of the soil, even though he should acquire a right of occupancy by virtue of Act X of 1859. Act VIII of 1869, and Act X of 1859, s. 6.—By the terms of an ijara (1865) the defendants were entitled at the end of a term of five years to a renewal of their lease of the chur land in dispute, at a rent to be fixed according to the measurement of the land to be made at that time and to the productive powers of the land. Three years after the expiration of the said term a notice was served on the defendants to come to a new settlement with the plaintiff, and in 1874 the plaintiff sued to recover possession. The defendants claimed a right of occupancy acquired under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 or under Act X of 1859. Held that the defendants' holding as ijaradars prior to and during the lease of 1865 did not create in them a right of occupancy, and that the plaintiff had a right to turn the defendants out of possession at the expiration of the term of five years, except so far as that right was qualified by the stipulation for a renewal; that the defendants, at the expiration of that lease, had an equitable right to a renewal not exceeding five years, according to the stipulations in the agreement, but that it was too late to rely upon their title to a renewal which, if it had been granted, would now have expired. *JARDINE, SKINNER, & Co., v. RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY—continued.3. TRANSFER OF RIGHT—continued.

150. ——— Transfer by proprietor in mehal.—Ex-proprietary tenant—Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), ss. 7, 9—The words of section 7 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, “shall have a right of occupancy in the land held by him as sir,” are intended by operation of law to confer upon the proprietor who has sold his proprietary rights in a mehal, irrespective of whether he claims it or not, the status of an occupancy tenant, to whom the prohibition of section 9 will apply. Held, therefore, that where a proprietor in a mehal holding sir land, who is selling his proprietary rights, at the same time transfers all his rights, actual, vested, or contingent, in such sir land, such transfer is one of his right of occupancy in such sir land, and as such is prohibited by section 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act. GULAB ROY v. INDAR SINGH. I. L. R., 6 All., 54

151. ——— Right of mortgagees from tenant.—Mortgagees, Rights of, in suit for ejectment of tenants—If a zemindar obtains a decree in the Revenue Court for the ejectment of tenants with a right of occupancy who have mortgaged portions of their holdings, it does not necessarily follow that the interests of the mortgagees determine with the rights of the original tenants. Where certain tenants with a right of occupancy mortgaged portions of their holdings, and the zemindar assented to the substitution of the mortgagees for the original tenants in respect of those portions of the holding of which they had respectively obtained possession, it was held that the zemindar could not destroy the interest of the mortgagees in possession by obtaining a decree from the Revenue Court ousting only the original tenants. GOBERDHUN v. GOKAL CHAND. [7 N. W., 31]

152. ——— Validity of transfer.—Rights of mortgagees from tenant—Lease.—“Zur-i-peshgi” lease.—Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), ss. 8, 9—The occupancy tenants of certain land executed a zur-i-peshgi lease in favour of certain persons, by which, in consideration of a sum of money, it was agreed that the latter should have the right of occupying and cultivating the occupancy holding as tenants for a term of years at a nominal rent. In pursuance of this agreement those persons obtained possession. The zemindar thereupon brought a suit against them for ejectment, and to have the zur-i-peshgi lease set aside. Held by the Full Bench that the zur-i-peshgi lease was a transfer of occupancy rights within the meaning of section 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), and was therefore invalid. Per PETHERAM, C. J.—A right of occupancy means nothing but the right to live on and cultivate land as one's own. Per STRAIGHT, J.—The last sentence of section 8 of the Rent Act should not be read as declaring that any occupancy tenant may sub-let his land, but that the scope of the proviso is limited to tenants who actually occupy or cultivate land under a written lease, without having acquired a right of occupancy. Idhayatullah v. Ram Nwaz Rar, Weekly Notes, All., 1882, p. 80, referred to. ABADI HUSAIN v. JURAWAN LAI. [I. L. R., 7 All., 866]

153. ——— Suit for ejectment.—Act by tenant inconsistent with purpose for which land was let—Mortgage of occupancy holding—Cancellation of mortgage before suit for ejectment—Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), ss. 9, 93 (b), 149—An occupancy tenant made an usufructuary mortgage of his holding, and afterwards had the land and the mortgage-deed returned to him, and the mortgage was cancelled. Subsequently, the landlord instituted a suit for ejectment, on the ground that by the mortgage the tenant had committed an act inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let, within the meaning of Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), section 93 (b). Held by OLDFIELD, J., that, apart from the question whether executing a mortgage of his holding was an act within the meaning of section 93 (b) of the Rent Act, the mortgage having been cancelled, there was no cause of action left, and the penalty should not be enforced, with reference to section 149. Held by MAHMOOD, J., that the occupancy tenure could not be brought to an end except on grounds clearly provided by the law; and the execution of the mortgage, though illegal and void, was not “any act or omission detrimental to the land” or “inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let” within the meaning of section 93 (b) of the Rent Act, and furnished no ground for ejectment. Gopal Panday v. Parsotam Das, I. L. R., 5 All., 121; and Naik Ram Singh v. Murlu Dhar, I. L. R., 4 All., 371, referred to. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The terms of section 93 (b) of the N.-W. P. Rent Act apply, exempli gratia, to cases in which land is given to a tenant for purposes of cultivation, and is used by him for building or other purposes. DEBI PRASAD v. HAE DAXAL. [I. L. 154. ——— N.-W. P. Rent Act, 1881, XII, ss. 7, 9—Sir-land.—Sale of sir land by co-sharer.—Ex-proprietary tenant.—Held by PETHERAM, C. J., and STRAIGHT, OLDFIELD, and BRODHURST, JJ., that the question whether the proprietary rights of a co-sharer in the sir of a mehal are distinct and separate from the proprietary rights in the mehal itself, so as to enable the owner of one share to sell and give possession of his sir alone as against his co-sharers, must be determined with reference to the tenure and conditions under which land is held in the mehal by the coparceners, to be ascertained in each case. Per PETHERAM, C. J., and STRAIGHT and OLDFIELD, JJ.—In remindari tenures, in which the whole land is held and managed in common, a co-sharer cannot convey his right of occupancy in the sir as something distinct from his proprietary rights in the mehal. In putadari tenures, in which the lands are divided and held in severalty, each proprietor managing his own lands, there may be lands which come within the classification of sir given in the Rent Act, but they would not seem to be on a different footing from any other land held in severalty by a proprietor. Per BRODHURST, J.—So long as a person is the sole proprietor of a mehal, he is not restrained by any law from effecting a sale of his proprietary rights in his sir land, even though he retains possession of the whole of the other lands of the mehal. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the proprietary rights of a joint co-sharer in his sir land form an essential part of his rights in the mehal, that such proprietary rights in the sir land may be sold, but that the purchaser under such a sale could not obtain any such possession as would operate in defeasance of the proprietary right in such sir land conferred by section 7 and secured by section 9 of the Rent Act. Sahib Ram v. Kishen Singh, Weekly Notes, All., 1882, p. 19, Hazari Lal v. Ugrah Rai, Weekly Notes, All., 1884, p. 103; Gulab Rai v. Indar Singh, I. L. R., 6 All., 54, and Tirmal Singh v. Bhola Singh, Weekly Notes, All., 1884, p. 169, referred to SITAL PRASAD v. AMTUL BIBI. . . I. L. R., 7 All., 633

155. ———— Mortgage by conditional sale of occupancy rights to zemindar—Act XVIII of 1873 (N. W. P. Rent Act), s. 9.—Act XII of 1881 (N. W. P. Rent Act), ss. 2, 9.—The occupancy tenant of certain land, before the N. W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881) came into force, mortgaged his rights to his zemindars by a deed of conditional sale. The zemindars sued the heirs of the conditional vendee for foreclosure and possession of the mortgaged property. Held by the Full Bench that the terms of the judgment of the Full Bench in Nark Ram Singh v. Murla Dhar, I. L. R., 4 All., 371, were directly applicable to the case, and that the transaction of mortgage, which was subsequently to become a sale, was not a transaction to which section 2 of the Rent Act applied, because the sale would not have effect till after the Act came into operation. MURLI RAI v. LEDDI . . . I. L. R., 7 All., 851

156. ———— Effect of transfer on occupancy right.—Transfer of trees—Act XII of 1881, s. 9—The presumption of law and the general rule is that property in timber on a tenant's holding rests in the landlord in the same way as, and to no less an extent than, the property in the soil itself. Faqeer Soonar v. Khuderun, 2 N. W., 251; Ayudha Nath v. Sital, I. L. R., 3 All., 567, Abdool Rohoman v. Dataram Bashee, W. R., 1864, 367, Rut-tonji Edulji Shet v. Collector of Tanna, 11 Moore's I. A., 295, referred to. Held, therefore, where an occupancy tenant transferred his holding, that the transfer was not only invalid in respect of the holding, but in respect also of the trees on the holding. Where an occupancy tenant, under the impression that he was a tenant at fixed rates, sold his holding, and the landholder sued the tenant and his vendee to set aside the transfer as contrary to law, and for possession of the holding.—Held that the transfer could not be treated as a relinquishment by the tenant of the holding to the landholder, and that the proper decree to make was that the transfer should be cancelled, that the plaintiff was entitled to eject the vendee from the land, but the plaintiff was not entitled to take the holding from the vendor. KASIM MIAN v. BANDA HUSAIN . . . I. L. R., 5 All., 616

RIGHT OF REPLY.

1. ———— Witnesses not called for defence.—Where defendant's counsel did not go into evidence, but had not intimated his intention to call witnesses, the plaintiff's counsel has a right to reply. VIRASVAMI CHETTI v. APPASVAMI CHETTI [1 Mad., 375]

2. ———— Decision on appellant's arguments after hearing respondent.—Where an appellant had been heard at length and the respondent heard partly in answer, and the Court came to a conclusion after research into the record without any new matter being brought forward by the respondent, it was considered unnecessary to hear the appellant in reply. ROUSSHAU v. NUBOO KISHORE BHUDRO . . . 12 W. R., 302

3. ———— Giving no opportunity for reply.—Ground for special appeal.—Where an appeal was dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, after hearing the respondent's pleader, without giving the appellant's pleader an opportunity to reply, the High Court, on that objection being made a ground of special appeal from an order of the Judge refusing to grant a review on that ground, set aside the order and sent the case back for re-trial. *JARDINE v. which was a case where, after some explanation from the appellant's vakil, the Judge said he did not think the Munsif's judgment erroneous, whereupon the vakil said he was not desirous of arguing the case further, and the Judge began writing his judgment, and refused to hear another vakil instructed by the appellant who came in and asked permission to argue the case.

cause. The objection was overruled and a reply allowed. BAMASUNDARI DAS v RAMNARAYAN MITTER 7 B. L. R., Ap., 57

5. ———— Question of law.—Construction of will.—Evidence not called for defendants—In a suit for the construction of a will, a reply was allowed although the defendants called no evidence, the suit being of the nature of a special case. JUDAH v JUDAH 5 B. L. R., 439

6. ———— Crown's right of reply.—Trial of prisoners charged with distinct offences in one indictment—Where two prisoners were charged with distinct offences in the same indictment, the calling of evidence on behalf of one does not give the Crown a right of reply upon the other. QUEEN v ABBAS 2 Hyde, 247

7. ———— Use of documents in cross-examination by accused—The fact that the accused has, during the cross examination of the witnesses for the prosecution, used certain documents, and that such documents have been put in as evidence on his behalf, does not entitle the prosecutor to the right of reply, if, when asked upon the close of the case for the prosecution whether he means to adduce evidence, the accused says that he does not. QUEEN-EMRESS v. GREEN CHUNDER BANERJEE

[I. L. R., 10 Calc., 1024

8. ———— Witnesses not called for defence.—Reply by prosecutor.—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 289, 292—At the close of the evidence for the prosecution, the attorney for the defence, in answer to the Judge, stated that he meant to call witnesses. The Court then adjourned, and on the following day the attorney stated that, on reconsideration, he did not intend to call witnesses. The Judge allowed the prosecutor to reply. Held that, though the strict interpretation of sections 289 and 292 of the Criminal Procedure Code would warrant this course, it was never meant by the Legislature that the prosecutor should have a reply when no witnesses are called for the defence, the object of the law being evidently to let each side have an opportunity of commenting on the evidence of the other, and not to give an additional advantage to the prosecutor in such a case as the present. HURRY CHURN CHUCKERBUTTY v EMPRESS

1. INTEREST TO SUPPORT RIGHT.

1. ——— Party without right or inon the ground that the plaintiff has no interest in on a Court, with the object of evading an order which the Court has made directing a minor's guardians to account, any person who appears before the Court and exposes the fraud, undertaking also to prove it, has a locus standi in Court, and has a right

the person from whom she bought, who did not con-

it. KISHOREE v. JAY KISHORE DASS 3 Agra, 46

5. ——— Suit by male members of bers of a family cannot sue for the injury or insult which they have sustained indirectly in consequence of ill-treatment of certain female members of the such grievance or dishonour, it was open to the

6. ——— Suit to have trust fund paid into Court.—Suit quia timet.—Want of title or interest in plaintiff—A suit, the sole object of which was to have a trust fund paid into Court, was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff had no actual title to any part of the fund. When the plaintiff in a suit, seeking solely the payment into Court of a fund for the relief of poor Armenian orphans, had no interest, except as a member of the Armenian community,—Held that he had no such title to part of the fund as would support the suit. Held, also, that the consent of the defendants, the trustees of the fund, to the decree sought by the plaintiff, would not justify the Court in making it. To support a bill quia timet the plaintiff must have a title in possession or expectancy, and the property must be in danger. SATOOR v SATOOR . . . 2 Mad., 8

9. ——— Interest, as Collector of revenue, of Government—Suit for accretion—A chui, B, formed by gradual accretion to an estate (mouzah B), was resumed by Government, who successively made temporary settlements for it with the putndai of mouzah B, and finally with the zemindai. While the second settlement was in force, another chui formed, and a dispute arose between the putndai of B and the putndai of an adjoining mouzah, D, as to its ownership. Three suits were brought by the latter, claiming the second chui as an accretion to his estate, in all which suits he was successful, and in one of which Government was a party. Government then sued to set aside the decrees in the two suits in which it was not a party, and for possession of the land in dispute, and it was found in that suit that the land was continuous to chui B, and not to mouzah D. Held that Government, having a right to revenue, but not to actual possession, could have no locus standi as plaintiff in such a suit. MOOKTAKSHER DEBEA v. 10. ——— Interest of hambardar.—Suit for sums paid as nuzzeraana before resumption.—A certain sum was paid to Government as nuzzeraana during the existence of the maafec grant through a hambardar. After the maafec was resumed, and a Government jumma assessed upon it, the nuzzeraana continued to be paid until the interest of the holder of the resumed maafec was confiscated for rebellion and sold at auction. After the confiscation, Government allowed the amount to the hambardar, by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held that by such arrangement the Government did in effect convey to him (hambardar), as trustee on behalf of Government, such an interest in the estate as would enable him to sue and enforce such claim. ZAHOOK HOSSAIN v. ASSUD ALI . 2 Agra, Pt II, 178

11. ——— Interest under decree.—Suit for balance due on decree—Decree for money.—The appellant having obtained a decree for money, sued to recover the unsatisfied balance thereof from the respondents, alleging that the property of the deceased judgment-debtor (being one-seventh share in the legacy of his father) was in their possession. He prayed that, after due inquiry, adjustment of accounts, and the determination of the value of the said legacy out of the share which might be found due to the judgment debtor, the above-mentioned balance might be decreed with interest and costs. Held that the decree did not vest in the appellant a right to the property sued for, and consequently he could not maintain the suit. MAHOMED AGA ALI KHAN v. 5. ACTS DONE IN EXERCISE OF SOVEREIGN POWERS.

37. ——— Suit for damages for refusal of license by Excise authorities—Liability of Government.—21 & 22 Vict., c 106—Matter of revenue—21 Geo. III, c 70, s 8.—The plaintiff, for some years before and up to 31st March 1874, carried on the business of a retail dealer in ganja and sidhi in Calcutta, and occupied for that purpose certain shops and godowns duly licensed under the Government regulations with respect to such sales. The license had to be renewed annually, and might, for sufficient cause, be withdrawn at any time within the year which terminated on 31st March. On 4th March 1874, while the plaintiff was carrying on his business, the Superintendent of Excise for Calcutta put the right to sell ganja and sidhi for the year commencing the 18th April 1874 up to the public competition, which was the usual way of distributing the yearly licenses. The sale notification contained a list of the shops with the localities where they were situated, but the right was reserved, in case of combination or for other cause, to transfer, before settlement, any shop from the locality specified, to some locality in the neighbourhood; and the conditions of sale were stated to be "that the Collector does not bind himself to accept the highest bid, that the settlement with the accepted auction-purchasers will be contingent on the approval by the police authorities of the proposed locality of the shop, and the character of the applicant for license; that the person accepted as the auction-purchaser shall deposit at once a sum equal to the license fee payable for two months, and shall at the same time state in writing in what building his shop will be opened, it being understood that the above deposit will be returned to any person whose license is subsequently refused for police reasons." At the sale the plaintiff was the highest bidder for the licenses for five shops for the sale of ganja and sidhi, and his bids were recorded, and he also paid the deposit due in respect of the licenses amounting to Rs 968. Subsequently the Excise authorities refused licenses to the plaintiff for the five shops, and failed to return the deposit made in respect thereof. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the Secretary of State in Council for India, in which he alleged that the Government had accepted his bid, and thereby contracted with him to give him the licenses and allow him to carry on his trade in ganja and sidhi, and that by their not giving him licenses, and so forcing him to close his godowns and shops, they had committed a breach of contract for which he was entitled to damages,—Held, on the evidence, per PHIBBS, J., that there was no contract between the plaintiff and the Government. Held, also, both in the Court below and on appeal, even assuming there was a contract, that the suit was not maintainable, being in respect of acts done by the Government in the exercise of sovereign powers. Suits such as might, previous to the passing of 21 and 22 Victoria, Cap. 106, have been brought against the East India Company, and subsequently against the Secretary of State in Council, are limited to suits for acts done in the conduct of undertakings which might be carried on by private individuals without sovereign powers. *NOBIN CHUNDER DEY v. 38. ——— Suit for illegal levy of import duties by Collector.—In 1877 H shipped salt from Bombay to Malabar ports, having conformed to the provisions of the Bombay Salt Act, 1873, and paid Rs 13 0 per maund, the full duty then leviable under the Tariff Act, 1875. By a notification under clause B, section 6, of the Tariff Act, the Governor General in Council had exempted salt which paid the excise duty at Bombay from liability to pay more than the difference between what was so paid and the import duty leviable under the Tariff Act. While the salt was in transit, the Salt Act of 1877, which raised the import duty to Rs 2-8-0 a maund, came into force. The Collector of Malabar levied 11 annas a maund on the salt imported, in the belief that he was so authorised by law, and his action was ratified by Government. Held that, assuming the Collector's acts to be illegal, a suit to recover the amount so levied would lie against the Secretary of State for India in Council. Held, also, that the payment at Bombay was not a payment of import duty by anticipation, and that the plaintiff was not excused by the notification of the Governor General from paying the amount levied by the Collector. NOBIN CHUNDER DEY v. J., that the Government had entered into the contract alleged by the plaintiff, that the suit would lie, as the Government had not entered into such contract in the exercise of sovereign powers, but in the capacity of a private owner, but that the plaintiff's case failed, as he had not performed his part of such contract. KISHEN CHAND v. The award was brought about, not under that Regulation, but owing to an application of the plaintiff for a partition of the share under Regulation VII of 1822, which application was rejected in reference to the award declaring the plaintiff's vendors were not in possession at the time of the sale. It was not necessary that the award should be set aside prior to an adjudication on the claim, as it determined no question of title. If the dispossession of the vendors did not take place at a period more remote than twelve years before the commencement of the suit, the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for possession on establishment of their right, even if there was no sufficient reason to set aside the award. *GUNGA BAKSH v. 51. ——— Erection of buildings by owners of adjoining sites under agreements with Government.—Government surveyor made arbiter in case of dispute.—Party wall, Liability of owners for costs of.—Suit before obtaining Government surveyor's certificate.—Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations, among which were the following “(a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties” The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the condition contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878, on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of Rs. 20,515-4-11, which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed, the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land, and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the portion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants, but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property, and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and, in the event of such payment not being awarded, he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof. Both the defendants pleaded limitation, and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall, and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing, SCOTT, J., held that the part of the wall in dispute, although not used by the defendants, was a party wall, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected; and that the suit was not barred, but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor, in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost; and that, until his decision was given, there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT, J., accordingly, on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall, and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them, the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned, in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, &c., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property, the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set-off or the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue, and upon which the Court might give judgment. *COVEERJI LUDDHA v. 54. ——— Suit for damages for withholding a customary present from a member of a caste.—Omission from distribution of funeral presents—The plaintiff complained that on the occasion of the distribution of certain funeral presents by the defendant's father, in which as a member of the caste the plaintiff was entitled to share, he had been omitted, and had received nothing. He sued the defendants to recover damages for the injury to his character and reputation caused by such omission. Held that there was no legal right in the plaintiff to the funeral presents, and the slight which the omission to give such presents to the plaintiff might imply was to be regarded as the result of a breach of social etiquette, with which the caste was exclusively competent to deal. *MAXA-SHANKAR v. 55. ——— Claim to be chalvadi of Lingayet caste.—Intrusion in office.—Office to which no fees are appurtenant.—Plaintiff was the hereditary holder of the office of chalvadi or bearer on public occasions of the insignia or symbols of the Lingayet caste at Bagalkot in the district of Belgaum. No fees as of right were appurtenant to that office, but voluntary gratuities might be given to the chalvadi. In an action brought by plaintiff against defendant as an intruder upon his (the plaintiff's) office, Held that the plaintiff's claim to be chalvadi of the Lingayet caste at Bagalkot was a caste question, within the meaning of the unrepealed portion of clause 1, section 21, of Bombay Regulation II of 1827. *SHANKARA v. the jaghirdar, to the expense of celebrating an annual fair in honour of a saint, and of lighting a lamp at his shrine. He reserved the paramount authority over, and management of, the said lands to his family, of which the plaintiff was the representative. The lands were sold illegally, as alleged by the plaintiff, to the defendant at an auction in execution of a decree obtained against one N, who with his predecessors had, as was alleged, been employed to worship at the shrine. The plaintiff accordingly sought to have the sale set aside, and to be put into possession of the lands. Held that the object of the suit being merely to recover the trust property from outsiders, did not fall within section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and it could be proceeded with without making the Advocate General a party to it. LAKSHMANDAS v. He did not allege himself to be interested in the property further or otherwise than as being a Mahomedan. He stated as his cause of action that the defendant had, in a former suit between the same parties, filed a written statement, in which he denied that the property now in question was wakf. Held that, unless it could be shown that the suit was maintainable under some statutory provision, it could not be maintained. Held, also, that inasmuch as no permission had been given to the plaintiff to bring the suit, it was not maintainable under Act XX of 1863, or under section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, further, that the suit was not maintainable under the provisions of section 42 of Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief Act). Held, therefore, that the suit was not maintainable. WAJID ALI SHAH v. 62. ——— Suit by members of a caste and worshippers at caste temple against trustees of caste and temple property.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 30 and 539—Right to manage caste and temple funds—Public charity—Private charity—Parties—Trustees—Negligence—Wilful default—Acquiescence of majority of caste in unauthorised use of trust funds—Rights of minority.—In or about the year 1839 a temple to the god Shri Anannathji was erected in Bombay by the Dossa Oswal Bania caste, the religion of which caste is the Jain religion. A large portion of the funds required for building the temple was advanced by one N. N., at that time the leading man in the caste, the rest was obtained from the caste by subscription. The firm of N. N. acted as the bankers to the caste and to the temple, received all the gifts and offerings made by the worshippers, and for many years administered all the affairs of the temple. The sums advanced by N. N. were gradually but entirely repaid to him out of the gifts and offerings. There were three separate funds, of which separate accounts were kept in the books,—viz., (1) the darasa fund, which was devoted to the temple purposes, such as maintenance of priests, repairs, &c., and gifts to poorer temples; (2) the sadaran fund, which was more extended in its objects, but still limited to religious and charitable purposes, such as payments to poor devotees irrespective of their caste, &c; and (3) the mahajan fund, which was devoted to caste purposes, such as purchase of caste utensils, &c. All three funds were collected at the temple. Gifts and offerings were made by all worshippers at the temple, whether members of the caste or not. Subscriptions were made only by members of the caste. All the regular subscriptions came from the caste exclusively, and the great bulk of the gifts and offerings came from the caste also. Only about Rs12,000 had been given by outsiders up to the date of the suit, while nearly six lakhs had been given by the caste. N. N. died in 1842, and his adopted son V. became head of the firm, which continued to manage the funds of the temple under the name of V. N. & Co. V. died in 1852, and H. (defendant No. 1) succeeded him. The firm meanwhile had invested the funds of the temple in eight lots of immoveable property. In 1867 the caste determined to appoint trustees of the temple property, and in September 1867 a trust-deed was executed whereby H., K., and G. (defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3), together with three others who were dead at the time of this suit,—viz., J. R., T. W., and M. T.,—were appointed trustees of all the immoveable property belonging to the temple. The deed set forth the objects to which the income of the property should be applied, and provided that the surplus should be invested in Government securities, in corporation shares or in landed property, but in no other shares of any description whatsoever. It also authorised the trustees to invest surplus moneys in the firm of V. N. & Co. It was admitted that, subsequently to June 1869, the trustees managed the temple, and not only the immoveable property, but all the funds. A debt of Rs2,40,000 was due from the firm of V. N. & Co. to the temple and caste when the trustees took over the management. In 1870 the firm of V. N. & Co. became insolvent, and in their schedule the trustees were entered as creditors in respect of darasa account, Rs1,57,649; on mahajan account, Rs68,017; on sadaran account, Rs22,597. It was admitted that the trustees knew of this entry in the said schedule. They, however, received no dividend, although other creditors, including K. (defendant No. 2), were paid two annas in the rupee. This sum of Rs2,40,000 due to the temple was wholly lost. In April 1867, Rs15,000 of the temple funds were invested—it did not appear by whom—in the name of G. (defendant No. 3), and in August 1868 a sum of Rs15,000 was advanced to one J. P. In 1869 a sum of Rs10,000 was advanced by the trustees to N. K. & Co., which was never repaid, nor was any interest received upon it. It was lost on the failure of that firm in 1879. The principal partner of that firm (N. K.) was the only son of K. (defendant No. 2), who also had an interest in it. In 1877-78 various loans were made by the trustees to three mills in which one or more of the trustees was interested. Of Rs55,000 lent to the mills and to N. K. & Co., Rs42,000 were lost. Half a lakh of outstanding gifts to the temple remained uncollected owing to the negligence of the trustees. Two suits brought by another caste against the trustees were defended out of the temple funds. All the defendants (trustees), with the exception of K., were in needy circumstances. In 1880 a hundred members of the caste protested against the management of caste and temple affairs by the defendants. The plaintiffs, six in number, took part in the protest, and filed the present suit in 1881. Thereupon there was a caste agitation in favour of the defendants, who were all shettias of the caste. A meeting of the caste was held, and a series of resolutions, supporting the defendants' management and approving of their conduct, was passed, and a document to that effect was signed by 1,468 persons—the whole caste in Bombay numbering only 1,500. The plaintiffs sought to make the defendants liable in respect of the moneys lost to the caste and temple funds, and prayed for the appointment of new trustees and for the settlement of a scheme. The defendants denied the charges of negligence, and pleaded that the suit was not properly constituted, not having been brought under section 30 or 539 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877, and that it was in contravention of Regulation II of 1827, chapter II, section 21. They relied upon the fact that the caste had approved of their conduct and had allowed them to defend this suit at the expense of the caste. They contended that under these circumstances the plaintiffs were not entitled to maintain the suit, and that the Court would not interfere with or control the decision of the majority of the caste in matters relating to the internal management of its affairs. Held that section 30 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) did not apply. If the plaintiffs had any right of action, it was a complete right of action vested in each of them, and not a mere joint right shared with others and incomplete unless they united themselves with others. They sued as subscribers to the temple and devotees of the idol, and, as such, each had a right to complain of maladministration. They were entitled to sue in their own right and in their own name without permission of the Court or notice to other parties interested. Held, also (following Thanga Karuppa v Arumuga Nadan, I L R., 5 Mad., 383), that section 539 of Act X of 1877 did not apply. The three funds administered by the defendants were different in character. The mahajan fund was a purely secular fund, the other two funds were religious and charitable funds. Even if the case came under the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), section 539 would not apply, that section being permissive or directory, and not mandatory. Any person interested in the proper observance of a religious endowment may sue in his own name to have the trust properly administered. The section does not prohibit a private suit, and does not make the sanction of the Advocate General a condition precedent. The gifts to the temple comprised in the darasa and sadaran funds were irrevocably dedicated to a public charity, and therefore the approval by the caste of the conduct of the trustees was no bar to the suit. They were also dedicated to the idol, who was a public, not a mere private household, divinity. The ideal personality of such an idol is well recognised, and in case of misappropriation of the property he is entitled to the protection of the public authorities, on the ground that it has been devoted to public religious purposes, and must not be wasted even by the donors. The management of the temple belonged to the Dossa Oswal Bania caste, and not to the whole Jain community. Although the donations were irrevocably dedicated to public purposes, the donors had never lost the right, which was attached to the caste from the beginning, of managing the temple which they had founded, and their management could only be interfered with as a public charitable trust on proof of maladministration. On the evidence,—Held that the defendants were not liable for losses prior to 1867. It was not clearly proved that they were managers of the temple funds before that date. Held, also, that the defendants were liable for the losses incurred subsequently to 1867. They assumed the management on the execution of the trust-deed in that year, and ought to have taken steps to recover the moneys which had been improperly advanced on loan or otherwise negligently invested. Not having done so they were guilty of wilful neglect, and were liable to refund the moneys which had been lost. The liability was, however, confined to the first three defendants, it not being proved that the remaining defendants had ever acted as trustees. The negligence of the trustees in not taking steps to recover the Rs. 2,40,000 due from the firm of V. N. & Co was a clear breach of trust. The evidence showed that although the whole sum could not have been recovered at any time during the trusteeship of the defendants, yet that some portion of the money might have been obtained if due diligence had been used, and that other creditors of the firm had actually been paid 2 annas in the rupee. The first three defendants were therefore liable to refund 2 annas in the rupee of such portion of the Rs. 2,40,000 as belonged to the darasa and sadaran funds. As to the mahajan fund, it belonged to the caste, and the caste had condoned its misapplication, which it had power to do. The defendants were also held liable to refund such other sums as had come into their hands and had been lost in consequence of their negligence. The Court removed the defendants from the trusteeship and ordered a scheme to be settled.

wayfarers and travellers, to lighting the mosque and shrine in the evening, and to meeting the expenses of repeating prayers on the occasion of Id and Bakhrud, and that the said profits were never spent for personal purposes.” The plaintiff based her right to sue upon the fact that her deceased husband had been mutwalli, and she prayed that the property in suit might be declared wakf, and that certain alienations made by her step-son since her husband's death might be set aside. Held that the trust to which the suit related was one partly for charitable and partly for religious purposes. As far as it related to the former, it was governed by section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, and if viewed in the light of the latter, by Act XX of 1863; and that the suit, not being properly framed in compliance with the provisions of either of those enactments, was not maintainable. Held, further, that even supposing the endowment alleged was neither a public charity within the meaning of section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, nor a religious endowment to which Act XX of 1863 applied, the plaintiff was not entitled to sue alone, as it was clear upon the face of the plaint that she was not alone interested in the subject-matter of the suit, and therefore that she could only sue on behalf of all who were so interested, having first obtained the leave of the Court and otherwise complied with the provisions of section 30 of the Civil Procedure Code. *LUTIFUNISSA BIBI v. 64. ——— Suit in respect of religious endowment.—*Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 30, 539—Beng. Reg. The plaintiffs prayed that the property purchased might be declared to be wakf, that the sale in execution might be declared to be invalid, that a mutwalli might be appointed by the Court, and that the costs of doing the acts of the wakf might be defrayed from the profits of the property belonging to the endowment. Held that, so far as regarded that portion of the prayer which fell within the provisions of section 539 of the Code, the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue, as they were not “persons having a direct interest in the trust” within the meaning of the section, and that the suit should have been instituted under section 14 of Act XX of 1863 after sanction obtained under section 18. Held, also, that though the plaintiffs might possibly have obtained leave to sue under section 30 of the Code on behalf of themselves and the other persons attending the mosque, they not

The defendants used the last-mentioned ghât for the purpose of landing goods. Held that if, when the plaintiff's ancestor erected the buildings, he intended to grant to the Hindu community merely a right of easement over the property, and not to transfer the ownership therein to the community, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain a suit to restrain defendants from using the ghât for trading purposes JAGGAMONI DASI v. A trading concern was opened accordingly, but after a very short time the parties fell out. Defendant then obtained through the Magistrate the return of certain goods which, as he alleged, he had placed with the plaintiff independent of the partnership speculation. Plaintiff thereupon sued for a declaration that the goods were partnership goods, and to obtain a receipt for them as such. Held that there was no cause of action, and a suit for a receipt did not lie. Subsequently the defendants successfully contested payment of one of the decrees, after which plaintiff sued to recover the money of which payment had been thus withheld. Held that as the second contract had absolved plaintiff from all responsibility as regards the decrees, he was not entitled to recover the money claimed in the suit. SREENATH CHOWDHRY v. 73. — Suit on agreement not to mortgage or sell except after offer to plaintiff.—Right of pre-emption.—Hypothecation, Suit to recover property after.—The plaintiff alleged that certain property was the hereditary property of himself and his brother N., that it had been determined by an award that if the plaintiff or N. desired to mortgage or sell their respective shares, they should, in the first instance, mortgage or sell to one another, and, if one party declined to take on mortgage or purchase, that the other should be at liberty to alienate elsewhere, that N. had, however, executed a bond in favour of R., in which he had hypothecated the property and stipulated that the debt should only be recoverable from the property hypothecated, that N. had confessed judgment in a suit brought against him by R. on the bond, and had allowed a decree to be passed against the property, and that, as the bond had the effect of a deed of sale, and had been executed with an intent to defraud him, he sued to obtain possession of the property and a declaration of his title thereto as purchaser. The lower Courts decreed the plaintiff's claim. R., on special appeal, pleaded that the plaintiff had no cause of action, the property not having been sold. Held by PEARSON and SPANKIE, JJ., that the mere hypothecation of the property did not give the plaintiff a title to it as purchaser, and that the suit as brought must be dismissed. Held by STUART, C. J., that as the plaintiff stated matter sufficient to enable the Court to consider the validity of the claim made by the suit, and on the facts and merits to do justice between the parties to the award, the objection to the form of the suit ought not to stand in the way of the plaintiff being decreed his rights under the award. *PIETHEE SINGH v. Upon the same date A. executed an ikrarnamah in which he agreed that he would not collect the rents of the 2 annas transferred to him, that he would not ever demand partition of that share, and that he would not alienate or mortgage it or otherwise exercise proprietary rights over it. It was further provided that in the event of A. committing any breach of covenant the sale should be avoided, and the proprietary rights in the 2 annas share should revert in M. A suit was subsequently brought by M. upon the allegation that, in breach of the covenants of the ikrarnamah, A. had collected the rents of the share; that, in consequence of his action in collecting the rents, the plaintiff had been compelled to sue the tenants; that in these suits the tenants exhibited receipts given by A. on the basis of which the suits were dismissed; and that he had been subjected to various costs and expenses. He therefore claimed by way of damages from A. certain sums of money realised by A. as rent from the tenants, and further, by reason of the ikrarnamah, to avoid the sale-deed which preceded it. Held that provisions of this kind which absolutely debar the person to whom the proprietary rights have passed from exercising these rights, impose conditions which no Court ought to recognise or give effect to, that a covenant in a sale-deed the effect of which is to disable the vendee from either alienating or enjoying the interest conveyed to him, is not only contrary to public policy, but in violation of the principle of sections 10 and 11 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that, therefore, as the agreement on the basis of which the plaintiff asked for relief was one which no Court should assist him in enforcing, the suit must fail. *Holman v. G mortgaged his interest in the forest to the plaintiff and put him into possession. The mortgage was registered. Subsequently G and A. joined in a license to the second and third defendants to cut and take wood in the forest, which the latter accordingly did. The plaintiff sued G. and the other two defendants to recover, as damages, the value of the wood removed, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from removing more wood. Held that the claim would not lie, neither for the whole of the damages claimed, nor for such part of them as was equivalent to G.'s interest in the value of the wood removed,—the only remedy open to the plaintiff being a suit against A., his co-tenant, for an account. Though G, being out of possession to the knowledge of the licensees, could convey to them no right, yet A. could, and a license from A. gave a right to cut wood in the whole of the forest, since a co-tenant may lawfully enjoy the whole property in any way not destructive of its substance so as to amount to an ouster of the other co-tenants, and whatever a co-tenant may do himself he may license another to do. The licensees, therefore, did no wrong in acting on their license, and no suit lay against them; nor did G.'s joining in the license do the plaintiff any distinct injury for which an action for damages would lie against him Quære,—Whether

17. CUSTOMARY RIGHTS.

85. ——— Suit to restrain the use for tazias of land used for the purposes of the Holi.—Easement—Cause of action.—A Mahomedan, purchased a house adjacent to a piece of waste land, on which after such purchase he caused a tazia to be erected at the time of the Mohurram. J and others, Hindus, instituted a suit against A, alleging in their plaint that, for a long time previously, they had been in the habit of going upon the land at the time of the Holi festival, for the purpose of burning the Holi and celebrating the ceremonies incident thereto, and praying that the defendant "be restrained from improper interference, and that the plaintiffs be put in possession, by maintaining observance of the Holi rights, according to the ancient usage, on the land." It was found that the plaintiffs had, for a period of twenty years prior to the institution of the suit, exercised the right of going on to the land at the time of the Holi festival, without interruption or interference. It was also proved that neither the plaintiffs nor the defendant had any proprietary right in the land, and that it belonged to the zemindars of the kasba, who did not appear to object to its use by the defendant and other Mahomedans at the time of the Mohurram, for the erection of tazias. Held that the plaintiffs' claim appeared to be a claim to a right by custom of the nature described in Mounsey v. Ismay, 34 L. J. Ex., 52, and Abbot v. Weekly, 1 Lev., 176, and could not strictly be regarded as for an easement, the right not being set up in respect of any dominant tenement to which it was appurtenant over a servient tenement subject to it. Held, further, that inasmuch as the nature of the right claimed was to come on the land for a few days at one period of the year, it by no means followed that the plaintiffs were entitled to object to the defendant's use of the land at another period, and that, looking to the extent and nature of the said right, and to the form in which the plant was shaped, the laying of a tazia upon the land at the Mohurram could not be held to be any interference with such right sufficient to

88. ——— Suit for right to use ghat for religious purpose.—Abstract right—Cause of action.—Costs.—A Hindu brought a suit in which he alleged that the Hindu community had acquired by long-established custom an exclusive right to use for religious purposes a ghat situate on the River Ganges, but that the Mahomedans were in the habit of interfering with the exercise of such right by bathing at the ghat. He prayed for a declaration of the right, and for a perpetual injunction to be issued to the Mahomedans generally forbidding them to resort to the ghat. No act of trespass was charged against any of the defendants. The defence was that the Mahomedans were entitled to use the place, and that their use of it did not cause any inconvenience to the plaintiff. Held that the suit was not maintainable, since the Court had no power to pass a decree against persons who had never interfered with the property in dispute, or to issue an injunction against the whole Mahomedan world, but that, inasmuch as the defendants had fought the case all along as if the suit were maintainable, and upon a false issue, both sides must pay their own costs. SHAH MUHAMMAD v. In such cases the plaint must contain an averment and the plaintiff must establish to the satisfaction of the High Court that there is not any sufficient moveable property of the defendant against which the decree of the Court of Small Causes can be fully executed, and that he has immoveable property situated within the original jurisdiction of the High Court against which execution can be had. FAKIRAPPA v. The plaintiff being obstructed by the defendants in the enjoyment of the mans, sought to obtain a perpetual injunction against the defendants. The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's claim as being one for mere dignities unaccompanied with emoluments, and, as such, not cognisable by a Civil Court. On appeal by the defendants to the High Court,—Held, restoring the decree of the Court of first instance, that the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable. The mans were mere dignities to which no profits or emoluments were attached. The trifling gifts made by the priest, of rice, a cocoanut and vida, on the occasion of worshipping the deity, and of a piece of vension on other occasions, could not be regarded as emoluments, being merely symbols of recognition and marks of respect of and to the holders of the mans. *Rama v. 25. EXECUTION OF DECREE.

126. ——— Suit after adverse order in execution.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 283—Section 283 of Act X of 1877 enables a party against whom an order has been made in execution proceedings to bring a suit to establish his rights, whatever they may be, but it says nothing as to the nature of the suit or the Court in which it is to be brought. Whether the party is to sue in the Civil Court or in the Small Cause Court depends entirely upon the nature of the claim and the right which is sought to be enforced. A person whose goods are illegally sold under an execution does not lose his right to them though he may have claimed them unsuccessfully in the execution proceedings. He may follow them into the hands of the purchaser, or of any other person, and may sue for them or their value without reference to anything which has taken place in the execution proceedings. SHIBOO NARAIN SINGH v. On 17th June 1871 M and T. obtained a money-decree against B. On 9th March 1872 the defendants bought from B. his equity of redemption. In July 1872 M and T. attached the land in execution of their decree. The defendants objected to the attachment under section 246 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), but on investigation of their claim an order was made disallowing their claim on the 23rd December 1872. In June 1873 the defendants paid off the mortgage-debt and were put into possession by the mortgagee. In October 1873 M and T. put up the land for sale in execution of their decree, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. On seeking to obtain possession, the plaintiff was resisted by the defendants, whose claim was allowed by the Subordinate Judge after inquiry. The plaintiff, therefore, brought this suit under section 335 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882. The lower Courts rejected his claim. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that where, under section 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act VIII of 1859, or the corresponding sections (278 to 283) of the Civil Procedure Codes of 1877 and 1882, an order has been passed against any person making a claim to property under attachment, such person may bring a suit to establish his title to the property within one year from the date of such order, but in default of his bringing such suit within the prescribed time, he is precluded from asserting his title against the auction-purchaser, whether as plaintiff or defendant. In the present case an order had been passed against the defendants under section 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, on the 23rd December 1872, and as they had brought no suit within a year from that date, they could not now contest the plaintiff's title to the property. The defendants, however, having, since the date of the said order, paid off the mortgage,—Held that it would be contrary to justice, equity, and good conscience for the Court to assist the plaintiff in obtaining possession unless he paid the defendants the amount paid by them to the mortgagee to free the property from the incumbrance.

Subsequently this decree became vested in one R., and the pergunna Alumpore came into the possession of one K. G., who in 1874 took an assignment of the mortgage executed by K in favour of *H. made in 1877 between K. G., R., and H. B., by which it was agreed that R. should not execute the decree against Alumpore, but would release K. G. from all liability in respect of the charge on that property, and in consideration K. G. executed a putni lease to H. B. of a portion of Alumpore at a small rent. R. obtained an order for execution against the property of K. C., and, having transferred his decree to the High Court, proceeded to enforce the decree against the plaintiff, the widow of K. C., and her son, by attaching the family dwelling-house in Calcutta. The widow and son then brought this suit against K. G., R., and H. B. to have the share of K. C. in Alumpore ascertained, and praying for a decree calling upon K. G. to pay the amount of the value of the share of Alumpore in satisfaction of R.'s decree. Held that the suit could not be maintained so far as it attempted to make the decree a charge against Alumpore. Held, on appeal, that the suit was rightly dismissed; that, as far as R. was concerned, it had already been decided that R. was entitled, if he so chose, to execute his decree against the Calcutta property, and that, therefore, that question was res judicata, and that as regards the plaintiff's claim that the putni given by K. G. to H. B. should be treated as part-payment to R., such a question could only be decided in execution proceedings that the mere existence of the agreement between K. G., R., and H. B. did not entitle the plaintiff to join them as co-defendants in the suit and that, as far as K. G. was concerned, the suit brought against him could only be treated as a suit to establish a charge or lien on land out of Calcutta, and therefore the Court had no jurisdiction to try it. *KRISTO MOHINEE DOSSEE v. In the case of Lalit Coomarr Bose v. Ishan Chunder Chuckerbutty, 10 C. L. The latter then applied to the Court to be put into possession, but having failed in those proceedings, owing to some irregularity in the description of the boundaries of the property, he instituted a regular suit against the judgment-debtor to obtain possession. On a plea that such suit would not lie, as the plaintiff could have got possession in the miscellaneous proceedings,—Held that, having regard to the provisions of article 138 of schedule II of Act XV of 1877, and of section 11 of Act XIV of 1882, such suit was maintainable. *SERU MOHUN BANIA v. January 1879 overruled their objections and directed possession to be given to the plaintiff. On 28th January 1879 the plaintiff complained that he was prevented from obtaining possession of one of the rooms in the house, B appeared and admitted that he had locked up the room, and he refused to give up possession, contending that he was not bound by the mortgage, as he was not at the time joint with M, and the other sons of S. B., and that the loan was not one required for family necessity. The plaintiff's application was dismissed. In 1882 the plaintiff brought a suit against B, in which he prayed for a decree giving him possession of the room on the terms of the decree in 1877. By the defendant it was (inter alia) contended that the previous suit on the mortgage had exhausted the plaintiff's cause of action, and that the plaintiff had no further right against the defendant. Held that the decree in the former suit could not affect the defendant, as he was not a party to it, nor was he represented. If he had been represented, he could not have resisted the execution of the decree. Not having been represented, he could on principle be exempted from liability in the present suit only if the cause of action was merged in the judgment against his uncle and brother. Here, however, there was no such merger. The previous decree had awarded possession of the whole house to the plaintiff. The existence of that decree could not be a reason for not awarding part of the same house when detained by the defendant. He avowed himself a stranger to the defendants against whom the previous decree was obtained, and his act might be regarded as constituting a separate cause of action. Held, also, that section 328 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, does not make it obligatory on a decree-holder, who is obstructed in execution of the decree, to pursue his remedy under that section. Accordingly the omission of the plaintiff to avail himself of the remedy under that section did not prevent him from proceeding against the defendant by a regular suit. *BALVANT SANTARAM v. The plaintiff claimed Rs15 damages. Held that the plaintiff had no cause of action. 155. ——— Suit against Collector for illegal proceedings.—Entry of name in Collector's books—Improper action of Collector—The mere entry of the name of one parcener in immoveable property in the Collector's books as the occupant or owner is not sufficient ground for an action by a coparcener against the Collector, inasmuch as the Collector's books are kept for purposes of revenue and not for purposes of title. But if the Collector improperly enjoin the plaintiff from taking, or other parties from paying, to the plaintiff his share of the rents or profits, an action may be maintained against the Collector. COLLECTOR OF POONA v BHAVANRAV BALKRISHNA . . . 10 Bom., 192

158. ——— Suit for use and occupation.—Suit by Receiver.—Suit to recover money payable under agreement—A suit was brought by the plaintiff and Receiver of the Tanjore Estate to recover from the first defendant, a farmer, a sum of money alleged to be rent due to the Tanjore Estate under a written agreement executed in August 1866 by the first defendant to the second defendant, who then claimed to be owner of the estate. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes considered that the subject-matter of the plaint did not constitute a cause of action to the plaintiff, and dismissed the plaint, subject to the opinion of the High Court. Held that the suit was maintainable by the Receiver to recover the fair rent payable for the use and occupation of the land under the muchalka, which was good evidence of what was the fair amount of rent. The second defendant, having been held to possess no title to the property, could not afterwards maintain an action for the non-payment of the rent of a portion of such property, due according to the terms of the muchalka. Held, also, that the right of suit did not extend to recover anything as interest on the rent due. *MORRIS v. The settlement officer issued a certificate against the plaintiff, under section 19 of Bengal Act VII of 1868, requiring him to pay these arrears. The plaintiff, at first objected, but subsequently withdrew his objection and paid a portion of the money into Court, and presented a petition stating that the amount paid in was partly due to the Government, and asking that his property might be released from attachment. On payment of the balance claimed under the certificate and costs, the certificate was discharged. Held that a suit to recover the amount paid to Government, brought on the ground that that amount was really payable to the zemindar, would not lie. Quare,—Whether such a suit would lie if the plaintiff were compelled to pay

He was released on the security of G, who executed a bond for the appearance of M, at the inquiry into his insolvency. The defendant attested the bond, and wrote in the attestation that G was a solvent person. In consequence of the non-appearance of M, the plaintiff sought to execute his decree against the surety, G, who on his arrest also applied for his discharge on the ground of his insolvency, and was discharged after inquiry. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant for the amount of his decree and cost of execution, on the ground of his representation in the attestation that G was solvent. The Subordinate Judge rejected, but the District Judge on appeal allowed, the plaintiff's claim. Held by the High Court, on second appeal, that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant, whether the suit was considered as brought upon a covenant or misrepresentation, as the defendant was neither a co-obligor in the security bond of G, nor did he make any promise in the attestation of it to compensate the plaintiff for the non-appearance of M, nor any representation to the plaintiff. Quære,—Whether the nazir was liable to the plaintiff for negligence in not taking a proper surety? *NAGO MAHADEV v. The plant, however, did not allege any personal loss or damage to the plaintiffs arising from the obstruction. Both the lower Courts found as a fact that the road along which plaintiffs desired to carry their tabuts to the sea was a public road. Held on special appeal that plaintiffs could not maintain a civil suit in respect of such obstruction, unless they could prove some particular damage to themselves personally, in addition to the general inconvenience occasioned to the public. The mere absence of the religious or sentimental gratification arising from carrying tabuts along a public road, is not any such particular loss or injury as would be sufficient, according to English and Indian precedents, to sustain

Held that the plaintiffs were not precluded by the fact that their names were not registered as tenants, under section 26 of the Rent Act, from bringing a suit to recover possession of the tenure. The holder of the decree, in execution of which the tenure was sold, assuming him to be only a shareholder in the zemindari right, had no right under section 64 to sell the tenure, but only the interest of the person against whom the decree was passed. The onus was on the defendant to show that the sale under the decree for rent was of such a nature as to give him priority over the plaintiffs. KRISTO CHUNDEE GHOSE v. RAJ KRISTO BANDYOPADHYA [I. The zemindar subsequently brought a suit against the tenant for arrears of rent and obtained a decree, in execution of which he caused the tenure to be sold, and himself became the purchaser. The plaintiff took proceedings under section 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the sale, but his application was rejected, on the ground—an erroneous one—that he was not a proper party to take such proceedings, and he did not appeal against the order rejecting it. Held, in a suit brought against the zemindar and the tenant to set aside the sale, that in the absence of fraud the suit was not maintainable. The plaintiff might have satisfied the rent-decree and so prevented the sale, or he might have appealed against the order rejecting his application to set it aside, but having done neither, and the zemindar having had no notice of the transfer, the plaintiff was not entitled to treat the proceedings in the rent suit as a nullity on the ground that he was not a party to that suit. PANYE CHUNDER SIRCAR v. 240. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss 256, 257.—Sale in execution.—Order of attachment and sale notifications not signed by Judge but by Munsarim—Sale set aside—Equitable estoppel—On the 21st August 1876 certain immovable property belonging to M was put up for sale and was purchased by R. On the 20th April 1877 such sale was set aside under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that the order attaching such property and the notifications of sale had not, as required by section 222, been signed by the Court executing the decree, but by the Munsarim of the Court. On the 27th June 1877 M conveyed such property to H, who purchased it bona fide and for value, and satisfied the incumbrances existing thereon. On the 15th April 1878 R sued H and M to have the order setting aside such sale set aside, and to have such sale confirmed in his favour, on the ground that it had been improperly set aside under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859, the judgment-debtor not having been prejudiced by the irregularities in respect whereof such sale had been set aside. Held by OLD-FIELD, J, that although such sale might have been improperly set aside, yet inasmuch as the order of attachment and the notifications of sale could have no legal effect, having been signed by the Munsarim of the Court executing the decree, and not by the Court, as required by section 222 of Act VIII of 1859, and inasmuch as it would be inequitable, after the incumbrances on such property had been satisfied and the state of things changed, to allow R, after standing by for a year, and permitting dealings with the property to come in and take advantage of the change of circumstances, and obtain a property become much more valuable at the price he originally offered, R ought not to obtain the relief which he sought. Held by STRAIGHT, J, that the fact that the Court executing the decree had not signed the order of attachment and the notifications of sale vitiated the proceedings in execution ab initio, and rendered the sale which R desired to have confirmed void, and R's suit therefore failed, and had properly been dismissed. RAM DIAL v MAHTAB SINGH I. property was not liable to be sold in execution of a decree of the defendants against third persons, under which it had been attached and advertised for sale. Held that such a suit could only be maintained under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), but that section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code indicated the intention of the Legislature that such questions should be determined in the execution department, and, reading together the provisions of sections 244, 278, and 283 of the Code, the suit was premature and therefore not maintainable. MAN KUAR v. 242. ——— Suit for declaration of right to have property sold in execution.—Refusal of Deputy Collector to sell in execution of decree of Revenue Court—Cause of action.—Where a Deputy Collector refuses to sell a certain property in execution of the decree of a Revenue Court, and the applicant fails to bring a suit within the proper time for a declaration of his right to have the property sold, he cannot procure to himself more time by making a second application to the Deputy Collector for execution and having the refusal repeated. A suit so brought cannot have its form changed and be treated as a suit to establish the lien which the plaintiff obtained on the property, and to bring the same to sale for discharge of that lien. RUGHOONUNDUN SINGH v. 243. ——— Suit by purchaser at execution sale to sue for partition.—Certificate of purchase by Registrar.—Conveyance—Declaration of right to share—Rules of Court, 415, 431.—The position of a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of the High Court after he has obtained a certificate from the Registrar under Rule 415 of the Rules of Court, is that of a person clothed with a right to a conveyance in virtue of a contract, he does not hold, save as regards the parties to the contract of sale, the position of an owner. When the sale is confirmed, the purchaser is entitled to a conveyance, and until he obtains a conveyance the property in the estate purchased does not, having regard to Rule 431, pass to him so as to give him rights as against parties not bound by the decree under which the sale took place. All that passes to him as against the defendant in that suit is an equitable estate and a right to a conveyance of the property. And, therefore, as the estate in the property purchased has not passed, the purchaser is not entitled to maintain a suit for partition. In such a suit he could not on partition give a good conveyance to the parties interested in the estate, nor would he be entitled to a declaration of his share in the property. JOHUE MULL KHOORBA v. S seized the ship in French territory for a debt due to him by M, and the French Court sold the ship. C made a claim on the proceeds of the sale in the hands of the Court in December 1878. The French Court required C to produce a copy of an English Court's judgment acknowledging and sanctioning C's claim against M. C sued S to obtain a declaration of his right to recover the amount due by M on the bond. Held that whether or not his lien was destroyed by the sale of the ship in French territory, C was not entitled to any of the proceeds of the sale, either at the date of the sale or of his claim in the French Court, and the denial by S. of C's right to any of the proceeds of the sale gave C. no cause of action. CHITHAMBARA v. The plaintiff was not bound to institute criminal proceedings in the first instance, and the Civil Court was bound to take cognisance of the suit under section 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1859. SHAMA CHURN BOSE v. RIGHT OF WAY—continued.

1. ———— Creation of right of way.—
User—Adverse possession.—A right of way need not have its origin in an express grant, but may be established by continued user for a certain period constituting adverse possession. RAM GUNGA DOSS v GOBIND CHUNDER DOSS . 16 W. R., 284

2. ———— User—Custom.—
Proof of right of way—A right of way may be created either by grant or by immemorial custom or by necessity, and it is necessary for a party seeking to establish a right of this kind to prove its existence, and that it is ancient and has been exercised without interruption. The determination of the existence of the right is a question depending on the evidence in each case, the right being inferred from the evidence. IMAMBUNDEE BEGUM v. SHEO DYAL RAM . 14 W. R., 199

SAVALGIAPA VIRBASAPA v BASVANAPA BASAPA . 10 Bom., 399

Proof of well-established and fixed user will be sufficient. BUGWAN CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v KHOSAL . 7 W. R., 271

3. ———— User.—Prescriptive right.—Proof of right of way.—In order to establish a right of way, the person claiming must prove uninterrupted user for a certain length of time, and if his right is interrupted must go into Court at once. No length of time can give a party such a right as destroys all the ordinary uses of the servient property,—e.g., a general right to the promiscuous use of a whole property for the purpose of driving cattle over it. JOY DOORGA DOSSIA v JUGGERNATH ROY . 15 W. R., 295

HEERA LALL KOBER v PURMESSUR KOBER . 15 W. R., 401

4. ———— User.—Presumption from long user.—Quare,—Ought a Court to infer from user alone that a right of way has been conferred by the owner of the land upon the person exercising the user, unless that user has extended over a period as long as that which the law would allow to the owner for bringing an action of ejectment if absolutely excluded from possession? MOHIM CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v CHUNDEE CHURN GOOHO . 10 W. R., 452

5. ———— User—Actual user within two years—Limitation Act, 1871, s. 27.—In a suit to establish a right of way, it is not sufficient for a plaintiff to prove user for twenty years, which ended more than two years next before the institution of the suit; he must show exercise of the right by actual user within such period of two years. GOPPEE CHAND SETIA v BROOBUN MOHUN SEN . 23 W. R., 401

6. ———— Sufferance.—A right of way by sufferance over another's land cannot create a permanent right. ASHOOTOSH CHUCKERBUTTY v TEETOO HOLDAR . W. R., 1864, 293
FUTTEH ALI v ASGAR ALI . 17 W. R., 11

7. ———— Permitting cattle to pass over ground between village and public road.—The owner of a piece of land between a village and the public road, who allows his neighbour's cows to pass over it on the way to pasture, does not thereby create a right of easement over the land so as to deprive it of all value by rendering its cultivation impossible. GOOROOCHURN GOON v GUNGAGOBIND CHATTERJEE . 8 W. R., 269

8. ———— User—Evidence of right of way.—User during previous ownership is no evidence of a right of way which relates to the land of another. OBHOY CHURN DUTT v NOBIN CHUNDER DUTT . 10 W. R., 298

9. ———— User—The finding that a right of way had been "formerly" exercised is not a sufficient finding to indicate the length of time for which the right had been exercised, and is therefore insufficient to prove a right of user. KRISHNA CHANDRA CHUCKERBUTTY v. KRISHNA CHANDRA BANIK . 3 B. L. R., A. C., 211

S. C. KRISTO CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY A KRISTO CHUNDER BURNICK . 12 W. R., 76

10. ———— Claim of right of way under contract—A party who claims, under a contract, the reopening of a way, is not required by Act IX of 1871, section 27, to prove user for twenty years. KALLARAM DHUR v. JOOGUL KISHORE SUMMAH . 23 W. R., 290

11. ———— Use limited to season of year—A right of way may be created by use continued for many successive years, even though the use is limited to one particular season of the year alone. OOMUR SHAH v. RUMZAN ALI . 10 W. R., 363

12. ———— Pathway over waste land—Discontinuance during rainy season—A right of user over a pathway may be established notwithstanding that the path passes over waste land. A temporary interruption, such as during the rainy season, cannot affect a right of user. MAHOMMED ANSUR v SEFATOOLLAH . 22 W. R., 340

13. ———— User—Easement—Existence of other access to road—Time and user create a right of easement over the property of others. A's right of way over B's homestead is not affected by the fact of there being another pathway by which access to the main road may be obtained by A. SHAM BAGDEE v FUKKEER CHAND BAGDEE . 6 W. R., 222

14. ———— Right of user—Existence of other access to premises—A plaintiff's right of user of a pathway to certain premises cannot be affected by the existence of another path by which he may obtain access to the same premises. MO-KOONDONATH BHADOORY v. SHIB CHUNDER BHADOORY . 22 W. R., 302

15. ———— Easement — Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s 26 — User as of right — Prescriptive right — For the purpose of acquiring a right of way or other easement under section 26 of the Limitation Act, it is not necessary that the enjoyment of the easement should be known to the servient owner. In this respect there is a difference between the acquisition of such rights under that Act and their acquisition under the English Prescription Act. ABZAN v. RAKHAL CHUNDER ROY CHOWDHRY . . . I. L. R., 10 Calc., 214

16. ———— User of twenty years to support servitude.—Extent and mode of user—Calcutta Municipal Act (Beng Act IV of 1876) —As establishing his right of way over the defendant's passage, the plaintiff relied upon a user of it, several times in the year, for twenty years prior to the defendant's interruption of it, by mehters for the purpose of removing the contents of a cess-pool connected with a privy belonging to the plaintiffs' house. The facts indicated by way of limit to the user of the passage only showed that it must be a reasonable user for the above purpose. There was no agreement specifying times or occasions of access, and the inference was that if the plaintiffs had thought fit to use the passage more frequently than they did, they were at liberty to do so. In and after 1876, instead of the plaintiffs' mehters, those employed by the Municipality came and went upon the passage, not at distant intervals, but daily, the plaintiffs under bye-laws, in conformity with Bengal Act IV of 1876, being bound to give them access, and the system being to clean the place daily. Held that the above was neither a discontinuance by the plaintiffs of their user nor an aggravation of the servitude. Also that, although a servitude gained for one purpose cannot be used for another, the purposes before and after 1876 being identical, the user proved prior to that year supported a right in the plaintiffs to use the passage for giving access to the servants of the Municipality for the above purpose, at reasonable and convenient times. JADULAL MULLICK v. GOPAL-CHANDRA MUKERJI . . . I. L. R., 13 Calc., 136

S. C. JUDOO LALL MULLICK v. GOPAL CHUNDER MOOKERJEE . . . I. L. R., 13 I. A., 77

Affirming the decision of the High Court, Calcutta, which held that where a right of way for a particular purpose is proved to have existed for upwards of twenty years, the Court is not bound to confine the right to the precise number of times in the year that it has been exercised, but may construe it as a right to use the road at all convenient times for the particular purpose. GOPAL CHUNDER MUKERJEE v. JUDDOO LALL MULLICK

17. ———— Proof of right of way.—Evidence.—Particular route —In a suit for declaration of a right of way over the land of another, the plaintiff must prove the particular line over which he claims the right. Mere proof of a right to pass over the land without proving the particular route will not entitle a plaintiff to a decree. RADHANATH SUGRACHARJI v. BALDONATH SEAL

18. ———— Nature of right of way. —A right of way is ordinarily a right of passing, and not a general right to pass from one point to another point. GOLUCK CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. TARINER CHURN CHUCKERBUTTY . . . 4 W. R., 49

19. ———— Mode of exercising right of way.—Indirect way —If a person has a right of way from one place to another over a particular line, he cannot be compelled to use a different and substituted way. But where the right is simply to pass from one point to another, the party desiring to exercise the right cannot claim to pass in a particular tortuous and indirect course between the two points. HAMID HOSSEIN v. GEBVAIN . . . 15 W. R., 496

20. ———— Right acquired by purchaser of house. —The purchaser of a house acquires the right to the use of a way to a road which has been enjoyed with the house by the vendor, if it is not merely a right to a way of necessity, but a particular right over a defined path. NUBEN CHUNDER BULLUB v. BHOOBUN CHUNDER MUNDUL [15 W. R., 526]

21. ———— General right of way.—Right of thoroughfare for processions —A general right of thoroughfare includes a right of way for marriage or other processions of the like nature, unless at the time of the first inception of the right it was restricted to a right of passage and such processions were interdicted. RAJ MANICK SINGH v. RUTUN MANICK BOSE . . . 15 W. R., 46

22. ———— Right to carry marriage and funeral processions. —A general right of way was held under the circumstances to include a right to carry marriage and funeral processions. LOKENATH GOSSAMEE v. MONMORUN GOSSAMEE [20 W. R., 293]

23. ———— Right to freedom from obstruction.—Ownership of soil —A person who has a right of way cannot claim anything more than that the reasonable exercise of his right shall not be obstructed. It is only ownership of the land that carries with it the ownership of every thing usque ad cælum. TOOLSEEMONEY DEBEE v. JOGESH CHUNDER SHAHA . . . 1 C. L. R., 425

24. ———— Road used only by particular section of community.—Private way —Where there is a road the privilege of using which is enjoyed only by one particular section of a community, the road is not a public one. SHAM SOONDER BHUTACHARJEE v. MONEE RAM DOSS

[25 W. R., 233]

25. ———— Continuous user.—Discontinuance.—Limitation —A right of way over the land of another must be kept up by constant use. HURIDAS NANDI v. JADUNATH DUTT

26. ——— Obstruction to right of way.
—User.—Sut by members of a joint family to enforce their right to a pathway through a door (which had been blocked up) leading to a joint thakoorbari. Held that this was not a case in which the plaintiffs claimed the right of user, but only complained of the obstruction of a passage belonging to them jointly with the defendants, and that the non-user for some years by the plaintiffs was not an abandonment of their right. CHUNDER KANT CHOWDHRY v. NUND LALL CHOWDHRY
 [16 W. R., 277]

27. ——— Substitution of new way for old one.—Non-user.—Abandonment of right.—Where a new way is substituted for an old one with the consent of the person entitled, and the non-user of the original way is accompanied by acts which warrant the Court in inferring an intention to release, the right of resumption is lost, the non-user need not extend over any defined period. RAJ BEHAREE ROY v. TARA PERSHAD ROY . 20 W. R., 188

28. ——— Loss of right of way.—Relinquishment of right in land.—The relinquishment of all rights and interests in land exchanged does not necessarily involve loss of right of way over the land. KALEE KISHORE ROY v. DEEN DYAL SEIN
 [4 W. R., 83]

29. ——— Closing right of way.—Substitution of another way.—The owner of the land over which there is right of way by an ancient pathway cannot, without the consent of the parties entitled to the right, substitute another path and shut up the ancient pathway. TARINEECHURN CHUCKERBUTTY v. 3. ——— Small Cause Court references.—The right to begin in Small Cause Court references is generally allowed to the plaintiff, but in one case the counsel for the defendant was allowed to begin where the judgment of the Small Cause Court was in favour of the plaintiff. HARAN CHANDRA MOOKERJEE v. KUNJ BEHARY BAISAK
 [9 C. L. R., 1]

5. ——— Suit for partition.—Nucleus of joint property—In a suit for partition of certain property and trading businesses, the defendants, who resisted the suit, admitted a nucleus of joint property, and claimed the right to begin, on the ground that the onus was on them to prove that the whole property and the trading businesses were not joint. Held that unless the defendants admitted all the allegations, or all the material allegations, the plaintiff was entitled to begin. AGHORE NATH NEOGY v. 6. ——— Appeal—Objection that no appeal lay.—Where, an appeal having been filed, the respondent objected that no appeal lay, and by agreement of the parties the case was set down for the agreement of this preliminary point, Held that the appellant had the right to begin. RUSTOMJI BURJORJI v. RIGHT TO USE OF WATER.

See CASES UNDER PRESCRIPTION—EASEMENTS—RIGHT TO WATER.

[W. R., 1864, 367]

2. ————— Right to open conduit for water.—Injury to neighbours—The right to take water is governed by established use. No one can open a new conduit to take additional water to the injury of his neighbours. ATHUR ALI KHAN v SEKUNDAR ALI KHAN 4 W. R., 28

3. ————— Right to surplus water of tank.—Easement—User—Channel—A right of easement may be acquired in the surplus water of a tank flowing through a defined channel, whether natural or artificial. RAYAPPAN v VIRABHADRA

[I. L. R., 7 Mad., 530]

4. ————— Right to use another's canal.—A person has no right to tap another's canal and abstract the water therefrom for his own land, unless he has acquired that right by grant or prescription. RUN BAHADOOR v. POODHEE ROY

[W. R., 1864, 319]

5. ————— Riparian proprietor, Right of.—Bunds or embankments—A riparian proprietor may deal with the stream as freely as with any other portion of his land, provided only that he must not by so doing sensibly disturb the natural condition of the stream as it exists within the limits of other proprietors, whether above or below, or on the opposite side. MONOOUR HOSSEIN v KANHYA LALL

[3 W. R., 218]

6. ————— Natural water-course.—The right which a riparian proprietor has, under certain restrictions, to the use of the water of a natural water-course, has no application to a water-course artificially constructed; and the mere fact of riparian proprietorship gives no rights whatever over such a stream. BHOOP NABAIN SINGH v KERAMUT ALI 6 W. 7. ————— Obstruction to flow of water.—Encroachment—The plaintiff and defendant were proprietors of land and gardens on opposite sides of a tidal creek, which sides were protected by walls. The defendant, the wall on his side becoming dilapidated, constructed a fresh one, altering its direction, and encroaching five feet upon the bed of the stream. In a suit for possession of land by demolishing the said wall, the plaintiff alleged that he was entitled to the solum on which it was built, that his navigation was obstructed, and that there was a danger of his screw-house falling down. It appeared, however, that the Government and not the plaintiff was the owner of the solum, and that the plaintiff neither claimed nor proved that he was entitled to the flow of the water as it had been accustomed to flow, and that that flow was seriously and sensibly diverted so as to be an injury to his rights. Held, reversing the decree of the High Court, that the plaintiff had failed to show either damnum or injuria, and therefore had no right of action. KALI KISHEN TAGORE v JODOO LAL MULLICK

8. ————— Proprietor of water-course, Right of.—Proof of user by other persons—The proprietor of a pyne has a right to allow or to deny the use of water flowing through it to other persons, unless they have also a clearly-defined right enabling them to control the water and convert it to their own use,—a right clearly found to have originated in some grant or valid contract, or to have been exercised for so long a period that such title may be presumed. INDURJEET KOOR v. LUCHMEE KOOR

[14 W. R., 349]

9. ————— Right to discharge water on to another's land on lower level.—Drainage—There is no reason why the proprietor of land on a higher level should not for the purpose of keeping his land drained, claim a right to have the water which falls thereon run off over adjoining land on a lower level. KOPIL POOREE v. MANICK SAHOO

[20 W. R., 287]

10. ————— Easement—Embankment—Drainage—Right to drainage of surplus surface water through natural water-course—The right of the owner of high lands to drain off its surplus surface water through the adjacent lower grounds is incident to the ownership of land in this country. Where the defendants had erected a dam across a natural water-course which was found to interfere with the natural drainage of the surplus rain-water of the adjacent lands of the plaintiffs, and where the lower Court had ordered that the dam be altogether removed,—Held that the Court was wrong in taking it for granted that the plaintiffs were entitled to have the whole dam removed, but should have inquired how far the erection of the dam interfered with the plaintiff's right. *ABDUL HAKIM v. flow by an embankment across it, unless he can make out some special right to do so. Such course is a part of the natural condition of the land, and the flow of the water over it, when it occurs, is a natural incident. CHUMROO SINGH v. MULLICK KHYRUT AHMED 18 W. R., 525

12. ————— Claim to erect bund cutting off water from neighbouring lands—A party claiming to erect a bund in a natural flowing river, so as entirely to cut off the water from another party, is bound to prove that he has acquired the legal right to do so by user. HEERANUND SAHOO v. KHUT-BEEROONISSA 15 W. R., 516

13. ————— Deprivation of right to a rise of water, by breaking bund—Claim to repair bund—Deprivation of the right to a rise of water is an injury, and a claim to repair a bund for the purpose of securing such right is not answered by the tender of another bund quite as good. SHUNKUR SAHOO v. GURBHOO SAHOO . 15 W. R., 216

14. ————— Infringement of right to water—Suit to remove obstruction and for damages—Cause of action—In a suit to compel defendant to remove an embankment recently constructed on his own land, on the allegation that it infringed plaintiff's right of navigation by a certain channel, where it was found that the embankment in question was no manner of obstruction to the water-course by that channel,—Held that, to entitle plaintiff to a decree, there must have been some actual infringement of his right by the defendant, and not merely some act whereby, as it were, that right was denied or questioned. SHAMA CHURN CHATTERJEE v. BOIDONATH BANERJEE 11 W. R., 2

15. ————— Cause of action—In order to maintain an action upon an infringement of a right (as where an obstruction is made to a natural flow of water), it is not necessary to show that there has been any subsequent injury consequent on such infringement. RAM CHAND CHUCKERBUTTY v. NUDDIAR CHAND GHOSE . 23 W. R., 230

16. ————— Water from tank—Onus probandi—Where a plaintiff alleged that, subsequent to his purchase of a tank, at a period specified, defendants had commenced to take water from it and had opened a channel for the discharge of the water,—Held that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove the assertion on the part of the defendants of any new right. *BUNGSEEE DHUR THAKOOR v. One party consisted of not less than five persons, who were all found to have been assembled together in the fight which took place, and it was also found that they, as well as their opponents, came armed with sticks, prepared to fight, and did fight. Held that they were not improperly convicted of rioting, their common object being to assault their opponents. The other party only consisted of four persons. It was not found what object they had in common with the first party. sum which he had paid under the Road Cess Act, which had been passed in 1871, after the Income Tax Act had been repealed. Held that the tax imposed by the Road Cess Act passed by the Bengal Council could not be considered to be a tax on income, the income tax having been a tax imposed by the Government of India on a person's annual income, levied upon whatever actually came to his hands as income, and not upon the value of his property, and that, therefore, B could not set off the amount as being income tax. Held, also, that although the Road Cess Act contains no saving clause in favour of contracts, it does not prohibit in future the making of contracts which shall interfere with the incidence of the road cess as directed by the Act, nor vacate contracts that may have been made before the passing of the Act, and in the absence of any provisions to that effect, an agreement entered into before the passing of the Act could not be affected by the subsequent passing of the Act. SURNOMOYEE DABEE v PURRISH NARAIN ROY. . . I. In a suit by the zemindar for increase of rent, the defendants claimed to set off a sum representing the amount which the zemindar was bound to contribute under the Road Cess Act and Public Works Cess Act, and which amount they had paid to the Collector. Held that the amount in question came within the terms of the kabuliati, and that the defendants were not entitled to the set off claimed by them. *Surnomoyee Dabee v. of the plaintiffs' claim. Although the effect of an interpretation clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places in the Act in which that word occurs, it is not the effect of an interpretation clause that the thing defined has annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature. It does not follow, therefore, that because lakhiraj property is defined in the Road Cess Act, 1871, to be a tenure, all the interests and consequences attached by other Acts to tenures generally, or to particular classes of tenures, become annexed to lakhiraj property. *UMACHURN BAG v. 1. ACT VIII OF 1835

1. ——— Procedure.—Sale of under-tenure.
—Beng. Reg. VII of 1799—Sales of under-tenures under Act VIII of 1835 for arrears of rent were not required to be according to the procedure laid down in Regulation VII of 1799, but according to the procedure prescribed by section 2 of Act VIII of 1835. MONOSHEE v ABDOL HOSSEIN

2. ——— Effect of sale.—Right of purchaser—Itamee tenure.—When rights and interests in a talook were sold for arrears of rent under Act VIII of 1835, the purchaser obtained no power to destroy the itamee tenure. *SOOBULCHUNDER
PAUL v. ATTUR ALI* 11 W. R., 32

3. ———— Right of purchaser—Incumbrances.—A sale of an under-tenure under Act VIII of 1835 passed only the right, title, and interest of the judgment debtor, and did not void the incumbrances created by the old tenant MANICK CHUNDER DOSS v DWARAKANATH DOSS

[2 May, 502]

4. ———— Right of purchaser.—Act XI of 1859, s 52—Sembie.—The purchaser of a holding in a khas mehal sold under Act VIII of 1835 could claim the position or privileges accorded by sections 37 and 52 of Act XI of 1859 to purchasers of permanently-settled estates, or of estates sold in districts not permanently settled, sold for arrears of revenue KYLASH CHUNDER SHAHA v. SHURNOMOYEE DOSSEE . . . 7 W. R., 318

5. ———— Incumbrances—Howladari tenure—The plaintiff held certain lands in talook Q under a howladari pottah, Q was sold for arrears of rent under Act VIII of 1835, and purchased by the defendant. After purchase the defendant dispossessed the plaintiff from his lands, on the ground that he had purchased the talook free from all incumbrances created by the late defaulting talookdar. The plaintiff brought this suit to recover possession of his lands from the defendant. Held that a purchaser of a tenure under Act VIII of 1835 did not necessarily acquire it free from all incumbrances. Case remanded for trial of the genuineness of the plaintiff's pottah JASIMUDDIN v MANSUR ALI [6 B. L. R., Ap., 149: 15 W. R., 11]

RAMJEEBUN CHOWDRY v. PEARY LALL MUNDUL [4 W. R., Act X, 30]

6. ———— Right of purchaser.—Attachment—Tender of arrears.—In a suit to set aside a sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent due up to Aghian 1262, the plaintiff, who claimed under a deed of conditional sale, was held not entitled to a decree on the following grounds. He was not a registered tenant at the time of the sale, but as a sezawal was legally in possession. The plaintiff never tendered the arrears for which the sale was made. Under Act VIII of 1835 no separate attachment of a mehal or notification of sale in the mofussil is necessary in order to render the sale valid. In this case, not the rights and interests of the defaulter, but the tenure itself, passed for the arrears due upon it. Attachment by the appointment of a sezawal is no bar to a sale for arrears due before such attachment. FORBES v PROTAP SINGH DOOGUR . . . 7 W. R., 409

7 ———— Beng. Reg. VII of 1799—Tuppa right, Extinction of.—Sembie.—A tuppa right is annihilated by a sale held under Act VIII of 1835, and clause 7, section 15, Regulation VII of 1799 ZEENUT BEBEE v RAHATOONISSA [7 W. R., 243]

I. L. R., 6 Mad., 428

9. ———— Sale of tenant's interest—Prior incumbrance—Rights of purchaser.—A sale by a landlord of a tenant's interest in his holding for non-payment of rent under the provisions of section 38 of the Rent Recovery Act (Madras Act VIII of 1865) does not defeat existing incumbrances. *Munisami v. 10. ———— Incumbrance—As the tenancy of an ordinary pottahdar only confers on him a right of occupancy until default in payment of rent and the determination of the tenancy under the provisions of the Rent Act, any incumbrance created by such pottahdar on the land cannot affect the landholder's statutory power of sale under the Act or the rights of the purchaser at such sale. KONDI MUNISAMI CHETTI v DAKSHANAMURTHI PILLAI . . . In a suit by the landlord to have the sale to the creditor declared invalid,—Held that the landlord's purchase was subject to the creditor's attachment SUBBRAMANYA v RAJARAM [I. L. 14. ———— Purchase—Right to sue.—Suit by another defaulting co-sharer to set aside sale—A suit by a sharer to set aside a sale having been dismissed on the ground that plaintiff being a defaulter the suit would not lie, plaintiff brought a second suit to claim possession of his share of the dur-putni talook, on the ground that the sale must be inoperative, inasmuch as the purchaser, a co-sharer, was also a defaulter Held that, until the sale was set aside, plaintiff was not in a position to claim possession of his share GOUREE KOMUL BHUTTACHARJEE v. RAJ KRISTO NATH [14 W. R., 369]

15. ———— Purchase—Suit by other defaulters to set aside sale—Joint owners—Dur-putnidars.—Constructive trust—Of three joint owners of a dur-putni, two held each a 4 annas share and the third an 8 annas share. Default having been made by all three in the payment of the rent, the putnidar brought a suit and obtained a decree for the arrears. In execution of this decree, proclamation was made that the dur-putni would be sold on the 5th of October 1877. Up to the commencement of the sale the 4 annas shareholders were unable to pay then proportionate amount of the decree, the 8 annas shareholder declined paying his share, and, when the sale took place, he became the purchaser of the dur-putni. In a suit brought by the 4 annas shareholders to recover their shares from the purchaser, the lower Appellate Court, reversing the decree of the Court of first instance, decided in favour of the plaintiffs. Held, on second appeal, that the sale having taken place as much through the default of the plaintiffs as through the default of the defendant, the former had no equity against the latter, and that, therefore, the suit should be dismissed RAM LOLL MOOKERJEE v. R., 94*), by which the right of a purchaser in execution of a rent-decree prevails over that of an earlier purchaser, has no application to the case of a sale under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, section 64, which provides for the sale, not of the tenure, but of the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors. LUCHMUN RAM-ONJOOR DOSS v. under section 64, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, so as to give the purchaser the same privilege as he would acquire by the purchase of an entire tenure under sections 59 and 60. A landlord who was in receipt of a half share of the rent of a certain tenure caused that share of the tenure to be sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent. After such sale A, the purchaser, took possession. Subsequently the tenant executed a mortgage, and a decree being obtained by the mortgagee the whole tenure was brought to sale in execution thereof and purchased by the mortgagee, who proceeded to oust A. In a suit by A to recover possession of his half share of the tenure on the footing of his purchase,—Held that he could not make out a title to the half tenure with the privilege attaching to the purchase of an entire tenure under sections 59 and 60 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, and that as it appeared that the mortgagor, whose rights and interests only were thus sold, was only one of several co-sharers, in the absence of the co-sharers who were not parties to the suit, A was not entitled to the relief he sought. REILY v HUR CHUNDER GHOSE. 41. ———— Right, title, and interest of registered shareholder in tenure.—Effect on joint shareholders.—Where a judgment-debtor was alone registered in the sherista of the zemindar as owner of a tenure, but it appeared that his two brothers who were joint in estate with him were entitled to an equal share with him in the tenure, but that the judgment-debtor was the manager, and when it appeared that the zemindar, being only entitled to a share in the zemindari, had obtained a decree against the judgment-debtor alone for arrears of rent, and in execution thereof proceeded to sell his right, title, and interest under section 64 of the Rent Act,—Held that as the judgment-debtor represented his brothers, and as they were equally liable to pay the amount of the decree, upon the principle set out above, the latter were not entitled to recover their share of the tenure which the auction-purchaser had obtained possession of in execution of the decree against the judgment-debtor. Doolar Chand Sahoo v Lalla Chabeel Chand, L. 42. ———— Sale of gantidar rights.—In a suit for arrears of rent, where defendants denied the relation of landlord and tenant to exist between themselves and the plaintiffs, it was found that plaintiff had been the sole owner of an estate which formed a 12 annas share of the under-tenure of a gantidar, who was liable to pay the rent of the other 4 annas to the owner of the neighbouring estate. In execution of a decree for arrears of rent due on the 12 annas share, plaintiff caused the ganti to be sold and purchased it himself, and the proceeds not being sufficient to pay the amount of the decree, he caused the tenant-right of the 4 annas share to be sold and purchased that also. Held that Bengal Act VIII of 1869, section 64, did not apply, because plaintiff was not a sharer in a joint undivided estate, and that, by his purchase, plaintiff had become the absolute owner of the 12 annas ganti, and had acquired the right, title, and interest of the last-registered tenant in the 4 annas share. The result was to place him in the position of holding the 16 annas gantidar right as against the under-tenants, who were bound to pay rent to him as de facto gantidar. JOGENDRO CHUNDER GHOSE v. SHONA KALEE. 24 W. R., 313

43. ———— Sale of immoveable property—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, s. 65.—Where one co-sharer obtains a decree for money due to him on account of his share of the rent of an ijara, and in execution of that decree attaches, in the first instance, the immoveable property of his debtor, such attachment is void and will not invalidate a conveyance of the property by the judgment-debtor made during its continuance. It is not unless and until all the moveable property of the judgment-debtor has been sold and the sale-proceeds are found insufficient to satisfy the decree, that the judgment-creditor can proceed under section 64 or 65, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, to seize and sell the immoveable property of his debtor. SARODA PROSAD GANGOOLY v TARUCK CHUNDER BHUTTACHARJEE. 2 C. L. R., 325

44. ———— Landlord and tenant—Sale of portion of under-tenure—Suit for arrears of rent.—There is nothing in section 64, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, which necessarily leads to the conclusion that under that section a share of an under-tenure cannot be sold so as to render the sale binding upon the judgment-debtor, and there is no substantial difference between the sale of a portion of an under-tenure under that section and under the Civil Procedure Code. Where, therefore, a plaintiff, who was the owner of a share in a zemindari, had obtained a decree against X, who held a talook in such zemindari, for arrears of rent due in respect of such share, and in execution of such decree brought a share of such talook to sale, corresponding with his share in the zemindari, and himself became the purchaser, and where such plaintiff subsequently instituted a suit against X, who was also the owner of a howla and nun-howla under the said talook, for arrears of rent due in respect of the share of the talook so purchased by him; and where it appeared that the sale at which the plaintiff became the purchaser was afterwards confirmed, and that he had obtained a sale certificate,—Held that such suit was not liable to be dismissed merely on the ground that the plaintiff had brought a share of an under-tenure to sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent under section 64 of Bengal Act VIII

There being nothing in the receipt to show the date on which the notice was published, no injury to the plaintiff having been proved, and it appearing that more than the time prescribed by the Regulation had elapsed before the sale actually took place, the Court refused to set aside the sale. In a suit by A against B, C., and the zemindar, the plaintiff alleged (1) that no sufficient notice had been given, and (2) that C purchased benami for B. Held, on the question of notice, that once it was found that the notice had been posted up in the cutcherry of the defaulter in accordance with clause 2, section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819, it was not essential to the validity of the sale that any other notice should have been given to the defaulters themselves, or that the service should have been verified in the manner directed by the section. Held, also, the benami purchase having been proved, that the sale must be considered good as far as the zemindar was concerned, and therefore the suit as against him must be dismissed with costs, and that as against B the parties were in exactly the same position as before the sale, B being a constructive trustee for A. Sona Rebee v. The third (K.), without informing the Collector or zemindar's agent of their intention to pay, or giving notice to the others, purchased the putni. Held also that, as between the Collector and zemindar and the defaulting putnidars, the sale was valid, but that it was void so far as it created a title in favour of the 4 annas shareholders to the 12 annas share, and K. must be treated as having made the purchase on account of, and as a trustee for, the 12 annas shareholders. KOYLASH CHUNDER BANERJEE v. 160. ——— Era—Error in advertisement of date—According to Regulation VIII of 1819, the sale of a putni tenure for arrears of rent must take place on a day in the Bengali month of Jeyt. When a sale was advertised to take place on the 5th Jeyt 1269, which date was erroneously stated in the sale notice to correspond with Saturday, May 17th, 1862, whereas the 5th Jeyt was in fact Sunday, May 18th, and the sale took place on Saturday, the 4th Jeyt, the sale was held to be illegal, in consequence of its not having taken place on the 5th Jeyt, or any subsequent date to which it might have been adjourned after due notice. BECHARAM MOOKERJEE v. ISSUR CHUNDER MOOKERJEE

[W. R., 1864, 4]

161. ——— Change of date of sale.—Sale not for full arrears—Fraud.—Suit to set aside sale—In a suit to set aside a sale for arrears of rent due up to Aughran 1262, the plaintiff, who claimed under a deed of conditional sale, was held not entitled to a decree on the following grounds. The change of date of sale from a holiday to the next advertised public sale day was not in this case such a postponement of the sale as to require any new distinct notification. A sale is not invalid because it is not for the full complete arrears due at the end of the year; it may take place at the end of the year for such arrears as may then be existing. No fraud or collusion was proved to justify the sale being set aside. FORBES v. PROTAP SINGH DOGTR

[7 W. R., 409]

162. ——— Postponement of sale.—Discretion of Court.—A sale in execution of a decree under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 can be postponed at the discretion of the Court only when the postponement is shown to promise benefit to the judgment-debtor, i.e., that it will put him in a position to satisfy the demand, or when an immediate sale would be likely to entail injury to him, while a postponement would cause no serious prejudice to the decree-holder. JANOKEENATH MOOKERJEE v. KALKE CHUNDER SINGH 7 W. R., 307

166. ——— Omission to tender before sale.—Inclusion of irrecoverable charges.—Where there is no tender before sale of the amount of rent due, a sale under Regulation VIII of 1819 cannot be set aside merely because some charges were included which might not strictly be recoverable under the Regulation, where the zemindar in his petition clearly distinguished the amount due for rent from such charges. *PITAMBER PANDA v. 167. ——— Recovery of purchase-money.—Decree for purchase-money—Execution—Fresh suit.—Interest on deposit—In a suit to set aside the sale of a putni tenure, where a purchaser is made a co-defendant under section 14, Regulation VIII of 1819, and it is decreed that the purchaser may recover the purchase-money from the zemindar defendant,—Held that the purchaser may proceed in execution without a fresh suit. If the purchase-money of a putni is in deposit in the Collectorate, and the zemindar, judgment-debtor, fails to assist the judgment-creditor in recovering his dues, he is liable for interest on the entire sum. PREOLALL GOSSAIN v. GYAN TURUNGINEE DOSSIA

[13 W. R., 161]

168. ——— Sale where no putni tenure exists—Held by JACKSON, J. (MOOKERJEE, J., dubitante), that a zemindar who puts up for sale a putni under Regulation VIII of 1819, guarantees to the purchaser that there are some lands appertaining to the putni, and if it turns out that there are no such lands (that there is in fact no such putni), the purchaser will be entitled to recover his purchase-money KHELUT CHUNDER GHOSE v KISHEN GOBIND DEB 16 W. 171. ——— Position of holder of chahar-putni.—Sale—Under-tenures.—Purchaser, Liability of.—The holder of a chahar-putni, or other subordinate tenure, whose tenure has been brought to an end by the sale for arrears of rent of a superior tenure on which his own was dependent, is, upon such sale being set aside, remitted to his previous position, and is entitled to recover possession of the land comprised in his chahar putni from the purchaser or any assignee of the purchaser at such sale, and he can do so notwithstanding that he himself took a dur-putni, including the land he had held as chahar-putnidar, from the purchaser at such sale, and that this dur-putni was afterwards sold in execution of a decree against himself, and purchased at such last-mentioned sale by the person whom he seeks to evict on the strength of his original title. *SREENABAIN BAGCHEE v. Where such a sale was so set aside and the lower Appellate Court refused to make an order for refund of the purchase-money, the High Court in special appeal, and with reference to section 14, clause 1 of the Regulation, declared the purchaser entitled to a refund with interest. *MOBARUCK ALI v. chasers of one of these estates at a sale for arrears of revenue and of a howala lease of the other at an auction sale for arrears of rent, and brought a suit in virtue of section 37 of Act XI of 1859, and section 16 of Bengal Act VIII of 1865, to avoid the tenures of the defendants, who held, in shikmi talookdari and howaladari tenure, lands appertaining to both estates. The defendants admitted the alleged nature of their holdings, but claimed exemption from eviction on the ground that their ancestor, more than twelve years before, had cleared and cultivated the land and built a house thereon, and that since his death they themselves had continued to cultivate the land and reside upon it. The lower Courts having found that the defendants were hereditary and resident cultivators, it was held that the defendants were entitled to the benefit of the proviso in section 16 of Bengal Act VIII of 1865, the words of that proviso being wide enough to embrace every resident and hereditary cultivator irrespective of his denomination. MAHOMED ASSAN-OOLLAH CHOWDHRY v SHAMSHIR ALI

L. R., 3 Calc., 293, followed. The benefit of the 4th exception to section 37, Act XI of 1859, must be limited to improvements effected bona fide and to permanent buildings erected before the revenue sales, and should not be conceded to anything subsequently constructed, or which appears to have been constructed merely for the purpose of defeating the rights of an auction-purchaser. 15. ——— Act XI of 1859,

s. 11.—Separation of shares.—The proprietors of a certain lot having obtained a separation of their shares under section 11 of Act XI of 1859, there remained one share (comprising one village and one third of three other villages) which was sold for arrears of revenue, and purchased by W. Of this share W. sold one village to P., who agreed to pay a certain sum as his share of the Government jumma, and then applied to the Collector to open a separate account at the rate which had been agreed upon. The shareholders having objected, the Collector referred the parties to the Civil Court under section 12. P. then brought a suit in the Civil Court for a separate account. Held that there was no legal objection to plaintiff having his separate share opened at the rate he mentioned, even if the jumma on the share which remained in W.'s possession was excessive, for if the whole estate were put up to sale for arrears on account of that remaining share, the other shareholders could always protect themselves by paying the sum due. *POORNO CHUNDER BANERJEE v. One of the proprietors sold his share to the plaintiff, and the shares of two other proprietors who made default in payment of the revenue were sold under section 13, Act XI of 1859, and purchased by the defendants. In a suit for exclusive possession of the share purchased by the plaintiff, Held that the defendants acquired by their purchase an interest in the property as an undivided estate, and the plaintiff was not entitled as against them to have exclusive possession of any specific share. *GUNGADEEN MISSEER v. (b) ACT I OF 1845.

18. ——— Object of act.—Fraudulent purchaser—Sale by mortgagee—Act I of 1845 was not designed to protect a fraudulent purchaser as to the question whether a plaintiff could in point of law insist, notwithstanding an auction sale for arrears of revenue, that as against him the sale ought to be viewed as a private sale. Held that, under the circumstances,—a fraudulent devise to bring about the same being alleged,—the sale must be considered a private sale. The exception that a fraudulent purchaser at an auction sale by a mortgagee will not defeat the equity of redemption, is an exception to the rule that a sale for arrears of revenue gives a title against all the world. *SIDDEE NUZUR ALLY KHAN v. But per NORMAN, J., and CAMPBELL, J., it would seem that purchasers under any of the sale laws since Act XII of 1841 may be bound by a decree in a boundary suit against the prior owner. *BOYKUNTNATH CHATTERJEE v. 25. ————— Right to alter arrangements as to rent.—Purchase by Government—Position of old proprietors.—An estate having been sold for arrears of revenue under Regulation XI of 1822, it was purchased by Government, and the Government as landlord raised the rents throughout the property. Held that the revenue sale cancelled all former arrangements entered into immediately by the former proprietors, and that the fresh settlement made by Government with the present proprietors would not restore former arrangements and rates because they happen to be the heirs of the former proprietors. *GUNGAMONEE v. 26. ————— Right to cancel talookdari tenure.—Settlement—Right to eject.—The Government purchased the zemindari rights in a pergunnah under Regulation XI of 1822 at a sale for arrears of Government revenue, and re-settled one of the talooks in the pergunnah (which talook had been created subsequently to the decennial settlement) with the plaintiffs as talookdars. Subsequently, and after the terms for which they had re-settled with the plaintiffs had expired, the Government sold their zemindari rights to the defendant, who ejected the plaintiffs. In a suit to recover possession,—Held that it was the intention of Government to retain talookdars in possession of their lands during the subsistence of their tenures subject to the condition of having their rents enhanced according to the pergunnah rates, and as in this case the proceedings which were taken by the Government showed that they did not cancel the plaintiffs' tenure, the defendant who purchased from the Government could not eject the plaintiffs, who were entitled to retain possession, subject to a liability to enhancement. Under the sale law as it existed before 1822 a talookdar could not be dispossessed at the will of the purchaser, he was at most liable to pay the full pergunnah rate, and could only be ejected after refusal to pay the enhanced rate; but under Regulation XI of 1822 dependent talooks created sub-

27. ————— Right of cancellation by Government as auction-purchaser—Exercise of power of cancellation.—Where the Privy Council, in the case of Assanoollah v. Obhoy Churn Roy, 13 Moore's I. A., 317, recognising that the Government had, as the auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue, the option of cancelling and avoiding the talookdari tenure in that case, ruled that it was incumbent on Government to take some clear step for the purpose of declaring the avoidance or cancellation of the tenure, and finding that the Government had not exercised that power, declared the under-tenant entitled to retain possession of his land during the subsistence of his tenure,—Held that the decision did not apply to a case in which the proceedings of Government showed that it had exercised the power of cancellation. Held, also, that the indulgence in that case referred mainly to tenures purchased between 1817 and 1822, but not to tenures created after Regulation XI of 1822 had informed persons that their rights were liable to be cancelled by a purchaser at an auction sale for arrears of revenue. *AFTABOODDEEN MAHOMED v. 28. ————— Right of Government to annul tenures.—Evidence of cancellation—Presumption.—Though on the sale of a zemindari for arrears of revenue the Government has the right to annul all under-tenures not specially protected, yet it cannot be taken for granted that the Government has enforced its extreme rights; and even where the right of the Government to do so is asserted in the course of the proceedings, it is a matter which has to be decided upon evidence, whether, having asserted its right, the Government afterwards actually enforced it. *TRILOCHUN CHUCKERBUTTY v. It is a mistake to suppose that their Lordships of the Privy Council, in the case of Assanoollah v. Obhoy Churn Roy, 13 Moore's I. A., 317 13 W. R., P. 30. ——— Right of purchasers.—Tender of Government revenue by defaulter's mortgagee.—Liability of Collector.—The purchaser at a revenue sale, held in default of the payment of assessment, takes free of all incumbrances, although the revenue authorities, without otherwise depriving the defaulter of his right of occupancy, under section 36 of the Bombay Survey Act, I of 1865, have only sold his right, title, and interest Abdul Gam v. Krishnaji Bhikaji, 10 Bom., 416, and Gundo Shiddeshwar v. Mardan Sahib, 10 Bom., 419, followed. The Collector may be responsible to the mortgagee of a revenue defaulter for refusing to accept the tender made by him of the Government rent, but if he does refuse it, and the land is sold, the title of the purchaser is unimpeachable. *GHELABHAI BHEKARIDAS v. 31. ——— Right of ejectment.—Beng Reg. XI of 1822.—Under-tenures.—Right to impeach sale.—The right to impeach a sale of lands for arrears of Government revenue extends not only to the defaulting proprietor, but to derivative holders under him. By Bengal Regulation XI of 1822, section 30, all under-leases are extinguished by a Government sale of the proprietor's lands for arrears of revenue, and an auction-purchaser takes the lands clear of all under-tenures. At a sale by Government for arrears of revenue, the Government became purchasers, and afterwards granted a lease of the lands for a term of years, and put their lessees into possession. At the time of the sale the lands were subject to an istemrari lease. No suit was brought to reverse the sale, but the Government some time afterwards, in consequence of doubts as to the legality of the sale, offered to give up their rights under the sale, and to restore the lands to the original proprietors, subject to the recognition of the claims of their lessees. This offer resulted in an arrangement between the Government, the original proprietors, and the Government lessees, and eventually the original proprietors upheld the lease to the Government lessees to a part of the lands called the Jungle Mehal for a term of years at a reduced rent. In a suit by the istemrari lessee for possession,—Held (reversing the decree of the Sudder Court) that by Bengal Regulation XI of 1822, section 30, the istemrari lease was determined by the sale for Government arrears, and that the arrangement by which the lands were restored to the proprietors, subject to the rights of the Government lessees, was in the nature of a compromise, and not such an unconditional restoration as amounted to a reversal of the sale, and the consequent revival of the istemrari lease. Aliter,—If a suit had been brought and a decree made for reversal of the sale *WATSON v. Affirmed on review, where it was held that a Commissioner's amulnama cannot destroy legal rights, even if no protest or objection be made. The order of a Commissioner requiring proprietors having separate jummas, to pay, for the convenience of the Collector, their shares of revenue through one of their number, cannot override their legal right of separate proprietorship allowed under the settlement law and preserved by express record, or transform such right into a joint tenancy. Where, therefore, such order had been made, and the defendants paid the revenue through one of their number and he made default,—Held, the whole estate was not liable to be sold for his default. *RAM GOBIND ROY v. 33. ——— Right to annul incumbrances.—Encroachments by neighbouring estates.—The principle under which purchasers of estates at revenue sales acquire such estates in the condition they were in at the permanent settlement, is equally recognised by the sale law (Act XI of 1859) as by

34. ——— Permanently-settled estate—An auction-purchaser at a revenue sale of a permanently-settled estate is remitted to all the rights possessed by the original settler at the date of the settlement. In order to abolish tenures and incumbrances subsequently created, his cause of action dates from his purchase. The existence of such tenures at the date of the permanent settlement must be proved by their holders, the presumption in favour of a purchaser resting upon the principle that every bigha of land sold must contribute to the public revenue unless specially exempted. The tendency of recent legislation and decision has been to give force to the contrary presumptions arising from long and undisturbed possession. FOBBES v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN . 12 B. L. R., P. 35. ——— Suit to annul under-tenures—Right to eject.—When an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue creates a putni, he cannot sue to annul an under-tenure within that putni, as his whole power under Act XI of 1859 passes to the putnidar, who alone can institute such a suit. In such a case the putnidar's competency to sue is not affected by the fact of his being a tenant of only a portion of the estate, provided that portion contains the tenure which is sought to be resumed. A putnidar, under such circumstances, though he may recover rent, is not entitled to eject an under-tenant who had been allowed to dig a tank and remain in possession undisturbed by the former proprietor for a long period (say upwards of thirty years), and who must therefore be assumed to have held with the acquiescence of the former proprietor, such acquiescence being equivalent to a lease. SREEMUNT RAM DEY v. KOOKOOR CHAND . 15 W. R., 481

36. ——— Land subject to mortgage.—Where land in the possession of a mortgagee is sold by the mamlatdar for arrears of Government land revenue,—Held that as the land revenue is the paramount charge on the land, whoever derives title from the occupant takes it subject to that charge; and that, therefore, the purchaser at the sale was entitled to the land, free from any mortgage lien. ABDUL GANI v. and the zemindar was sold. Subsequently, three persons, who had become owners of the zemindar, applied to the Collector under section 11, Act XI of 1859, and the Collector opened separate accounts with each of them for the revenue of their respective shares. The revenue due from one of them fell into arrears, and his share, which included the 441 bighas, was sold under section 13, and purchased by the plaintiff, who now sued the descendants of A. to recover possession. Held that a sale of a share of a zemindar under section 13, Act XI of 1859, does not convey to the purchaser the share free from all incumbrances created by the former zemindar, but he acquires the share, as laid down in section 54, subject to all incumbrances. KASINATH KOOWAR v. ginal proprietor. On the 18th January 1877 A. sued under Act XI of 1859, section 37, to cancel or vary the tenures, making the original proprietors, C. and various tenants, defendants. C. objected that A. had no right of suit or cause of action, as he had parted with all his rights to D. and E., and that as his entire interest in the estate was only 8 annas, he could not sue to cancel a part only of the sub-tenures. D. and E. then applied to be made parties. Held they could not sue, as they were not purchasers of an entire estate within section 37, Act XI of 1859. Even on the assumption that D. and E. were properly made plaintiffs, the lower Appellate Court should have taken into consideration certain admissions made by them as to the existence of the under-tenure, both before and after the Government sale. *Sreemunt Ram Roy v. could not prove the execution by the defendant of the power of attorney in the name of the person alleged to have signed the bond for the defendant, yet as the plaintiff had paid the arrears of revenue due on the mortgaged property in the bond fide belief that he had a rightful interest in it, and would thereby save the property from sale, and be entitled to recover the money so paid, such payment was held to be not officious, and the suit was decreed BADAUM KOO-WUR v. 63. ————— Sale afterwards set aside—Payment by purchaser made pending proceedings to set aside sale to save estate from further sale.—Plaintiff, the inchoate owner of an estate purchased by him at a sale in execution of a decree against it, was held justified, whilst the proceedings with regard to the validity of the sale were pending, in preserving the estate from sale to another, whether for arrears of Government revenue or for the amount of a decree for which the estate had been attached, and when the sale to him was set aside and restored to A, entitled to be repaid any amounts bond fide paid by him for the preservation of the estate. If A made any arrangement with mokurraridars by which the latter stipulated to pay the Government revenue for him, plaintiff could not recover from the mokurraridars, there being no privity between him and them. His remedy was against A, who again had his remedy against the mokurraridars. HOSSEIN BUKSH KHAN v. ROY DHUNPUT SING . . . 13 W. R., 289

64. ————— Liability of estate held by Hindu widow for debt incurred to person making payment to protect tenure.—Act I of 1845, s. 9—An estate mortgaged was about to be sold for arrears of Government revenue, when it was saved from sale by the mortgagee depositing a sum sufficient to discharge the revenue. The mortgagee brought a suit against the person in possession of the talook, the Hindu widow of the original mortgagor, seeking, under section 9, Act I of 1845, to obtain repayment from her personally of the money paid to save the sale of the talook, not making the reversioners defendants, and not praying that the talook in its entirety might be sold to pay the amount due. A decree was given in that suit to the mortgagee,

SALE FOR ARREARS OF REVENUE

and on execution of that decree the reversioners intervened. Held that the mortgagee and those claiming under him had no charge on the estate, and were not entitled to have it sold in its entirety to pay the amount which was paid in to stop the sale of the estate. The action brought under section 9, Act I of 1845, was only a personal action, and the decree gave no remedy against the land, the sale of which for arrears of revenue had been stopped by the deposit. In such a suit the question is not whether the person who pays the arrears acquires thereby a charge on the talook which he saves from sale, but whether he seeks to enforce that right he must do so in a suit properly framed for that purpose, and not merely in a suit which is confined to a personal remedy against the person in possession of the talook. If the person who so pays the arrears of rent seeks repayment only, under the section and law cited, as against the person in possession of the talook, who has only a limited interest therein, and confines his suit to that object, the decree so obtained against the person in possession can only be made effectual against the property of that person, including such interest as he had in the talook. This ruling does not affect the general doctrine that, in a suit brought by a third person, the object of which is to recover, or to charge an estate of which a Hindu widow is the proprietress, she will, as defendant, represent and protect the estate, as well in respect of her own as of the reversionary interest. NOGENDER CHUNDRO GHOSE v. 65. ————— Payment by putnidar to save tenure from sale.—Mistake in Collectorate in crediting payment as deposit.—The payment of revenue into the Collectorate by a putnidar to save the estate from sale is equivalent to payment of the putni rents to the zemindar. The fact that the zemindar had himself paid money into the Collectorate which he intended as revenue, but which by mistake was credited to a deposit account, and for which he took a receipt showing that the money was received as a deposit, and not as a payment of revenue, does not render the putnidar liable. JOTENDER MOHUN TAGORE v. 72. ——— Suit for sale-proceeds by mortgagee.—Omission to give notice of charge on estate sold.—A. purchased certain villages in the name of his son B. A., being indebted to C., executed a mortgage-bond and deposited the title-deeds of those villages with C. as security for the debt. C. afterwards sued A. for recovery of the mortgage-debt, and ultimately obtained a decree in his favour. Pending this suit A. died and was succeeded by B., his heir, against whom the suit was revived. B. became a defaulter to Government, when the Government authorities seized the villages, and took steps for bringing them to sale to satisfy the Government demands. C. informed the Government officer of his claim, and petitioned to have the sale stayed, but the Collector sold the villages as the property of B., suppressing the notice of the equitable charge of C. upon the villages. C. then sued B., the Collector, and the auction-purchasers, claiming to be entitled to the sale-proceeds of the villages in the hands of the Government in satisfaction of his mortgage-debt. The Sudder Dewany Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim, on the ground that the decree made in the suit against A. was against the effects of A., and only applied to such property as B. was in possession of at that time; and that as it had been sold to realise the demands of Government, the decree did not apply to the villages. This decision was reversed on appeal, the Judicial Committee holding, first, that the suit was properly instituted for recovery of the sale-proceeds in possession of Government, as the decree obtained by C. against B. operated as a conversion of the estate of A., making it assets in B.'s hands, which C. had a right to follow, secondly, that as the Government had notice of C.'s equitable charge upon the villages, and suppressed that fact at the auction sale to the purchasers, there was a clear equity in C. to call upon the Government for payment out of the auction-proceeds received by them, and an account was directed of the amount received by the Collector from the sale of the villages with interest, so far as the amount received would extend to the payment of C.'s mortgage-debt. Semble,—Where property is sold by Government for general debts and not for arrears of revenue, they sell only the interest of the debtor, and do not guarantee the vendor a title. *Douglas v. 73. ——— Irregularity in conduct of sale.—Act XI of 1859, ss 25, 26, 27-33.—Substantial injury—Form of petition—Remedy by suit—The object of the revenue sale law (XI of 1859) is to give a title to the purchaser which shall not be open to challenge by anybody; and the only ground on which a revenue sale can be set aside is (section 25) that of irregularity in conducting the sale, in which case the Commissioner can set it aside on a petition of appeal presented to him within fifteen days of the sale. The petition may disclose a case of hardship or injustice where irregularity does not exist, as, for instance, that the sale has taken place where no arrear is due, and under such circumstances the Government, under section 26, may set aside the sale. If the Commissioner will not interfere, the party aggrieved may, within one year of the sale becoming conclusive (section 27), bring an action in the Civil Court under section 33, and the Court may set aside the sale on proof of irregularity and substantial injury caused thereby. If no irregularity producing substantial injury is proved, the Civil Court cannot entertain an action to set aside a sale for arrears, and the only course open to an injured party is by a suit for damages as provided for in section 33. WOMESH CHUNDER CHATTERJEE v. Subsequently, the 31st May being ascertained to be a holiday, and the 1st June being a Sunday, the Collector, purporting to act under section 20 of the Act, issued a notification on the 26th May, postponing the sale till the 2nd June. On that day the sale was held, and the Commissioner having upheld it on appeal, a certificate of title was given to the purchasers. Held, in a suit to set aside the sale, that inasmuch as the notification under section 6 of the Act had not been affixed thirty days before the day fixed by it for holding the same, the requirements of that section had not been fulfilled, and the irregularity was not cured by the notification of the 26th May. Held, further, that the Court was not bound, under section 8 of Bengal Act VII of 1868, to presume conclusively that the provisions of section 6 of Act XI of 1859, as regards the fixing of the date of sale, had been complied with. Under section 8 of Bengal Act VII of 1868, the effect of a certificate of title having been given to the purchaser is merely that the Court is bound to presume conclusively the due service and posting of notices. BAL MOKOOND LALL v. of section 6, Act XI of 1859, is not a mere irregularity, and is not one of those errors in procedure which are intended to be cured by section 8 of Bengal Act VII of 1868. 84. ———— Fraud.—Act XI of 1859, ss. 6, 7, 18.—Ground for setting aside sale.—In a suit to set aside a sale for arrears of Government revenue held on the 26th March 1879, it was alleged as grounds for setting the sale aside (1) that the arrears had been paid into the Collector's treasury on the previous day and a receipt granted for them, and that, according to the custom which had prevailed in the Collectorate of the district on payment of arrears being so made, the property had always been exempted from sale; (2) that the notices issued under sections 6 and 7 of Act XI of 1859 were not served according to law, and (3) that the purchaser at the sale had dissuaded other persons from bidding as alleged. Held, that the sale was valid as no order had been made by the Collector in writing exempting the property from sale under section 18 of Act XI of 1859, mere payment of arrears into the treasury without an order under section 18 not having in itself the effect of exempting the property from sale. Held, also, that the object of the notification under section 7 of Act XI of 1859 being to give notice to the ryots not to pay rent to defaulting zemindars, non-service of such notification could not be a ground for invalidating the title of the auction-purchaser; and that inasmuch as the irregularity in the service of notice under section 6 of Act XI of 1859 was not taken in the grounds of an appeal which had been presented to the Commissioner, it could not be urged in a regular suit as a ground for setting aside the sale. Held, further, that it was no fraud for persons at a sale for

s. 5—Act XI of 1838—Suit to set aside sale—Costs of partition—Sanction of Board of Revenue.—Reng Reg XIX of 1814—On 12th June 1867 some of the proprietors of an estate applied to the Collector for a partition under Regulation XIX of 1814. On the same day the Collector issued a notice to all the shareholders, including the plaintiffs in this suit, calling upon them to come in within one month and show such cause and offer such objections, &c., as they should think fit. It did not appear that the plaintiffs did come in or did anything upon this. Similar applications were made by other shareholders. On the 19th August 1867 the Collector drew out a tabular statement, purporting to be in pursuance of section 4, Regulation XIX of 1814. In it was a column giving the shares into which the expenses of the partition were to be divided. On the same day a notice was issued to the proprietors, ordering in them to pay their respective quotas of the expenses accordingly. It was said by the defendants that the apportionment was confirmed by the Commissioner on the 20th January 1868. On the 6th March 1868 it was ordered by the Collector that a proclamation should be issued in accordance with paragraph 4 of section 5 of Act XI of 1859, directing the plaintiffs, as defaulters in two sums of R252-3-2 and R9-9-6, to pay the Government revenue. On the 28th March such proclamation was issued accordingly. Subsequently one of the plaintiffs came in, and offered to pay all that was then due and outstanding. His application was rejected, and on the same day, the 8th April, the sale proceeded, and the whole interest of the plaintiffs was sold for R16,900. The plaintiffs appealed to the Commissioner, but their appeal was dismissed. The plaintiffs therefore brought a suit against the purchasers and the Collector for the recovery of the property and for cancellation of the sale. Held that the sale was void. There was no arrear of Government revenue justifying a sale under Acts XI of 1838 and XI of 1859, section 5. There could be no arrear until demand after sanction by the Board of Revenue and by the Lieutenant-Governor of the estimate of expenses prepared by the Collector and fixed by the Commissioner. The Board must give its sanction in each case, and the defendants failed to show that it had done so. But even if the Commissioner had power finally to determine the amount and date of payment, it was not shown that he had done so, or supposing that he had, that any fresh demand had been made upon the parties liable. HAR GOPAL DAS v RAM GOLAM SAHI

92. — Unauthorised sale by Collector.—Want of sanction—Subsequent confirmation—Accounts.—Costs.—The sale by a Collector of a whole talook in one lot for arrears of revenue, without specific authority previously conferred by the Board of Revenue, was held to be an act unauthorised by the general rules and principles of the Regulations, and not rendered valid by the subsequent authorised confirmation of it by the Board, and by the appropriation of the surplus proceeds of the money by the defaulting proprietor. The proprietor's acquiescence in a sale made, as he believed, by the authority of the Board of Revenue, did not give legal efficacy to a sale altogether void for the want of such authority, or bar his claim to annul the sale on that ground. The Courts below, without entering into any investigation of the profits made by the purchaser during his occupation of the estate, assumed that he had reimbursed himself the amount of the purchase money and interest out of the profits of the estate. The Privy Council, however, saw no ground for such an assumption, and directed that an account should be taken of the principal and interest due to the purchaser in respect of the purchase-money paid by him, and also of the net profits made by him out of the estate during his occupation; and that on payment to him of whatever may appear due to him on taking such account, possession of the talook should be delivered to the proprietor. The Privy Council further, acquitting the purchaser of all blame in the transaction, reversed so much of the decrees of the Courts below as condemned him in costs, and ordered each party to bear his own costs in all the Courts. MITTERJEET SINGH v. 1. PERSON SELLING PROPERTY OF WHICH
HE IS NOT, BUT AFTERWARDS BECOMES, OWNER.

1. ——— Obligation to make good the sale out of subsequently-acquired interest.—Vendor and purchaser.—The doctrine—that where a person sells property of which he is not the owner, but of which he afterwards becomes the owner, he is bound to make good the sale to the purchaser out of his subsequently-acquired interest—does not apply to a case where the sale was made through the Court at the instance of an executioncreditor, and was, therefore, compulsory. ALUK-MONEE DABEE v. BANEE MADHUB CHUCKERBUTTY

2. OBJECTION TO SALE.

2. ——— Dispossession of third party in execution.—Resistance or obstruction by stranger on delivery to auction-purchaser.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 269—There was no provision in the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, similar to that contained in section 269 of Act VIII of 1859, which enabled the Court executing a decree to inquire into a complaint made by a person other than the defendant, on the ground of dispossession in the delivery of possession to the purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree; and, therefore, the only remedy of a person so dispossessed was by regular suit A, a decree-holder, purchased certain property belonging to B, his judgment-debtor, at a sale in execution of his decree, and delivery of possession to him was ordered. A stranger to the suit thereupon presented a petition to the Court executing the decree, setting up a title to a moiety of the property in question, and prayed for an investigation into his right, and for recovery of possession, on the ground that he had been dispossessed by A. Held that the application could not be maintained. IN THE MATTER OF a decree ordering the sale of immoveable property, it is not competent for the Court to refuse to sell it because a stranger to the suit in which such decree was obtained, who is in possession of such property, impeaches the decree as having been obtained by fraud, the course open to him, if he wishes stay of execution, being to file a suit and obtain an injunction for that purpose. *PURSHOTTAM VITHAL v. PURSH-

3 STAY OF SALE.

4. ——— Stay of sale in regard to a particular property.—Other property of judgment-debtor.—To save a particular property from sale, a judgment-debtor must show the value and condition of other properties in her possession, and the Judge must consider how and by what arrangement such a disposal of different portions of such property may be made so as to avoid the sale of the property already attached. *DEB KUMARI BIBEE v. RAM LALL MOO-

5. ——— Stay of sale pending administration suit.—Mortgage-decree — Right of secured creditor—In execution of a decree on a mortgage bond executed by the father of the judgment-debtors, since deceased, which decree directed that the mortgage lien should be enforced, first, by sale of the property specifically mortgaged, and, secondly, if the debt remained unsatisfied by the sale of the other property in the possession of the judgment-debtors, the judgment-creditor proceeded to have the property sold. After issue of the sale notification one of the judgment-debtors applied for stay of the sale, on the ground that an administration suit was pending with respect to the property of his father, the mortgagor, and also asked that a receiver be appointed and arrangements made for paying off the mortgage-debt and saving the property from sale.
Held that the Court was wrong in passing such order, inasmuch as there were no reasonable grounds why a secured creditor should be debarred from enforcing his security pending the administration suit. *KRISTO-

In 1869 one of the parties to that litigation obtained a decree for money against the zur-i-peshgidars; and in 1874, in execution of this decree, all the right, title, and interest of the representatives of the latter in the lease of 1851 was sold to a third party. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that the right to the mesne profits awarded by the decree of 1860 did not pass by the sale, but remained in the representatives. GANESH LALL TEWARI v. The Court which granted the decree, intending to execute it, approved the proceedings of an Ameen purporting to put the decree-holders into constructive possession of a certain number of mouzahs of the talook. In 1850 the appellants, in execution of a decree for money obtained by them against the respondents, purchased at a sale, amongst other things, their "right, title, and interest" in the decree of 1843. Held (affirming the judgment of the High Court) that possession of the mouzah having been delivered, so far as it could be delivered, considering the attachment to which the talook containing these mouzahs was subject, the decree of 1843 had been so far executed; and that what was acquired by the appellants at the execution sale was only the unexecuted portion of the decree of 1843. *GRISHCHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v. —Right of purchaser—Where on an execution sale there is a discrepancy between the conditions in the notification of what is to be sold, and the certificate of what has been sold, the conditions in the notification are to be taken as of superior authority in dealing with the conflicting claims of innocent third parties whose rights are affected by the variation. In execution of a decree for arrears of rent, an application was made for a sale of the tenure for the arrears of which the decree had been obtained. A notification was issued purporting to be a sale proclamation under Act VIII of 1859, section 249, and in pursuance of that notification the sale of the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor took place. Held that the tenure did not pass by that sale, notwithstanding that the sale certificate stated it was the tenure itself which had been sold. UMA CHURN SEN v. Subsequently, the mehal talook B, "together with original and attached mehal and all the zemindari rights appertaining thereto," was sold in the execution of a decree enforcing the mortgage. The auction-purchaser subsequently contracted to sell the "entire talook B, jumma R6,800-4-7," but afterwards refused to perform the contract, and was sued for its specific performance. The plaintiff in this suit stated that the subject-matter of the contract was the "entire talook B, jumma R6,800-4-7," and the decree which the purchasers obtained for the specific performance of the contract referred to its subject-matter in similar terms. Held, in a suit by the purchasers for the possession of the alluvial mehal, that the terms of the mortgage were sufficiently comprehensive to include that mehal, and it was not intended by the entry of the jumma of mehal B, exclusive of the jumma of the alluvial mehal, to exclude the latter from the mortgage, the entry of the jumma being merely descriptive. Also that the alluvial mehal passed to the auction-purchaser at the auction-sale, under the words "attached mehal." Also that the sale to the plaintiffs passed the alluvial mehal, the words "the entire talook B" being sufficient to include it, the entry of the jumma of mehal B in the sale contract, plaintiff, and decree being merely descriptive. GANPATI v SAADAT ALI [I. In execution of the decree, the right, title, and interest of A, in a stable, which in fact belonged to the firm, was sold to the plaintiff. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against B, the other partner in the firm, to recover possession of the property,—Held that the plaintiff was in no better position than a purchaser at a sale of partnership property made in execution of a decree against a single partner, and that he could not be allowed to effect a partial partition, which the judgment-debtor, to whose right he succeeded, would not have been entitled to obtain. All that the plaintiff could do was to bring a suit for an account and settlement of the whole concerns of the firm, and claim that interest in the property which upon a final settlement might be ascertained to belong to his judgment-debtor. KALYANBHAI v MOTIRAM JAMNADAS. . . . 10 Bom., 378

the undivided estate—Mortgage by one coparcener.—In 1848 two members of an undivided family mortgaged some land forming a portion of the ancestral estate. The mortgagee, having obtained a decree in 1856 on his mortgage, caused 20 guntas of the mortgaged land to be attached and sold on account of the right and interest of one of the mortgagors only on 24th January 1871. In a suit brought by the purchaser against a third member of the undivided family, in whose possession the 20 guntas then were, to recover the same from him as being the property of the mortgagor whose right and interest therein had been attached and sold. Held that the purchaser could take no more than the share of the coparcener whose interest alone had been attached and sold, though this share might be defined as it existed at the time of the mortgage made by him in 1848. PANDURANG ANANDRAY v BHASKAR SHADASHIV 11 Bom., 72

But if, however, it appears that the judgment-debtor has been sued as representing the ownership of the whole tenure, and that the sale, although purporting to be of the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor only, was intended to be, and in justice and equity ought to operate as, a sale of the tenure, the whole tenure must be considered as having passed by the sale. 54. — Execution of decree against one brother.—Rights of other brothers—J purchased a 10 biswas share in a village, and Y purchased a village, both of which properties were, at the time they were respectively purchased, mortgaged to secure one debt. J died, leaving four sons. After J's death, Y, whose village had been sold in execution of a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property, sued R, eldest son of J, for rateable contribution in respect of the debt secured by the mortgage, and he obtained a decree for Rs 210 and costs, and directing the 10 biswas share to be sold in satisfaction of the decretal amount. Upon attachment of the share in execution of the decree, the three younger sons of J claimed 7½ biswas as belonging to them, and prayed that the same might be released from attachment. This objection was disallowed as made too late, and the sale in execution of the decree took place. The sale certificate showed that the property sold was "the rights and interests" of R in the 10 biswas. The three younger sons of J subsequently brought a suit to establish their right to 7½ biswas out of the 10, and to set aside the sale to that extent. Held that the shares of the plaintiffs were unaffected by the sale, and all that passed thereunder to the purchaser was the 2½ biswas share of the judgment-debtor. The plaintiffs were not bound by the decree in a suit to which they were not parties, and by a sale to which they objected, and in the teeth of the terms of the sale certificate put forward to defeat them. SUNDAR LAL v YAKUB ALI

57. — Son's interest in joint ancestral property.—Sale of right, title, and interest of father—The sale of the right, title, and interest of a father in ancestral property, in execution of a decree for a debt incurred by him, passes as well the right, title, and interest of the son, where the debt was not incurred for an immoral purpose, and where the purchaser has inquired whether there was a decree against the father, and that the property was properly liable to process and sale in satisfaction of the decree, and has purchased the estate bonâ fide under the execution, and bonâ fide paid a valuable consideration for it. In determining whether the sale passed the right, title, and interest of the son, the nature of the debt and not the nature of the property must be considered. Unless it can be shown that the debt was incurred for an immoral purpose, the question as to the nature of the debt must be held to be determined against the son by there having been a decree against the father, and his right, title, and interest in the family property. PANDIT HAIT RAM v MULLU. . . 7 N. 60. ———— Attachment of family property in execution of decree against Hindu father—Sale limited to interest of father on objection by sons—Right acquired by purchaser—In execution of a personal decree obtained against the father of an undivided Hindu family and one of his sons, the creditor attached the family estate. The two remaining sons objected, by petition, to the attachment of their shares, and the Court directed that the sale should be confined to the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors. The creditor, having purchased at the sale, obtained possession of the whole estate. Held that the right, title, and interest of the father purchased by the creditor was only a right to obtain the share of that judgment-debtor by partition. *SUBAYYAN v. 61. ———— Money-decree against father—Attachment of sons' shares.—In a suit brought against the father of a Hindu family and his eldest son, on a bond executed by the former, by which family property was hypothecated as security for the repayment of the debt, a decree was passed against the father only, and his share of the property was declared liable to be sold. In execution of this decree, family property was attached, but, on the intervention of the younger sons, the attachment was set aside as to their shares. In a suit brought by the decree-holder to establish his right to sell the younger sons' shares in satisfaction of the decree against their father,—Held that, so far as the younger sons were concerned, the decree must be treated as a decree for money against the father, and that all that could be sold in execution of the decree against the father was the share of the father. *UMAMESWARA v. father's death—Right of purchaser—In execution of a money-decree obtained against the holder of an impartible zemindari, the creditor attached certain immoveable property—portion of the zemindari—which he described as the property of the debtor. 63. ———— Joint Hindu family—Sale of ancestral estate in execution of decree against father—Effect of sale on son's rights and interests—When a decree has been made against the father and manager of a joint Hindu family in reference to a transaction by which he has professed to charge or sell the joint ancestral property, and a sale has taken place in execution of such decree of the joint ancestral property, without any limitation as to the rights and interests sold, the rights and interests of all the coparceners are to be assumed to have passed to the purchaser, and they are bound by the sale, unless and until they establish that the debt incurred by the father, and in respect of which the decree was obtained against him, was a debt incurred for immoral purposes of the kind mentioned by Yagnavalkya, chapter II, section 48, and Manu, chapter VIII, sloka 159, and one which it would not be their pious duty as sons to discharge. If, however, the decree, from the form of the suit, the character of the debt recovered by it, and its terms, is to be interpreted as a decree against the father alone and personal to himself, and all that is put up and sold thereunder in execution is his right and interest in the joint ancestral estate, then the auction-purchaser acquires no more than that right and interest,—i. e., the right to demand partition to the extent of the father's share. In this last-mentioned case, the coparceners can successfully resist any attempt on the part of the auction-purchaser to obtain possession of the whole of the joint ancestral estate, or, if he obtains possession, may maintain a suit for ejectment to the extent of their shares upon the basis of the terms of the decree obtained against the father, and the limited nature of the rights passed by the sale thereunder. *Gurdharee Lall v. 65. ————— Mitakshara law—Alienation, voluntary and involuntary, by the members of a family governed by the Mitakshara law—A., a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara law, after the attachment of a property, part of his ancestral estate, to which he and his minor son B were jointly entitled as members of a joint Hindu family, conveyed by a deed of gift the whole of his interest in the ancestral property, including the property under attachment, to B. Five days after the execution of the deed of gift, the property was sold in execution of the decree of the attaching creditor, C, and was purchased by C at such sale. Ten days after the sale, A instituted proceedings, under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859, to set it aside on the ground of irregularity. These proceedings were afterwards continued in the name of A, but virtually on behalf of the minor B, under the control and direction of the Collector, who had taken charge of his estate, and appointed a manager under Act XL of 1858. These proceedings terminated in 1874 by the application to set aside the sale being dismissed, and the sale was therefore confirmed, and C took possession of the property. In 1877 a suit was instituted on behalf of B, by the manager appointed by the Collector, against C and A to recover possession of the property, on the ground (1) that when it was sold it was not the property of A, the judgment-debtor, and (2) that the property of a joint Hindu family could not be sold or alienated by, or taken in execution of, a decree against a single member of that family. Held (1) that the fact that the plaintiff, through his guardian, had actively intervened in the proceedings under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859, was no bar to the institution of the present suit on his behalf, (2) that C. at the sale purchased the interest, whatever it was, of A only, and was entitled to have it ascertained and allotted to him on partition, and (3) that although under the Mitakshara

72. ——— Purchaser of mortgaged property, Rights of—Right to set aside incumbrances—A purchaser of property sold under a decree in favour of a mortgagee cannot claim to set aside, as prejudicial to his rights, a ticca pottah granted by the mortgagee when those rights were not in existence. It cannot be maintained that the purchaser of property sold under a decree in favour of a mortgagee takes the property free from such lease or faim as the owner might have found to be expedient or convenient, provided the value of the property was not impaired and the operation of the mortgagee's lien not impeded. BANEE PERSHAD v REET BRUNJUN SINGH. 10 W. 73. ——— Conditional sale executed before sale in execution, but after mortgagee's decree—A purchaser under a decree for sale obtained by a mortgagee under a simple mortgage does not purchase subject to a conditional sale executed by the mortgagor after the prior mortgagee had obtained a decree of sale, but before the property was actually sold. RAJNARAIN SINGH v SHEERA MEAN. 7 W. R., 67

74. ——— Nature of mortgagee's security.—Sale by mortgagee—Rights of subsequent mortgagee—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 259.—The security to which a mortgagee becomes entitled under the ordinary form of mortgage in the mofussil is the right to sell the entire estate of the mortgagor as the same existed at the date of the mortgage, and he cannot be deprived of this security by any subsequent charges on the property or prior unregistered charges which the mortgagor may create or have created. When he brings the property to sale, the sale is an out-and-out sale of the estate of the debtor, and the purchaser takes the property subject only to those incumbrances which were in existence at that date, though such of the subsequent incumbrances as may, at the time of the sale, have taken out execution, may have a right to satisfy their claims from the surplus proceeds of the sale. In applying section 259 of the Code of Civil Procedure to cases of the above description, the words, "the right, title, and interest of the defendant in the property sold," must be understood as meaning the right, title, and interest which the decree ordered to be sold,—i e, the right, title, and interest which the judgment-

76. ——— Right of purchaser—Rights of respective mortgagees—A mortgage made by way of security for money advanced remains a mortgage until the debt is satisfied, and the mortgagee-creditor has every right to sue to obtain a decree and sell that which is held by him as security for his money, without any regard to the proceeding of any other subsequent mortgagee or purchaser. A purchaser at a sale in execution of such a decree under a prior mortgage, as well as the original holder of a prior mortgage, has rights far superior to those of any other mortgagee or purchaser of a subsequent date. A subsequent purchaser, by payment of an earlier mortgage, and obtaining a decree for the money so paid, does not acquire any rights belonging to that mortgage. His payment was a voluntary act, and his decree against his vendor was a personal one for a simple debt, not secured by any security connected with any portion of the land in dispute. DHOREE ROY v BULDEB NARAIN SINGH. 77. ——— Purchase by mortgagee.—Lien of mortgagee—Liability of purchaser.—Incumbrances—Certain mouzahs were granted in zur-i-peshgi lease by G to plaintiff's ancestor. After G's death his heir, F, pledged one of the mouzahs, B, with others as collateral security, in a bond in favour of plaintiff, and some years later executed a zur-i-peshgi pottah in favour of defendant, who obtained possession by paying to plaintiff the money due under the first zur-i-peshgi lease. Plaintiff then sued F alone on his bond and obtained a decree, in execution of which he sold a share in B and purchased it himself. In a suit for possession and to have the superiority of his lien declared over defendant's zur-i-peshgi,—Held that plaintiff was not entitled to possession until he paid off the whole of the amount advanced by the defendant to clear off the debt due under the first zur-i-peshgi lease. Held, also, that the holder of a subsequent incumbrance, by paying off a prior incumbrance, acquires all the rights of the latter so far as the amount actually paid by him for that purpose is concerned. *BEKON SINGH v. 78. ———— Right of purchaser of mortgaged property.—First and second mortgages—Where a mortgagee sues upon his mortgage bond and his claim is decreed, the decree should be satisfied out of the mortgaged property, and not out of the right, title, and interest which remain in the mortgagor. The purchaser at the execution sale acquires all the interest which passed by the mortgage to the mortgagee, and any interest which remained in the mortgagor,—i.e., his equity of redemption. If there was a second mortgage, all that it could pass from the mortgagor was his equity of redemption, and the decree in a suit on such mortgage could only authorise the sale of the equity of redemption, unless the first mortgagee was made a party, and his mortgage shown to be invalid and the second mortgage to have priority. DOOLAL CHUNDER DEB v. GOLUCK MONEE DEBIA

79. ———— Effect of sale — Parties—The usual mode, in the mofussil Civil Courts, of selling in mortgage suits “the right, title, and interest” of the mortgagor or his heir, is not correct, if deemed to be his right, title, and interest at the time of the sale. The intention of the Court is to pass to the purchaser the right, title, and interest both of the mortgagor and mortgagee. What passes to the auction-purchaser under the certificate of sale is the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor as it stood when he made the mortgage, and not merely as it stood at the time of the Court sale. One U mortgaged certain immoveable property to A. R. (defendant No. 1) for Rs 400 on the 7th May 1865. On the death of U, the mortgagee A. R. brought a suit (No. 311 of 1871) against his widow, K (defendant No. 2), but did not make his (U’s) children (who were minors) parties to it. On the 28th July 1871 A. R. obtained a decree for Rs 460, being the amount of principal and interest due on his mortgage, with further interest from the date of suit to date of payment. That decree directed satisfaction of the amount due under it out of the mortgaged property if it were not paid by the widow, K, (defendant No. 2). K having failed to satisfy the decree, the Court, on the application of A. R. (the decree-holder), sold the mortgaged property on the 19th September 1872 for Rs 400 to the brother of A. R. On the 7th August 1873 the auction-purchaser obtained a certificate of sale to the effect that he had purchased at the Court sale “the right, title, and interest of K” (the widow) in the mortgaged property. On the 17th August 1874 the auction-purchaser sold the property for Rs 700 to the father of the plaintiff. In 1877 the plaintiff sued A. R. (the mortgagee and decree-holder) to recover possession of the property with mesne profits. U’s widow K and children (two sons and a daughter) were defendants in the suit, the plaintiff alleging, in addition to the facts just stated, that these defendants had colluded with the tenants of the property in dispute, and collected the produce thereof. Defendant No. 1 (A. R.) denied his liability. The answer of defendants Nos. 2, 3, 4, and 5 (respectively the widow, two sons, and a daughter of U) substantially was that the Court sale did not affect the rights of defendants Nos. 3, 4, and 5, as they had not been parties to the mortgage suit No. 311 of 1871, and that they were entitled to hold the property. The Subordinate Judge awarded the plaintiff’s claim, holding that both the sales—viz., the Court sale under the mortgage-decree in suit No. 311 of 1871, and the subsequent private sale by the auction-purchaser—were bond fide and binding on defendants Nos. 2, 3, 4, and 5, inasmuch as the debt for which the property was sold had been contracted by U. This decree was reversed, on appeal, on the ground that the Court sale extended only to the right, title, and interest of K (defendant No. 2) in the mortgaged property, and did not affect the rights of defendants Nos. 3, 4, and 5, who were not parties to it. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the defect in the title of the purchaser (plaintiff) arose from the circumstance that the suit of A. R. (No. 311 of 1871) for foreclosure and sale was sufficiently constituted as to parties, both the sales having been found to be unimpeachable in all other respects, and that the defendants Nos. 3, 4, and 5 were only entitled to the same relief which they would have obtained if they had been made parties to that suit—viz., the right of redeeming the property by paying off the mortgage. The High Court accordingly reversed the decree of the District Judge, and directed the defendants Nos. 3, 4, and 5 to pay to the plaintiffs, within six calendar months from date, the sum of Rs 460, with interest on the principal (Rs 400) from date of the institution of suit No. 311 of 1871 until payment. The Court further directed that, in default of payment, the mortgage should be foreclosed, and defendants Nos. 3, 4, and 5 precluded from redeeming the property, which should be delivered up to the plaintiff. ABDULLA SAIBA v. not paid on or before the 24th March 1868. The debt not having been paid, the house was sold at a Court's sale on the 15th July 1870 and purchased by C. In an action brought by the plaintiff to recover possession of the house, on the ground that he had purchased it on the 2nd August 1868 at an execution sale under a common money-decree against A,—Held that the plaintiff's sale was subject, not only to the mortgage of 1863, but also to the decree upon it under which the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor A, passed in 1870 to C, whose purchase was entitled to preference to the plaintiff's purchase in 1868. *RAVJI NARAYAN v. 82. ————— Sale under mortgage for payment of Government revenue—Rights of respective purchasers.—In 1855 a decree for an account was passed in the Supreme Court of Calcutta against A, an executor. A died in 1856, and the suit, which was revived against his representatives, came on for consideration on further directions on 29th August 1866. It was then found that A's estate was liable for Rs132,406-11-8, and his representatives were ordered to pay this money into Court. The representatives having made default in payment, a writ of fiere facias was issued, under which the property was sold by the Sheriff of Calcutta, and conveyed by him to B on 1st April 1867. Previously to this the representatives of A, had, on 11th January 1865, mortgaged the same property, together with other lands, "for the purpose of paying the Government revenue of certain talooks belonging to A. deceased;" and the mortgagee having obtained a decree on his mortgage, the property was sold to C under that decree on 30th March 1867. In a suit for possession by C against B,—Held that, though the sale to B, was made for the express purpose of paying the debts of A, B's title was not to be preferred to that of C, who claimed under the mortgage of 1865, which was made for the purpose of paying Government revenue, and, semble, the result would be the same even if the mortgage of 1865 had not been made for the purpose of paying Government revenue, as it did not appear that the mortgagee, at the date of the mortgage, knew that there were unpaid creditors of A, and that A's representatives intended to misapply the money so advanced to them. *Greender Chunder Ghose v. Subsequently L applied for the sale of such property in execution of his decree, and such property was put up for sale in execution of that decree, and was purchased by S. S sued, by virtue of such purchase, to recover possession of such property from C. Held that, inasmuch as under Act X of 1877 what is sold in execution of a decree purports to be the specific property, and as C had purchased the property in suit with notice of the existing lien on it, and subject to its re-sale in execution of the decree in execution of which S had purchased it, what actually was sold in execution of that decree to S was such property, and S was entitled to possession of such property under such sale. 84. ————— Unauthorised sale of mortgaged property—Payment by vendor of mortgage-debt—Lien of vendee—The plaintiff as purchaser at a Court's sale sued to recover land in possession of the defendant. The defendant alleged that he had bought the land from the widow of the previous owner by whom it had been mortgaged, and that he (the defendant) had paid off the mortgage. The previous owner had left a minor son. The lower Courts passed a decree for the plaintiff, on the ground that the sale by the widow to the defendant was invalid, as she had not obtained a certificate of administration to her husband under Act XX of 1864. Held that the defendant had a lien upon the land for the amount of the mortgage-debt which he had paid, and that the plaintiff could not set aside the sale to the defendant without refunding the amount secured by the lien. *KUVAJI v. In 1869 the lands were sold in execution of a money-decree against J, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. Thereupon the defendant attached the land in execution of the decree obtained by him in 1864. The Court found that the mortgage of 1861 was not a bond fide mortgage. In a suit for possession,—Held that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed. The decree obtained in 1864, being based upon a colourable mortgage, gave the defendant no claim as against a subsequent bond fide purchaser for value. What was purchased by the plaintiff at the execution sale in 1869 was the real interest of J in the lands in question, not his interest as diminished by a fictitious derogation arising out of a sham transaction. *GOPI WASUDEV v. When M was put in possession, P petitioned the Court, objecting, but being referred to a regular suit he executed his original decree, bringing the hypothecated property to sale and bought it himself, without, however, getting possession from the Court till many months later. Plaintiff then sued the tenant of the house in the Small Cause Court for rent, and P intervened as a party to the suit, claiming the rent which had fallen due from the date of his getting possession. Held that the plaintiff was not in a position to maintain the suit, his possession having been put an end to by P, whose lien on the property was anterior to the sale under which plaintiff purchased. *POORNO CHUNDER BOSE v. 88. ————— Money-decree — Notice — G borrowed money from S. He then borrowed money from D, mortgaging as security the property in suit. After that he borrowed from plaintiffs, executing a bond by which he again mortgaged the same property. Subsequently plaintiffs obtained a decree by which the mortgaged property was declared liable to sale for the amount decreed, sold the property in execution, and purchased it themselves. They were disturbed from possession by defendants in execution of a rent-decree under which they ousted plaintiffs, and got their own names registered as proprietors. Plaintiffs now sued for declaration and enforcement of their rights as purchasers at the above sale. Defendants claimed as purchasers in execution of a money-decree obtained against G, by the first creditor, S, alleging that they paid off the money due to the second creditor, D, and were entitled to hold possession, their purchase having been previous to that of the plaintiffs. Held that, in purchasing the rights and interests of G, defendants purchased his right to redeem property already subject to two mortgages, and as they purchased with full notice, they could only retain possession by paying off both mortgages. Held, also, that plaintiffs purchased not

89. ————— Money-decree — Mortgage-decree — Notice — Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 287. —A creditor obtained two decrees against his debtor, one being a mortgage-decree to enforce his lien on certain property, and the other a simple money-decree. In execution of the second decree the property over which the judgment-creditor had a lien was sold and was purchased by a third person. Subsequently, in execution of the first decree at the instance of the judgment-creditor, this same property was advertised for sale, but on the auction-purchaser objecting, the judgment-creditor brought a suit against him to enforce his lien on the property in the hands of the auction-purchaser. Held that it lay on the plaintiff, in order to entitle him to recover in the suit, to show that the defendants purchased with notice of the lien. Held, further, that the fact that for some purpose, at some time or other, the judgment-creditor informed the Court of the mortgage, is not evidence of notice on the auction-purchaser. NURSING NARAIN SINGH v. ROGHOOBUR SINGH

90. ————— Priority —The defendant advanced to A four sums of money on four bonds, in each of which certain property was hypothecated. The first two bonds contained a stipulation that, until the debt was discharged, the borrower would not mortgage or sell the property hypothecated. The defendant brought a suit to recover the amounts due on all his bonds, and obtained a simple money-decree, in execution of which he brought the property mentioned above to sale, and became the purchaser. The plaintiff now sued for a re-sale of the property by virtue of a mortgage of the same, duly registered. The last two of the defendants' bonds were executed after the Registration Act of 1864 came into force, but were, however, unregistered. Held that if the plaintiff had come in and offered to satisfy so much of the decree obtained by the defendant as related to the first two bonds, he would have been clearly entitled to assert that nothing could pass by the sale in execution of the decree on the other bonds, but the rights of the judgment-debtor, subject to his mortgage, but that as he did not do so, the auction sale, having been made in satisfaction, inter alia, of the debts due on the mortgage-bonds containing the condition against alienation, passed the full proprietary right to the defendant. *RAJAH RAM v. a house to B, who registered the deed, but did not obtain possession of the premises. On 2nd July 1868 A mortgaged the same house to C, who registered the mortgage-deed and took possession of the premises. On 10th October 1868 B sued on his mortgage, and obtained a decree against A's son, who was a minor, and who was represented by his mother as his guardian. She, however, had obtained no certificate of administration under the Minors Act, XX of 1864. On 17th December 1869 the mortgaged property was sold by the Court in execution of B's decree. The plaintiff bought it, and obtained a certificate of sale. On the plaintiff's attempting to take possession of the property, the defendant, who was C's widow and heiress, resisted him, and he thereupon sued to recover it. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to possession. He stood, at least, in the same position as had been occupied by B before the sale, and B, as prior mortgagee, had a superior title to that of defendant, who claimed under a subsequent deed. Where mortgaged property is sold in execution of a decree in a suit brought upon the mortgage, the interest of the mortgagee, at whose instance the sale is made, is held to pass to the purchaser, and the mortgagee is estopped from disputing that such is the effect of the sale. KHEVRAJ JUSRU v LIN-GAYA. I. L. R., 5 Bom., 2

92. ———— San-mortgage.—Registration of certificate of sale—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 287—Notice—Warranty of title.—A buyer of property at an execution sale who registers his certificate of sale does not thereby acquire a title free from the obligation arising from a san-mortgage of previous date. When the Court sells the right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor in property, it cannot be regarded as selling more than the judgment-debtor himself could honestly sell. He could honestly sell only subject to any equities existing against himself on the property, and if by concealment of a san-mortgage he sold property as free of that charge, he would commit a fraud. The Court cannot be deemed to do that which would be a fraud if done by the judgment-debtor. If, then, the Court sell only the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor subject to all existing equities against the property sold, the registration of the Court's conveyance (viz., certificate of sale) cannot enlarge the scope of that conveyance and discharge the property from any unregistered incumbrance which was binding on the judgment-debtor. Per MELVILLE, J.—In the case of execution sales under section 287 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), notice is given to purchasers that the sale only extends to the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor, and that the Court ordering the sale does not warrant the title. Thus being so, it seems clear that a person who buys an avowedly doubtful title, and pays for it on that understanding, cannot claim to be a purchaser without notice. *SOBHAGCHAND GULABCHAND v. 93. ———— Mortgagee not in possession.—Registered lease—Effect of sale in transferring property to purchaser.—A mortgaged his land to B, in 1861, which mortgage was then registered, but the mortgagee did not enter into possession. Subsequently, in 1866, A leased the same land to C. That lease was registered, and C entered into possession. In 1867 B obtained a decree upon his mortgage, and in execution attached and sold the mortgaged property. C, who had applied to have this attachment of the land removed and failed in his application, sued to establish his right under the lease and recover possession. Held that, under the lease of 1866, he could only take what the mortgagor had to give him, viz., a lease subject to the registered mortgage. Where a decree is obtained upon his mortgage by a mortgagee, and the mortgaged property is sold under the decree for the purpose of paying off the mortgagee, the interest of both mortgagor and mortgagee passes to the purchaser. The mortgagee is estopped from disputing that such is the effect of the sale, so far as his interest is concerned, although the officer of the Court may only have described the sale as one of the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor. It is not the practice in the mofussil to require the mortgagee to convey to the purchaser the transfer takes place by estoppel. SHESHGIRI SHANBHOG v. SALVADOR VAS

94. ———— Mortgage without possession.—Right of mortgagee as against the purchaser.—Difference between a mortgage valid as against a private purchaser for valuable consideration and one valid as against a purchaser at a Court sale.—Priority—Optional registration.—On the 19th September 1871 the land in dispute was mortgaged by L (defendant No 1) to the plaintiff for Rs25. The deed of mortgage was not registered. By it defendant No. 1 agreed to pay interest at the rate of one pice per rupee per mensem, and it was provided that the mortgagee was to remain in possession for a period of twenty-five years in lieu of principal and interest, and that the mortgagor was not to claim the property back, unless he paid the principal and interest that might accrue due in twenty-five years from the date of the bond. On the 8th July 1872 the land was sold in execution of a decree against the father of L and purchased by B (defendant No 2), who obtained possession under the certificate of sale. In 1874 the plaintiff (the mortgagee) sued L and B for possession of the property. It was contended for B (defendant No 2) that the mortgage did not bind him, because he was a purchaser for value without notice of the mortgage, and because it was not accompanied with possession. Held that, although the mortgage to the plaintiff might have been without possession, it would bind the mortgagor himself, and was therefore binding as against defendant No 2, who purchased at a Court sale under a decree obtained against the mortgagor. A purchaser at such a sale takes only that which the judgment-debtor could himself honestly dispose of. Possession or registration is necessary to validate a mortgage in the Deccan or elsewhere in the Presidency of Bombay (except Gujarat) against a private purchaser for valuable consideration, but not against a purchaser at a Court sale. BAPUJI BALAL v SATYABHAMABAI [I. The legal representative of a deceased person, though not a party to the suit, will be bound by the execution sale, if he either knowingly allowed the suit to be defended by another person claiming to be the legal representative, or if, knowing of the sale, he stood by and allowed the purchaser to pay in the belief that he acquired a good title. *Edalji Hormasji v. 99. ———— Contents of application for execution and of notification and proclamation of sale.—Sale of interests of minor.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss 212, 249.—Where an application for execution of a decree omits to give the names of all the parties as required by section 212, Act VIII of 1859, even if it shall appear from other parts of the proceedings who those parties are, the parties named must be understood to be the parties defendants against whom the execution of the decree is sought. Parties present at a sale are not bound to refer to the decree as laid down in Ishan Chunder Mitter v. Buksh Ali Sowdagur, Marshall, 614, nor must they be considered as knowing its contents unless they are stated in the notification of sale. The proclamation and notification under section 249 are intended to inform persons what is to be sold, and to give the names of the parties defendants whose rights and interests in it are to be sold. In the case of a sale in execution of a decree against a party as a representative of a deceased person, the proper course is to give in the description of the property to be sold the name of the defendant against whom the decree was obtained, and, in describing what was to be sold, to say the right, title, and interest of the defendant as the

A guardian has no right or interest in a minor's property, and the Courts ought to be extremely careful with regard to allowing the property of minors to be sold in execution of a decree. 100. ———— Guardian not properly appointed.—Act XX of 1864.—Parties.—Mad Reg V of 1804.—Form of decree.—J (defendant No. 1) brought a suit (No 374 of 1861) against the plaintiff's father, G. On a mortgaged bond, dated the 2nd April 1856, G having died before any decree was passed, his widow (plaintiff's mother) was substituted as defendant, and a decree was made against her ex parte. It was, however, set aside after her death on the application of M. (defendant No. 2), the sister of G, on the ground of want of due service of process upon G and his widow. M was substituted as defendant in the suit, and a new decree was made in her favour. That decree was reversed, on appeal, by the District Court, which allowed J's claim. In execution of the decree of the Appellate Court, the mortgaged property was sold and purchased by J. for Rs250. J. obtained a certificate of sale headed thus "J., son of L., plaintiff, G., son of N., deceased, supplement or (substitute) his sister M., defendant," and it certified that J. had purchased "all the right, title, and interest which the said defendant had in the said property." J was put into possession of the property. In 1877 the plaintiff (son of the original mortgagor G) filed the present suit against J. and M., alleging that the mortgage-bond on which J had obtained his decree had been forged by J., and contending that the decree and subsequent proceedings under it did not affect his rights, inasmuch as he had not been made a party to them. The prayer in the plaint was that the decree and sale should be set aside, and the property restored to his possession. The defence of J. substantially was that the suit and appeal were defended by persons who were proper guardians of the plaintiff, and had been in the management of his property. M did not appear. The Subordinate Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim, holding that M was his guardian and manager of his property in the previous suit and appeal, and that the mortgage-bond was genuine. On appeal that decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the plaintiff had not been represented in the previous litigation by a guardian duly appointed under Madras Regulation V of 1804, and was no party to it. He accordingly allowed the plaintiff's claim. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held that on the death of G. the plaintiff was his sole heir; that the died possessed of immoveable property, and leaving a widow, a daughter, and a sister, B, his heiresses according to Mahomedan law B was entitled to a one-sixth share of an undivided moiety of a certain portion of the property, which was situated in Calcutta. The Bank, in execution of their decree, caused certain property of A, including the undivided moiety of the Calcutta property, to be sold by the Sheriff of Calcutta. Defaulting purchaser—continued.

114. ———— Act VIII of 1859, s 254—In execution of a decree, certain property of the judgment-debtor was attached and put up for sale, and a portion thereof was knocked down to a purchaser for a sum sufficient to satisfy the decree. The purchaser, however, having made default in payment of the purchase-money, the property was again put up for sale, and the portion previously sold was purchased by the decree-holder at a price less than the amount bid for it in the former sale. Held that the decree-holder was not debarred by what took place at the former sale from proceeding to satisfy his decree by sale of other portions of the attached property than that originally sold. *KHEBODA MAYI DASI v. 115. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 254—Held by PHEAR, J (AINSLIE, J, dissentiente), that if for any good reason the auctioneer at an execution sale under the Code of Civil Procedure does not accept as purchaser the person named by the highest bidder as his principal, he cannot make the bidder himself purchaser against his will, he must simply declare that no sale has been effected and reopen the bidding. Held by PHEAR, J (AINSLIE, J, dissenting), that where the Judge countersigned the certificate of sale in the following terms, "H P, having made the purchase for R700, stated that he made the purchase for D K," he accepted D K as purchaser in H P's bid, and that when a second sale became necessary, the difference of price became recoverable from the apparent first purchaser under Act VIII of 1859, section 254, and recourse should first have been had to D K, who should have been allowed to show cause against an order of payment. HUREE RAM v. HUR PERSHAD SINGH
[20 W. R., 80]

Held (on appeal under the Letters Patent confirming the judgment of PHEAR, J) that the party purchasing at an execution sale under the Civil Procedure Code in the character of an agent cannot be made liable as a principal, and a proceeding upon the contract under section 254 in such a case must be taken against the principal. HUREE RAM v. HUR PERSHAD SINGH 20 W. R., 397

116. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 254—Where property had been sold under a decree, and the purchaser at the execution sale had made default in paying the purchase-money, the remedy of the judgment-creditor was not limited by section 254 of Act VIII of 1859 to a suit against the defaulting purchaser. He was entitled to recover the balance of his debt from his judgment-debtor, who might perhaps have his remedy against the defaulting purchaser.—ANANDRAV BAFUJI v. SUREKH BABA

in an estate of which he is the recorded proprietor in the revenue registers, it is usual to describe such rights and interests in the sale proceedings as recorded in such registers, but such description does not amount on the part of the decree-holder or the officer conducting the sale to a warranty that such rights and interests are correctly described. Where, therefore, according to the usual practice, the rights and interests of a judgment-debtor in a share of a village of which he was the recorded proprietor in the revenue registers were proclaimed for sale in the execution of a decree and sold, described as recorded, and the sons of the judgment-debtor subsequently sued the auction-purchaser to recover their interests in such share and obtained a decree for such interests, and the auction-purchaser thereupon sued the decree-holder for a refund of the purchase-money proportionate to such interests and for the costs of defending such suit,—Held, there being no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the decree-holder, or anything of an exceptional nature showing an express or implied warranty on his part, that the suit was not maintainable *Neelkunt Sahra v. crees confirmed the sale to T, granting him a sale certificate, and disallowing K's objection to the confirmation. It also confirmed the sale to K, ordering the purchase-money to be paid to S and R, and disallowing K's objection to the confirmation, but it refused to grant K a sale certificate, on the ground that, as the sale to T had been confirmed and a sale certificate granted to him, it could not give K possession of the property. In a suit by K against S and R to recover his purchase-money,—Held—distinguishing the suit from the cases in which it had been held that, when the right, title, and interest of a judgment debtor in a particular property is sold, there is no warranty that he has any right, title, or interest, and therefore the auction-purchaser cannot recover his purchase-money if it turns out that the judgment-debtor had no interest in the property—that the rule of caveat emptor did not apply, and the suit was maintainable. The provisions of section 257 of Act VIII of 1859 apply to applications made under section 256 of that Act, and to those only Held, therefore, that inasmuch as K objected to the confirmation of the sale to him on the ground that the Court was not competent to confirm a sale which had by its previous order been nullified, and not on any of the grounds mentioned in section 256 of Act VIII of 1859, K was not precluded by the terms of section 257 of that Act from maintaining his suit. (b) CERTIFICATES OF SALES

124. ——— Position of purchaser with certificate.—Certificate of purchase by Registrar.—Conveyance.—Suit for partition.—Declaration of right to share.—Rules of Court, 415, 431.—The position of a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of the High Court after he has obtained a certificate from the Registrar under Rule 415 of the Rules of Court, is that of a person clothed with a right to a conveyance in virtue of a contract; he does not hold, save as regards the parties to the contract of sale, the position of an owner. When the sale is confirmed, the purchaser is entitled to a conveyance, and until he obtains a conveyance the property in the estate purchased does not, having regard to Rule 431, pass to him so as to give him rights as against parties not bound by the decree under which the sale took place. All that passes to him as against the defendant in that suit is an equitable estate and a right to a conveyance of the property, and, therefore, as the estate in the property purchased has not passed, the purchaser is not entitled to maintain a suit for partition. In such a suit he could not on partition give a good conveyance to the parties interested in the estate, nor would he be entitled to a declaration of his share in the property. JOHUR MULL KHOORBA v. 131. ————— Purchasers at successive execution sales—Purchaser at second sale obtaining certificate of sale and possession of property prior to grant of certificate to purchaser at first sale.—Priorities—On the 9th December 1876 the plaintiff purchased a house at an auction sale in execution of a decree against the owner, one S. The sale was confirmed on the 9th January 1877, but the certificate of sale was not issued until the 16th June 1880. On the 20th January 1880 the defendant purchased the same house at a sale in execution of a money-decree against S. That sale was confirmed on the 28th February 1880, and a certificate was issued on 20th March 1880. The defendant got possession from the judgment-debtor in April 1880. The plaintiff now sued for possession. It was contended for the defendant that, having completed his title under the auction sale and obtained possession before the plaintiff had taken out his certificate, he had acquired a better title than the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. By his prior purchase he had obtained an equitable interest in the property, although he had not obtained a sale certificate. The defendant therefore purchased subject to the plaintiff's equitable interest, and that title having subsequently been perfected by the issue of the certificate, the plaintiffs were in a position to sue for possession. YESHWANT BABURAY v GOVIND SHANKAR [I. 133. ————— Confirmation of sale.—Liability of purchaser for Government revenue—The defendant became a purchaser at an execution sale of a share of certain property, of which the plaintiff held another share partly as zemindar and partly as putnidar. The sale took place in September 1872, but the defendant did not obtain possession until confirmation of the sale in May 1873. Between the date of the sale and the confirmation a considerable sum became due for Government revenue on the whole property, and to prevent its being sold the plaintiff paid the whole of the revenue due. In a suit to recover the proportion due in respect of the share purchased by the defendant, Held that, on confirmation of the sale, the share purchased by the defendant must be considered to have vested in her from the date of the sale; and, therefore, she was liable for the amount of Government revenue in respect of her share which became due between the date of the sale and its confirmation. BHYRUB CHUNDER BUNDOPADHYA v SOUDAMINI DABEE. . . . I. The sale was confirmed on the 9th of October 1874, but the certificate of sale was not issued till the 28th of January 1878. A applied for possession on the 2nd of April 1879. Held that the right to apply for possession contemplated in sections 263 and 264 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII) of 1859 (corresponding with sections 318 and 319 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X) of 1877) accrued on the date the certificate of sale was issued, and not on that on which the sale was confirmed, and that, therefore, the period of limitation against the purchaser counted from the former date. *BASAPA v. 137. ————— Imperfect attachment of immoveable property.—Private alienation after such attachment—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 274, 276, sch. IV, No 141—A judgment-debtor whose property had been attached in execution of a money-decree, sold the property, and out of the price, paid into Court the amount of the decree, and played that the attachment might be removed. While the attachment was subsisting, and prior to the sale, the holders of other money-decrees against the same judgment-debtor preferred applications purporting to be made under section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, and praying that the proceeds of the sale of the property might be rateably divided between themselves and the attaching creditor. The Court refused to remove the attachment until these creditors had been paid. It was found that the sale by the judgment-debtor was a bona fide transaction, entered into for valuable consideration. Held that, inasmuch as no order for attachment of the property was passed in favour of the decree-holders in the manner provided by section 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, their claims were not entitled to the protection conferred by section 276 against private alienations of property under attachment, that these claims were not enforceable under the attachment which was made, that the sale by the judgment-debtor was valid, and that execution of the decrees could not take place. Also, per MAHMOOD, J.—While section 295 of the Code gives a special right to judgment-creditors as distinguished from simple creditors, it is an essential condition precedent to the exercise of that right that there should be a sale in execution, and that its result should appear in assets realised by the sale, and therefore, until the sale takes place, no such right can be enforced. Bishen Chunder Surma Chowdhry v. In execution of a money-decree passed by the same Subordinate Judge in his ordinary jurisdiction the remaining property was attached and sold. Prior to the date of this sale the applicant applied for execution of a money-decree passed in his favour by the same Subordinate Judge in his Small Cause jurisdiction, and prayed for rateable distribution of the proceeds along with other decree-holders. Held that the application must be allowed. 147. ————— Attachment by more than one judgment-creditor of property of judgment-debtor in Court.—Priority.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 272—In execution of a decree of a Munsif's Court, the plaintiff attached certain money, the proceeds of decrees which her judgment-debtor had obtained against third parties, then lying in a Small Cause Court to her credit, and subsequently obtained an order from the Munsif directing the same to be paid to her in satisfaction of her decree, which order was duly communicated to the Small Cause Court Judge. Subsequently the defendant, who held another decree against the same judgment-debtor, attached the same sale-proceeds. The Small Cause Court Judge then proceeded, under section 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, to inquire whether the plaintiff was entitled to any priority over the second attaching creditor, and having decided that question in the negative, divided the sale-proceeds rateably between them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff, under the above circumstances, to recover from the defendant the portion of the sale-proceeds so paid to him,—Held that section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not applied to the Small Cause Court Judge to execute her decree, and it had never been transferred to that Court for execution, and that the proviso in section 272 is merely intended to mean that any question of title or priority is to be determined by the Court in which or in whose custody the property is, and not by the Court which made the order of attachment. Held also that, previous to the order by the Munsif directing the payment to be made to the plaintiff, the Small Cause Court Judge would have had jurisdiction to deal with the question he had tried, but as that order was made prior to the attachment by the defendant, the judgment-debtor had no interest in the money which could be so attached, the effect of that order being to vest the property in the money in the plaintiff, and to take it out of the disposal of the Small Cause Court Judge; and consequently the order for distribution was wrong, and the plaintiff was entitled to the decree she sought. Quare,—Whether an order made by a Court under section 272 was intended by the Legislature to be a final order. GOPEE NATH ACHARYE v. Judge's Court of Anklesvar, was attached, in execution of a decree of the first class Subordinate Judge's Court of Surat, by an order issued by the Surat Court, directing the Anklesvar Court to stop and remit every month a moiety of the said karkun's salary to itself (the Surat Court), until satisfaction of the decree. While the decree of the Surat Court was thus in course of execution, another judgment-creditor of the karkun, who had obtained a decree in the Anklesvar Court, applied to it for a rateable distribution of the moiety between himself and the Surat decree-holder, under section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877. Held that the application was not sustainable, inasmuch as the decree of the Surat Court was being executed by itself, and not by the Anklesvar Court, to which the order of attachment was sent as the head of a department, or as "the officer whose duty it was to disburse the salary," and not as a Court executing the decree of another Court. KRISHNASHANKAR v. 149. ——— Attachment —Rateable distribution of assets —Proceeds of sale under decrees of Small Cause Court—Certain moveable property was attached in execution of decrees of the Small Cause Court at Ahmedabad. After the attachment, but before the sale of the attached property, other creditors of the same judgment-debtor obtained decrees against him in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at the same place, and applied to it for the attachment of the same property in execution of their decrees. The Subordinate Judge accordingly attached it by prohibitory orders issued to the Judge of the Small Cause Court. After the sale, the holders of the decrees obtained in the Subordinate Judge's Courts claimed a rateable share in the assets realised by the Small Cause Court, under section 295 of Act X of 1877. Held that they were not entitled to any share in the assets until after satisfaction of the decrees of the Small Cause Court. JETHA MADHAVJI v. 152. ——— Rateable distribution of assets, Preliminaries to right to share in.—Several decree-holders executing various judgments, for the most part of very ancient date, against the estate of one E., were in contest in respect of the proceeds of a Government promissory note, which had long been under attachment, but was eventually sold with accumulated interest for Rs. 69,000, in accordance with an expression of the High Court's opinion upon appeals presented by two of the decree-holders. Upon that opinion being made known, one of the decree-holders, K. K., made, as it were, a fresh attachment of the note, and applied for the sale of it; whereupon it was sold in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, who ordered payment in full to K. K. and two others (B. and S.), who were acting jointly in execution, and the surplus to be rateably divided among the other execution-creditors. One of these then brought a suit to establish a preferential claim. Held that K. K., who, as soon as it was ascertained that the fund might be so made use of, first applied for the sale of it, was the person who came under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 270, and was entitled to payment in full, and that B. and S. had been overpaid, and were liable to repay the surplus to the other decree-holders. SRISH CHUNDEE SIRCAR CHOWDHRY v. Certain immoveable property belonging to R. was sold in execution of the first decree, the assets which were realised by such sale being sufficient to satisfy the amounts of both decrees. The plaintiff subsequently got a decree for the amount due upon the bill. Thereafter one S, in execution of a decree against A and N, attached certain property of theirs, including the mortgaged property, and caused it to be sold, and the surplus sale-proceeds, after satisfaction of S's decree, were paid into Court to the credit of his suit. Intermediately between this attachment and sale, the plaintiff also attached under his decree on the bill of exchange the mortgaged and other property of A and N, and after the plaintiff's attachment N ratified the equitable mortgage made by A. The sale under S's attachment having taken place, the plaintiff sued A and N and the purchasers at such sale of the mortgaged property for foreclosure or sale thereof, and obtained a decree declaring that he had a good equitable mortgage of A's share in the joint property, and for an account and sale in default of payment; and the plaintiff subsequently, on 26th May 1873, got an order under his decree upon the bill of exchange for payment to him of the surplus sale-proceeds lodged in Court to the credit of S's suit, and for sale of certain of the properties, other than the mortgaged property, which he had attached. Under this order the money was paid out to the plaintiff, and the properties were advertised for sale. MACPHERSON, J., having, on an application by A, set aside this order, and directed that the plaintiff should refund into Court the money paid out to him, and that the sale should be stayed, the Court on appeal refused to set aside the order of the 26th May, but made the plaintiff undertake to pay into Court the mortgage-money with interest if the same should be received by him from the defendants in the mortgage-suit. BANK OF BENGA v. 170. Mortgage.—Allowance of set-off of purchase-money against amount of decree.—Suit for share of sale-proceeds—Principle of distribution.—In execution of a decree against M. the plaintiff attached and advertised for sale certain property in mouzah A. At that time there were pending proceedings in execution of two other decrees obtained against M. by the first and second defendants respectively. These two decrees were obtained on a bond executed by M., by which an 8 annas share of mouzah A was hypothecated as collateral security, and in execution of these decrees the defendants brought to sale, and themselves purchased, not an 8 annas share only, but the whole of mouzah A, and were allowed by the Court to set off the purchase-money against the amounts due to them under their decrees. At the same time the plaintiff's execution case was struck off on 30th June 1880. In a suit brought by the plaintiff under section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code for his share of the sale-proceeds of mouzah A., in which the defendants contended that a set-off having been allowed to the defendants, the plaintiff was not entitled to any rateable distribution; and that if any rateable distribution were allowed, they were entitled to have an allowance made in respect of a mortgage which the plaintiff held in a 2 annas share of mouzah A., which they had paid off subsequently to the transactions now in question,—Held that the fact of the set-off being allowed in exercise of the power given in section 294 of the Code, instead of actual payment into Court, did not alter the substantial nature of the transaction, so as to render the purchase-money less applicable to the satisfaction of the debts of other attaching creditors. Held, further, that the defendants were not entitled to deduct the sum paid by them to clear off the plaintiff's mortgage from the amount of the purchase-money before the Court could determine the amount rateably distributable among the parties concerned. Quere,—Whether they were even entitled to reckon the amount so paid as one of the claims in respect of which, with others, a rateable distribution should be made. TAPONIDI HORDANUND BHARATI v. MATHURA LALL BHAGAT . . . I. L. R., 12 Calc., 499

171. Decree for money.—Causes of action—Mortgage-decree—Mortgagee purchasing under his own decree, Execution of decree by—The cause of action given by the last paragraph but one of section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code does not arise until the money has been actually paid over to the person who is alleged not to be entitled to receive the same, and a suit brought by a person claiming to be entitled to be paid a share of sale proceeds under that section, and to recover the same from another to whom such sale proceeds have been ordered to be paid, if brought before they have been actually paid to such other person, is premature and should be dismissed. Every decree, by virtue of which money is payable, is to that extent a "decree for money" within the meaning of that term as used in section 295, even though other relief may be granted by the decree, and the holder of such decree is entitled to claim rateable distribution of sale-proceeds with holders of decrees for money only under that section. There is nothing in section 295 which takes away the right from a mortgagee who has obtained a decree upon his mortgage to proceed against the property of his mortgagor other than that subject to his mortgage. Thus the holder of a mortgage-decree which directs that the amount be realised from the mortgaged property and from the mortgagor personally, is entitled to claim rateable distribution under that section, and is not in the first instance bound to proceed against his mortgage security and exhaust that. A mortgagee who has obtained a decree on his mortgage is not restricted to proceedings in the first instance against his mortgage security before proceeding against other property of his mortgagor, but when he sells any portion of the property, the subject of his mortgage, and purchases it himself, he is bound, before he can proceed further against the mortgagor or claim rateable distribution under section 295, to prove that there is still a balance due to him, and that the property sold and purchased by him realised a fair amount,—the mere fact of the property having been

On the 25th March 1878 the second mortgagee obtained a decree enforcing his mortgage. Both decrees were made by the same Court. On the 20th June 1878 the property was put up for sale in execution of the second mortgagee's decree. The first mortgagee subsequently brought a suit for a re-sale of the property in satisfaction of his decree. Held that this was the only course open to him, and he could not have enforced satisfaction of his decree in accordance with the provisions of section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the provisions of the first and second provisos to that section refer only to sales in execution of simple money-decrees, whereas the property in question had been sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale, and the provisions of the third proviso relate to subsequent and not prior incumbrances. JAGAT NARAIN RAI v. It was stipulated in the deed that the interest on the debt should be paid out of the profits, and the balance paid to the mortgagors. By an agreement subsequently made it was arranged that the mortgagors should remain in possession and pay rent to A. A obtained a decree for Rs. 2,000 and arrears of rent and costs, and for the sale of the land in satisfaction of the amount decreed. The land was sold for Rs. 2,855 in March 1881. In May 1881 B, a puisne mortgagee, applied to the Court for payment to him of Rs. 500 of this sum, alleging that A was entitled only to Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 280 costs, but not to arrears of rent, in preference to his claim as second mortgagee. The claim of B was rejected on the 27th May 1881 and the whole amount paid out to A. In February 1882 B (who had filed a suit on the 23rd March 1881) obtained a decree upon his mortgage. On the 23rd May 1884 B sued to recover Rs. 510 paid to A on account of rent on the 27th May 1881. The Court, however, under special circumstances, may refuse to pay over to the decree-holder the purchase-money until the sale is confirmed, but in such case it should provide for due payment of interest on the money detained. Held that, under the special circumstances of this case, the decree-holder was not entitled to receive interest from his judgment-debtor from the date of the sale to the date on which the sale was confirmed. JOGENDRO NATH SIRCAR v. The District Judge rejected the application for execution as being too late, and then the application under section 295, because no application for execution was pending. Held on appeal that the petition for execution was wrongly rejected, but that the High Court could not, under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, revise the order rejecting the application under section 295 for rateable distribution. 182. ——— Effect of decree-holder's death on validity of sale.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 365, 366—Order confirming sale—A judgment-debtor applied that an execution sale of property belonging to him should be set aside, as the decree-holder was dead when such sale took place, and such sale was in consequence invalid. This application was disposed of by the Court executing the decree in the presence of the judgment-debtor and the purchaser. The Court held that the fact of such sale having taken place after the decree-holder's death was no ground for setting it aside, and disallowed such application and made an order confirming such sale. Held per PEARSON, J., that the application for execution of the decree abated on the death of the decree-holder, not having been prosecuted by his legal representative, and such sale was under the circumstances improper and invalid, and the order confirming it should be set aside. Per SPANKIE, J., that such sale was not invalid by reason of the decree-holder's death before it took place. The order confirming it, however, was improper, and should be reversed, and the case should be remanded to be dealt with under the provisions of sections 365 and 366 of Act X of 1877, as the Court executing the decree should have proceeded under those sections. Per OLDFIELD, J., and STRAIGHT, J., that the death of the decree-holder prior to such sale did not render it void. The provisions of sections 365 and 366 of Act X of 1877 could not be adapted to execution proceedings. As such sale had been published and conducted according to law, it had properly been confirmed. DULARI v. MOHAN SINGH him After the order for this sale was made, and before it took place, the judgment-debtor died, and the sale took place without his legal representatives being made parties to the execution proceedings. Per OLDFIELD, J., that the sale to the first mortgagee was not void because the judgment-debtor had died before it took place, and it took place without his legal representatives being made parties to the execution proceedings, inasmuch as the provisions of section 368 of the Civil Procedure Code were not applicable to the case of the death of a judgment-debtor, and there was nothing in section 234, even if that section is applicable to a case where the judgment-debtor dies while execution is proceeding and after sale of his property has been ordered, to imply that the sale is absolutely void if no legal representative has been brought on the record. Dulari v Mohan Singh, I L R., 3 All., 759, and Gulabdas v Lakshman Narhar, I L R., 3 Bom., 221, referred to. Per STRAIGHT, J., that there was no legal obligation on the first mortgagee to resort to the procedure of section 234 of the Civil Procedure Code, since the sale to the second mortgagee had passed to him the rights and interests of the judgment-debtor, and the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor had none of his property in their hands, and there is no provision in the Code of Civil Procedure which required the first mortgagee to make the second mortgagee a party to the proceedings in execution of the former's decree, and the latter could not have successfully objected to the sale in execution of that decree, and therefore that sale was not voided by the death of the judgment-debtor antecedent to its taking place. STOWELL v. The Subordinate Judge had not jurisdiction to proceed with this suit in so far as it related to the latter property, and he was authorised to proceed with it, under the provisions of section 13 of Act VIII of 1859, by the High Court in concurrence with the Board of Revenue. August and the 4th September 1877 Subsequently the defendants in the present suit, who held decrees for money against H, one of the plaintiffs in the suit above mentioned, applied to the Subordinate Judge of Benares for the attachment and sale of H's interest in the decree above mentioned, falsely representing that the sales in execution of that decree of the 29th August and 4th September 1877 had been set aside. Such interest was accordingly put up for sale on the 29th May 1878 at Benares by the Subordinate Judge of Benares, and was purchased by the plaintiffs in the present suit, who were induced to purchase by such false representation. The plaintiffs in the present suit claimed the avoidance of the sale of the 29th May 1878 and the refund of the purchase-money, on the ground that they were induced to purchase by such false representation, and on the ground that the sale of the interest of H, in the decree of the 18th November 1874, being of the nature of immoveable property situate within the limits of the family domains of the Maharajah of Benares, could not legally be sold at Benares by the Benares Court. Held that such false representation must be held to constitute in law such fraud as vitiated the sale of the 29th May 1878. Also that the Benares Court acted ultra vires in selling at Benares an interest in immoveable property situate within the family domains of the Maharaja of Benares. RAGHU NATH DOS v KAKKAN MAJ

—Beng Reg XX of 1795—Title of purchaser—Regulation XX of 1795 directed that when any Court of Civil Judicature should have occasion to sell lands in execution of a decree, it should transmit a copy thereof to the Board of Revenue, which was with all practicable dispatch to cause the lands to be disposed of at the presidency, or in the district in which the lands were situated, as they might deem most advantageous to the proprietor. In 1843 a copy of a decree was transmitted for execution to the Board of Revenue in compliance with the Regulation, but no sale was then effected. Afterwards two other futile attempts to sell the lands under the decree were made, and then the decree-holder sold the lands to a third party, upon whose application the decree was executed by the sale of the lands of the judgment-debtor under it by order of the Court, and without any further recourse to the Revenue Board. Previous to such sale the proceedings had been taken off the file, and the number of villages, owing to some inaccuracy, was differently stated in the later order, and the total sum was increased by adding the interest which had accrued due between the two orders. Held that the purchaser at the sale acquired a good title, for it would be contrary to general principles, and a senseless addition to all the vexa-

Nor was it true in any material sense that either the properties to be sold or the sums to be recovered were different, and the principal object of the Regulation being the security of public revenues, that object had been fully answered by the communication to the Commissioner in 1843, and the proceedings which were taken by him upon it. MOHESH NARAIN SINGH v KISHANLUND MISSEER

195. ————— Reversal of decree on appeal before confirmation of sale.—Purchaser, Right of.—Plaintiff's title to certain land in dispute was derived from the purchaser at a Court's sale, under a decree which was reversed on appeal subsequently to the sale before it had been confirmed. Held that the Court which had made the decree ceased, from the moment of the reversal, to have jurisdiction to take any further steps to execute the decree. Though the Court, when it confirmed the sale, was probably not informed that its decree had been reversed, and the purchaser was probably ignorant of it, yet the act of the Court in completing the sale was none the less without jurisdiction, and, being without jurisdiction, could confer no title. If a decree be reversed after a sale under it has become absolute, and a certificate has been granted to the purchaser, the title of the purchaser is not affected by the reversal of the decree. A purchaser is bound to satisfy himself as to the jurisdiction of a Court to order a sale, and this obligation continues until the sale is completed. decree, dated 26th May 1879, certain immoveable property was sold in execution and purchased by the appellant on the 21st February 1880, no mention having been made of any incumbrances. On the 9th May 1879 a decree was obtained upon a mortgage executed by the original judgment-debtor, and in execution of that decree the property which had already been sold was attached, and, on the 11th March, again sold in execution of the second decree, it being alleged that the property was covered by the mortgage which was prior in date to the former decree. The appellant thereupon applied that the sale of the 21st March should be set aside under section 313 of the Civil Procedure Code, and his purchase-money directed to be returned to him. Held that if, as a fact, the property sold was covered by the mortgage, there was, under the circumstances, no such saleable interest in the judgment-debtor at the time of the sale on the 21st February 1880 as would prevent the operation of section 313 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as under that sale the purchaser would be unable to get the particular property purchased by him, and that the sale must be set aside. NAHARMUL MARWARI v SADUT ALI

208. ————— Sale under attachment during subsistence of prior attachment.—Saleable interest.—In execution of a decree obtained on the 15th August 1876, the property of the judgment-debtor was attached on the 17th August 1877. The sale of the attached property was postponed pending a suit instituted under the direction of the Court by a claimant to the attached property. This suit having been dismissed on the 13th September 1878, the decree-holder on the 25th September applied for a sale of the property, and the 16th December was fixed for the sale. Meanwhile, on the 13th December 1877, a decree had been obtained by another party against the judgment-debtor, and in execution of this decree the same property was attached on the 13th September 1878, and under this attachment a sale took place on the 15th November following. On the 16th December, as fixed, the property was again sold under the first attachment. The auction-purchasers at that sale, on the 6th January 1879, applied under section 313 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the sale, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Court) on the authority of the following cases Gogaram v Kartick Chunder Singh, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1022 9 W. R., 514, Lalla Joogul Lal v Bhukha Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 244, and Kartick Chunder Singh v Gogaram, 2 W. 212. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 285.—Attachment of property in execution of decree of two Courts.—Postponement of sale by Court of higher grade.—Sale of property under order of Court of lower grade.—When several decrees of different Courts are out against a judgment-debtor, and his immoveable property has been attached in pursuance of them, the Court of the highest grade where such Courts are of different grades, or the Court which first effectuated the attachment where such Courts are of the same grade, is, under section 285 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court which has the power of deciding objections to the attachment, of determining claims made to the property, of ordering the sale thereof and receiving the sale-proceeds, and of providing for their distribution under section 295. Held, therefore, where the immoveable property of a judgment-debtor was attached in execution of several decrees, one a Munsif's decree, and the rest a Subordinate Judge's decrees, and the Subordinate Judge postponed the sale of such property, but the Munsif refused to do so, and

Code, 1877 (1882, s 285)—Attachment and sale in execution of decrees of several Courts—Certain immoveable property was attached in execution of a decree made by a Subordinate Judge and also in execution of a decree made by a Munsif. These decrees were held by the same person and the judgment-debtor was the same person. Such property was sold in execution of both decrees. On the application of the judgment-debtor, who brought into Court the amount due on the decree made by the Subordinate Judge, and with the consent of the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser, the Subordinate Judge made an illegal order setting aside such sale. Subsequently, on the application of the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser, the Munsif made an order confirming such sale. Per SPANKIE, J—That the Subordinate Judge had not any jurisdiction under section 285 of the Civil Procedure Code to deal with such sale as regards the decree made by the Munsif, and the Munsif was not precluded by that section from confirming such sale as regards the decree made by him, by reason that the Subordinate Judge, a Court of a higher grade, had made an order setting it aside. Per OLDFIELD, J—That, having regard to the provisions of that section, it was doubtful whether the Munsif was competent to confirm such sale, but inasmuch as the Subordinate Judge only intended to set it aside as regards the decree made by him, and his order was illegal, and the Munsif's order had done substantial justice, there was no reason to interfere. CHUNNI LAL v. In the previous month, C., who had obtained a decree in the Court of the Additional Munsif of B. (to whom jurisdiction had similarly been assigned), had attached the same property. The sale in execution of A.'s decree took place first, and A. became the purchaser. A. then objected in the Court of the Additional Munsif that the property could not again be sold, but his objection was overruled, and two days subsequently the property was again put up for sale in execution of C.'s decree, and he became the purchaser. A. brought various suits against the tenants for arrears of rent in which C. intervened. Held that the jurisdictions of the Munsifs were confined to the particular limits assigned to them, and that, as the property was situate within the limits assigned to the Second Munsif, the Additional Munsif had no jurisdiction to attach or sell it, and that the attachment by C. was made improperly and without jurisdiction. Quære,—Whether section 285 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to immoveable property. OBHOY CHURN COONDoo v. 216. ————— Civil Procedure

Code, 1882, ss 285, 295.—Jurisdiction—Sale by inferior Court pending an unknown attachment by a superior Court.—At an execution sale held by an inferior Court, at the instance of the decree-holder (the Court itself, the decree-holder, and the auction-purchaser being unaware of any objection to the exercise of a jurisdiction which the Court would ordinarily be competent to exercise), A. purchased certain property, and this sale was confirmed. It appeared subsequently that this same property had two years previously to the sale been attached by a superior Court. On a sale of this property being advertised by the superior Court, A. objected on the ground that he had already purchased it; this objection was overruled, and a sale was held by the superior Court, at which A. again became the purchaser. A. then brought a suit against the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor in the inferior Court to recover as damages the sum paid by him at the sale. The suit was dismissed. Held that, although the superior Court had been wrong in insisting on the second sale and in not requiring the amount received by the inferior Court to be deposited in the superior Court, and then rateably distributed amongst the creditors of the judgment-debtors, yet the sale by the inferior Court was a good and valid sale; and A.'s suit was therefore rightly dismissed. Obhoy Churn Coondoo v. 217. ————— Sale under two different decrees of different Courts of different grades.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 285—The first mortgagee of certain immovable property obtained a decree for the sale of the property, caused the property to be attached, and then ceased to prosecute the execution proceedings. The second mortgagee then obtained a decree for the sale of the property, caused it to be attached and put up for sale, and purchased it himself. The first mortgagee then applied for the sale of the property, and the property was put up for sale and was purchased by him. After the order for this sale was made, and before it took place, the judgment-debtor died, and the sale took place without his legal representatives being made parties to the execution proceedings. The Courts which executed these decrees were of two different grades, the Court which executed the first mortgagee's decree being of the lower grade. In a suit by the first mortgagee against the second mortgagee for possession of the property,—Held that the sale to the first mortgagee was not invalid, with reference to the provisions of section 285 of the Civil Procedure Code, because it had not been ordered and held by the Court of the higher grade, inasmuch as when such sale was ordered by the Court of the lower grade the property was not under attachment in execution of the decree of the Court of the higher grade, that decree having been executed by the sale of the property, and therefore the provisions of that section were not applicable. *Badri Prasad v. On the 6th April 1885, in execution of a decree for arrears of rent obtained by the superior holder of the tenure against the mortgagor, the tenure was sold free from incumbrances. The mortgagees applied under section 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to have the sale set aside for material irregularity. Held that, under section 86 of the Transfer of Property Act, the mortgagees had such an interest in the property as brought them within the words of section 311, "person whose property has been sold," and entitled them to make the application. RAKHAL CHUNDER BOSE v. The person served with the order applied, under section 278, to have the attachment removed. Held that the application could not be entertained under section 278, that section having no application to the case; but that before issuing a proclamation of sale, in execution of a decree, of the debt so attached, it is the duty of the Court, under section 287 of the Code, to ascertain all that the Court considers it material for the intending purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property proclaimed for sale. If the property of which sale is sought is a debt, and the Court receives notice from the alleged debtor that no debt exists, the Court should satisfy itself as to the existence, or otherwise, of the debt, and, if it comes to the conclusion that no debt exists, should abstain from proceeding to sale. HARILAL v ABHESING MERU. I. L. R., 4 Bom., 323

252. Irregularity in issue of notification of sale and attachment—Misconduct of decree-holder—Before a sale is confirmed, a party objecting to the irregularity of the sale proceedings, on the ground that the notification of sale and attachment has not been properly issued, should be allowed proof of non-service or of insufficient service. The misconduct of a decree-holder may be a good cause of action, but cannot be a ground for setting aside a sale. 253. Irregularity in service of prohibitory order—Act VIII of 1859, ss 236 and 243—Purchase of property by decree-holder—Practice of English Courts—In execution of a decree the defendant caused a decree of the plaintiff awarding him Rs 25 to be attached, and, under section 236, Act VIII of 1859, caused the prohibitory order to be fixed in a conspicuous part of the Court-house, and copies thereof to be delivered to the judgment-debtors. The decree was subsequently sold by auction, and the defendant purchased it for Rs 20. On special appeal by the plaintiff, upon the ground that the sale was irregular, as the prohibitory order had not been served upon him,—Held that the prohibitory order having been served in accordance with the provisions of section 236, Act VIII of 1859, was legal and regular. Held also, that the Court executing the defendant's decree ought not to have sold the plaintiff's decree, but should have, under section 243, appointed a manager to enforce plaintiff's decree. That a decree-holder ought not to be allowed to bid and purchase at a sale in execution of his decree, without an order of Court previously obtained upon notice to the judgment-debtor. a new trial. On the 14th January 1867 the District Judge again affirmed the decree of the Court of first instance, and no appeal being preferred, the decree became final. The decree-holders had in the meantime taken proceedings to execute the decree, dated the 5th May 1866, and from time to time and finally on the 7th November 1870 they renewed these proceedings, in each instance referring to the decree dated the 5th May 1866, even after it was set aside, and the decree dated the 14th January 1867 passed. On the last application a sale of certain immoveable property belonging to K was ordered and took place on the 15th February 1871. K objected to the confirmation of the sale on the ground of the irregularity in the application, but his objections were disallowed and the sale was confirmed. He brought a suit to recover possession of the property from the auction purchaser on the ground that the sale was a nullity. *Held, per STUART, C J, and FRARSON, TURNER, and SPANKIE, JJ, that the sale ought not to be set aside, as the irregularity in applying for execution of the decree, dated the 5th May 1866, was an irregularity which did not prejudice the judgment-debtor. 255. Irregularity in attachment—Confirmation of sale.—Objection that property is not liable to attachment.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss 278, 311, 312.—Held that an objection made by one whose property was attached and sold in execution of a decree for the payment of money for the performance of which he had become a surety, that he was no party to the decree, and his property was not liable to be attached and sold, and therefore the sale was invalid, was not an objection entertainable under section 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, and was consequently no ground for setting aside the sale under that section, especially as it was preferred for the first time on appeal, and, moreover, might have been taken under section 278 at the time of attachment, when the objector would have had his remedy as therein provided. HUB LAL v KANHIA LAL. I. L. R., 7 All., 365

256. Sale of property other than that hypothecated—A decree-holder is not precluded from taking any of his judgment-debtor's property in execution of his decree merely because he had a lien on particular properties. time of attachment and sale; and section 252 of Act VIII of 1859 did not prohibit an enquiry into the extent of those rights, or declare the owner of the property attached in execution of a decree passed against a third party, incompetent to assert his claim by suit. 258. ————— Sale of portion of tenure under decree for rent—Sale of other portion under mortgage-decree—Where decrees for arrears of rent had been obtained by fractional shareholders in a tenure, and in execution thereof a moiety of the tenure had been sold it appeared that the other moiety had been sold at the same time in execution of a mortgage decree against some of the judgment-debtors in the rent-suits, on an objection being taken to the confirmation of such sale on the ground that the whole tenure should have been sold in execution of the rent-decrees,—Held that all that the decree-holders were entitled to have sold, was the right, title, and interest of their judgment-debtors, and that they were in the position of ordinary creditors having no lien on the tenure, and that, consequently, the mortgagee being entitled to enforce his lien against the moiety covered by his mortgage, the sale of the remaining moiety in satisfaction of the rent-decrees was a good sale, and could not be set aside. MOHEN-DRU COOMAR DUTT v. 259. ————— Sale of whole estate where a portion would suffice—A Subordinate Judge, on the application of a judgment-creditor, ordered the attachment and sale of an indigo concern consisting of several factories, and fixed the 9th March for the sale. Shortly before the date so fixed, he issued a direction to the District Judge's nazir that the sale should be effected in portions to be sold in succession. Upon this, the District Judge removed the execution proceedings to his own Court, and issued a roobokari declaring the Subordinate Judge's order null and void, and ordering the property to be sold on the day fixed in one lot. This was accordingly done. Held that it was entirely within the Subordinate Judge's discretion to direct that the property should be sold in portions even though it had been attached or proclaimed as an entirety. Held that as it is damage to a person to have his whole property sold against his will to satisfy the claims of a creditor when the sale of a portion would suffice, the irregularity committed by the District Judge caused material injury to the judgment-debtors. ABDOOL HYE v. 261. ————— Decree for sale of mortgaged property and for costs.—Attachment and sale of other property for whole amount of decree—Suit to set aside execution sale—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss 311, 312—Finality of order in execution proceedings—In execution of a decree on a mortgage-bond, for the sale of the mortgaged property, and for the costs of the suit, amounting to Rs. 1,000, certain houses were attached on the 30th September 1881, which were not part of the mortgaged property. On an objection raised by the judgment-debtors that the decree was by its terms executable only against the mortgaged property, the High Court on appeal decided, on the 6th September 1882, that the houses were not liable to attachment and sale under the decree. In the meantime, on the 15th June 1882, the houses had been put up for sale and purchased for Rs. 500, and the sale had been confirmed on the 16th August 1882. The judgment-debtors brought a suit against the purchaser to set aside the sale, on the ground that the houses were not saleable under the decree. Held that the decree, in regard to costs, was a decree made personal against the judgment-debtor, and conferred a right upon the decree-holder to take out execution for the recovery of those costs, not only against the property mortgaged in the bond, but also against the person and other property of the judgment-debtor. Per OLDFIELD, J. (MAHMOOD, J., doubting) that the attachment and sale in execution of the decree were valid, inasmuch as they were made in respect of the costs as well of the principal and interest decreed. Per MAHMOOD, J., that the suit was maintainable, and was not barred by any plea in limine. Abdul Hye v. Raj, B L R, Sup Vol, 911, referred to. Also Per MAHMOOD, J, that inasmuch as the adjudication of the 6th September 1882 was one between the judgment-debtors on the one hand and the decree-holder on the other, and subsequent not only to the sale, but to the confirmation of the sale, and inasmuch as the Court was not then called upon to decide anything in relation to the nature of the decree as to costs, the order then passed could not be used against the purchaser. Also Per MAHMOOD, J, that it was doubtful whether, the attachment having been made for the whole amount of the decree and not for costs, and no separate proceedings having taken place in respect of the personal decree against the judgment-debtor, the attachment, the notification of sale, and the sale itself, were valid, but that everything that was said against these proceedings constituted matters falling under section 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, which enables parties to object to confirmation of sale; and that therefore, even assuming that the sale and confirmation of sale were subject to the objection of "material irregularity in publishing or conducting" the sale, within the meaning of section 311, a suit like the present, upon that ground alone, was prohibited by the last part of section 312. *RAGHUBAR DYAL v. 266. ————— Irregularity in notice of sale—Death of decree-holder.—The issue of a notice of sale after the death of the original decree-holder, and before any person had applied to be registered as the substituted decree-holder, is not an irregularity which would warrant the setting aside of a sale under Act VIII of 1859, section 256. *GOBIND CHUNDER AOOCH v. The sale of such notes through a broker is permissive under section 248, and not obligatory. 279. ————— Irregularity in publication of sale—Beng Reg XLV of 1793, s 12.—Delay.—A suit was brought in 1852 to set aside an execution sale made in 1841 on the ground of irregularity in not complying with the provisions of Bengal Regulation XLV, section 12, of 1793, for the due publication of the sale. A summary suit under Bengal Regulation VII of 1825, section 5, had been brought shortly after the date of the sale by the judgment-debtor, to set it aside on the ground of inadequacy of the purchase-money which suit was dismissed. There was no allegation in that suit of any irregularity in the publication of sale. It appeared from the evidence in the suit of 1852 that the notice of sale was affixed at the dwelling-house of the judgment-debtor, the place where his rents were paid, but which was not part of the estate sold. It was not pleaded in the suit of 1852 that there was a town or village where the notification could be fixed as required by section 12, Bengal Regulation XLV of 1793. The Sudder Court held that there had been an irregularity in the publication of the notice of sale, as it was not made within the ambit of the estate sold, and set the sale aside on that ground. On appeal,—Held by the Judicial Committee reversing such decree, first, that as it did not appear that there was any town or village within the pergunnah at which the notification required by the provisions of Bengal Regulation XLV of 1793, section 12, could be affixed there had been no irregularity in posting the notice at the house of the judgment-debtor, so as to vitiate the sale, and secondly, that even if there had been an informality in that respect it ought to have been objected to in the summary suit brought in 1841, and could not be opened eleven years afterwards LAMB v BEJOY KISHEN DASS 8 Moore's I. sale required by section 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, to be made at some place adjacent to the property to be sold, and the fixing up of a copy of the order in a conspicuous part of the property, are acts which must precede the posting of the notices in the Court-house as required by section 290. Three mouzahs were attached in execution of decrees obtained by A and B Prior to the sale, C, who had also obtained a decree against the owner of the land, applied for leave to execute his decree, in order that he might participate in the sale-proceeds under section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code. Upon the day fixed for the sale, the Deputy Commissioner was unable, through illness, to attend, and he postponed the sale for three days. Two of the mouzahs were sold, and realised more than enough to satisfy the decrees of A and B. The third was then sold in satisfaction of C's decree. Upon an application by the judgment-debtor to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity, it appeared that notice of the sale had been posted in the Court-house more than thirty days before the date fixed for the sale, but had only been published on the properties to be sold five days before that date, that notice of the existence of a mortgage on the properties, but no further particulars, was given, and the mortgagee was allowed to purchase, and that the Deputy Commissioner had accepted the reports of the Nazir and Court-peon as to the proclamation of sale, and had refused to allow the judgment-debtor to give evidence of its insufficiency. Held that the proclamation of sale on the property having taken place only five days prior to the date of sale, and the particulars of the mortgage not having been given, there had been such material irregularities in the publication as to entitle the judgment-debtor to give evidence of them and the other allegations made by him, in order to show that he had suffered material injury by reason of such irregularities. Held, also, that the Deputy Commissioner was not entitled to proceed upon the reports of the Nazir and Court-peon, but was bound to hear the evidence tendered by the judgment-debtor, though he was justified, under section 291, in postponing the sale as he had done. Held, further, that the third judgment-creditor, who had not attached the property, was still entitled to have the sale proceeded with and his decree satisfied under the provisions of section 295. MEGH LALL POOREE v SHIB PERSHAD MADI [I. 285. ————— *Irregularity in publishing and conducting a sale.—Waiver of irregularity by the judgment-debtor—Previous to the date fixed for the sale of certain property in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtors presented a petition, praying for a month's further time to be allowed them in order that they might complete the arrangements they were making for the purpose of paying off the debt, and stating that the decree-holders had attached and advertised the property for sale. That petition being refused, the sale took place, and subsequently the judgment-debtors came in and objected to the sale, and asked to have it set aside, on the ground that there had been material irregularity in the publication of the attachment and sale-proclamation, and that, consequently, they had suffered substantial injury. The Subordinate Judge refused to hear evidence on this point, holding that the petition was an admission that the proceedings were in order. Held that the petition presented prior to the sale did not amount to an admission by the judgment-debtors that the publication and proclamation of the sale had been duly made, and that, consequently, the Court was bound to hear the evidence tendered by the judgment-debtors on that point, and to find whether there had been such irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale as to occasion substantial injury to the judgment-debtors. Gvridhar Singh v Hurdeo Narain Singh, I. 288. ————— Property sold before advertised time—Sale invalid—A sale by public auction in execution of a decree, which is conducted at a time and place other than those properly notified, is not a sale at all within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code. The time to be notified for a sale by public auction in execution of a decree must be the time of the commencement of the sale, in order that all intending purchasers may be enabled to be present during the whole of the proceedings, and that all who are interested in the property sold may see that there is a fair competition and a good sale. Where property which was advertised for sale by public auction in execution of a decree at 11 A.M., was sold at 7 A.M.,—Held that the mistake was more than a mere irregularity in conducting the sale, and that the whole of the proceedings were invalid. CHEDAMI LAL v. 310. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 290—"Consent"—Lapse of time between proclamation and actual sale—Postponement of sale—An application made on the day of sale by the judgment-debtor that a part only of his property may be sold instead of the entirety, cannot be considered such a "consent" as, by virtue of section 290 of Act X of 1877, would do away with the necessity of a proclamation for sale being issued thirty days before the day fixed for sale. Where successive postponements of the day of sale have been made, but the last of these is made by the Court on its own motion without any application for postponement of sale being made on the part of the judgment-debtor (although such postponement might be for his benefit), a strict compliance with the rule that thirty days must elapse between the proclamation and the actual day of sale is requisite. HARBUNS SAHAI v BHAIRO PERSHAD SINGH . . . An istahar was also issued, and it was proclaimed only in a public place. After the sale took place as agreed upon, the judgment-debtor contended that he was entitled, under Act VIII of 1859, section 249, to have a fresh proclamation issued on the spot where the properties were situated. Held that, as at the time of his application for postponement he did not contemplate any such proclamation, he could not now object to it not having been issued. HET NARAIN SINGH v GOSSAIN LUCHMEE NARAIN POOREE . . . 23 W. A decree-holder or a judgment-debtor cannot apply to set aside a sale on the ground of the price realised being too low. 336. ————— Inadequacy of price.—Error in notification.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 256, 257—At a sale held on the 9th September 1872, in execution of a decree, the respondent purchased an estate for Rs55,000. The notification of sale had stated the Government revenue to be Rs3,146 instead of Rs8,146, the sale being fixed for the 5th August 1872. The sale was postponed without the issue of a second notification on an application by the judgment-debtor praying for such postponement, "the attachment and the notification of sale being maintained." On the 1st October 1872, the judgment-debtor objected under section 256 of Act VIII of 1859 to the sale on the ground of material error in the abovementioned notification in regard to the amount of Government revenue. The Subordinate Judge overruled such objection, but omitted to pass an order under section 257, confirming the sale. Thereupon the judgment-debtor paid into Court the amount of the decree, and then obtained from the Judge an order purporting to have been made on review under section 376, but without notice to the respondent, setting aside the sale on the ground of inadequacy of price and the abovementioned material error. Subsequently the Judge refused to confirm the sale, and to issue a certificate to the respondent. The High Court, on application by the respondent under 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 104, section 15, held that the objections made were insufficient, and directed the Judge to confirm the sale. Held by the Privy Council that, although the alleged inadequacy of price was no ground for refusing to confirm the sale, yet that the above error in specifying the amount of Government revenue was an irregularity (see section 249) for which, on proof of substantial injury to the judgment-debtor therefrom, the sale might have been set aside, but that the above petition for postponement amounted to an admission by the judgment-debtor that the notification

Inadequacy of price—Irregularity in publishing or conducting sale—If it is proved that the price obtained for property sold at an execution-sale is greatly inadequate, and if it be also proved that there has been a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, the Court will presume that the irregularity was the cause of the inadequacy of price, until proof is given to the contrary. Gopienath Dobey v. the sale of the 20th July 1881 was set aside by the order of the Subordinate Judge on 19th June 1882. In a suit against A B (the agent of A), C, and D, brought on the 20th March 1884, in which the plaintiff prayed that the sale of 20th September 1881 “be declared ineffectual, and be set aside, and that the plaintiff do recover possession of the property,”—Held that the suit being not one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud or anything connected with the sale itself, but on account of the setting aside of the first sale, which took place long after the second sale had been confirmed, and when no execution proceedings were pending in which it was possible for the plaintiff to raise the question, the suit would lie. Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v. Mahomed Isuf Meah, 1 L. R., 11 Calc., 376, distinguished. Held, also, that the first sale, not having been set aside at the time of the sale, was at that time, although it had not been confirmed, a good and effectual sale to pass the property as against the plaintiff and C and D, so that there was nothing left to pass under the second sale. In the interval between the sale and the confirmation of sale, there is not merely a contract for sale, but an inchoate transfer of title which only requires confirmation to perfect it, a sale actually takes place which, if not made absolute, must be set aside. *Saroda Prosad Mullick v. 350. ——— Presumption as to irregularity and injury—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 311—Witnesses, Laches in summoning.—On an application under section 311 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) to set aside a sale, it appeared that there had been a material irregularity in publishing the sale, but no witnesses were called to prove that substantial injury had been caused thereby. It also appeared that, seventeen days after the applicant had applied for proclamation to be issued to his witnesses, he deposited the requisite fees, and that, subsequently, there was a delay of seven days in the office in issuing such proclamations, which were ultimately issued only three days prior to the day fixed for the hearing. On the applicant alleging that, in consequence of such delay, he had not been allowed a fair opportunity to produce his witnesses,—Held that the Court cannot presume that substantial injury has been caused from the mere fact of there having been a material irregularity in publishing a sale, but when both a material irregularity and substantial injury have been proved, the Court may reasonably presume that the substantial injury is due to such irregularity. Held, also, that the applicant, having been guilty of laches himself, could not be allowed to set up the delay in the office as a ground for the non-production of his witnesses. Gopes Nath Dobay v Roy Luchmeeput Singh, I L R, 3 Calc, 542, considered. *BONOMALI MOZUMDAR v. in execution of a decree under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, held in accordance with the provisions of that Code, had no right to recover his purchase-money, though it might turn out that the right, title, and interest of the execution-debtor was nothing at all, unless the sale itself be set aside, and the sale would not be set aside by reason merely of the defect or absence of title in the thing sold on the part of the execution-debtor; but if there was an express assertion that the goods sold were the property of the execution-debtor, the sheriff and the execution-debtor were bound by such warranty, to the extent, at least, that that one of them, in whose hands the purchase-money was, was bound to restore it to the purchaser, if the purchaser had not got that for which he paid. Section 258 of Act VIII of 1859 applied wherever a sale was set aside, whether for irregularity in publishing or conducting a sale or for other grounds, and though the right of the purchaser to recover back his purchase-money, in case of the sale being set aside, was, by that Act, given expressly only where the sale was of immoveable property, yet the same consequence would follow where a sale of moveable property in execution had been set aside. Where, therefore, certain shares were attached by the execution-creditor as the property of the execution-debtor, and were afterwards sold in execution by the sheriff, and the execution orders and warrants and the sheriff's proclamation of sale contained assertions of interest of the execution-debtor in these shares, whereas he had no such interest,—Held that the purchaser at the execution sale was entitled to have the sale set aside, and his purchase-money returned to him, but the sheriff's liability to the purchaser in such a case ceased so soon as he had paid over the proceeds of the sale to the execution-creditor, and the purchaser's remedy thereafter was against the execution-creditor only. Bank of Hindustan v Premchand Raichand, 5 Bom., O. The sale was confirmed on November 30, 1866. On proceeding to take possession he was opposed by the defendant, who asserted that he was in possession of the property, and that it was his. In a suit under section 258, Act VIII of 1859, for a refund of the purchase-money, the sale still remaining uncanceled,—Held that the suit must be dismissed; that section 258 of Act VIII of 1859 only applied to cases where the auction-sale had been cancelled, that the proper course for the plaintiff to have pursued was to have brought a suit under section 269 of Act VIII of 1859 for a declaration of the judgment-debtor's right, title, and interest in the property. *BISSESWAR PANDAY v. To entitle a purchaser, under paragraph 2 of section 315 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to a refund of purchase-money, it is not necessary that a Court should have decided in other proceedings that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be sold, or that the purchaser should have obtained actual possession and have been deprived thereof. *SIVARAMA v. and put D into possession of the property, and he remained for some time in possession and in receipt of the rents and profits, that, eventually, in proceedings in Oudh, instituted by D for partition of the property purchased by him, the sale was pronounced to be null and void and was set aside, and D. was removed from possession; and that the plaintiff sued as the executor of D. to recover the whole of the purchase-money from B. Held, on appeal, affirming the decision of PHEAR, J., that the plaintiff disclosed no cause of action; first, because a purchaser who, after the execution of the conveyance, is evicted by a title to which the covenants in the conveyance do not extend, cannot recover the purchase-money from his vendors, second, because the Sheriff was not the agent of B. for the sale of the property, and therefore no privity of contract existed between B. and D., third, because D. having been for some time in possession of the property and in receipt of the profits thereof, there had not been a total failure of consideration, and the plaintiff accordingly could not maintain the action in its present shape,—viz., for money had and received. [I. L. R., 1 Calc., 55: 24 W. R., 372]

In the same case on appeal to the Privy Council it was held as follows. A writ of fi. fa. issued to the Sheriff authorises him to seize the property of the execution-debtor which lies within his territorial jurisdiction, and to pass the debtor's title to it without warranting that title to be good. But if the Sheriff acts ultra vires,—e g., if he seizes and sells property not within his jurisdiction,—he cannot invoke the protection which the law gives him when acting within his jurisdiction, and he stands in the same position as an ordinary person who has sold that which he had no title to sell. Since there is not in India the difference between real and personal estate which obtains in England, and moveable and immoveable property there are alike capable of being seized and sold under a writ of fi. fa., the responsibility of the Sheriff in respect of sale in that country is governed by the law relating to chattels, rather than by that relating to the sale of real estate. A Sheriff, who in his official capacity seizes and sells property, undertakes by his conduct that he has legal authority to do so. When, from his having acted beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the Court whose officer he is, the sale becomes inoperative and ineffectual, the purchaser may have a case for relief as against the judgment-creditor who has received the purchase-money, if it should appear that the Sheriff has acted under his authority and by his express directions. *DORAB ALLY KHAN v. In consequence of an impression that the sale was illegal, A directed the Sheriff not to pay the money to B, the execution-creditor, and the money remained in the hands of the Sheriff until the 24th of October 1867, when A directed the payment of the money to B in consequence of an arrangement then come to between A and B to the effect that, if A should be ousted from the possession of the property within a year, B should take measures to reinstate him at his (B's) expense. A died without heirs in July 1868, and the Government of Oudh, not being aware that A had left a will, took possession of the talook partly as on an escheat, and partly because there were arrears of revenue due on the property. On the 2nd of October 1868 an order was passed by the Collector of the district in which the talook was situate, declaring the sale by the Sheriff illegal, and directing the return of the talook to its former owners, which was done in April 1869. In a suit brought by A's executors against B in September 1872 to recover the purchase-money, as money had and received, as upon a total failure of consideration,—Held that the agreement of the 24th of October 1867 operated as an accord and satisfaction of all rights which A might have had to a return of the purchase-money or to damages, and that the only remedy which A had was an action on the agreement. Held, also, that no breach of the agreement of 24th of October 1867 had in fact occurred, and that, even if the agreement had been broken, the suit was barred by limitation. 372. ———— Suit to recover purchase-money when sale is set aside—Minor—Costs—Fraud.—A decree-holder fraudulently caused the sale in execution of his decree of certain immoveable property belonging to a minor. The minor brought a suit for a declaration that such sale was invalid and obtained possession of the property from the auction-purchaser. The auction-purchaser sued the decree-holder to recover his purchase-money and the costs incurred by him in defending the suit brought by the minor. Held per PEARSON, TURNER, SPANKIE, and OLDFIELD, JJ., it being found that the auction-purchaser was not a party to or cognisant of the fraud on the part of the decree-holder, that neither the mere fact that the auction-purchaser knew that he was purchasing the property of a minor, nor the mere fact that he did not ascertain whether or not the sale was justified by the terms of the decree, disentitled him to recover the purchase-money from the decree-holder. Held also that, being innocent of fraud and having purchased in the bona fide belief that the property of the minor was saleable, he was entitled to recover the purchase-money. At the same time it would depend upon the circumstances under which the purchaser took possession, and the nature of his outlay, whether he ought in equity to be allowed to claim reimbursement of the money expended by him. Where a purchaser bona fide took possession of the property, and from time to time laid out money thereon, because he thought that otherwise from its peculiar nature it would become even worse than valueless (e.g., making advances in an indigo concern lest the opportunity of the season should pass away), it was held that he was entitled to have it made a condition of setting aside the sale that he be repaid so much of the outlay as he could show was beneficial to the estate; he accounting for the rents and profits realised by him. MORGAN v ABDOL HYE 23 W. Where under a permit to pass a certain number of maunds of salt on which duty has been paid, an amount in excess of such number is removed, the whole of such salt must be considered as removed contrary to the provisions of the Salt Acts (Act XXVII of 1837 and Act XXXI of 1850); and the whole of such salt, and not merely the excess, is, under these Acts, liable to confiscation. FRAMJI HORMASJI v. tured in Bombay was Rs. 13-0 per maund, and the Act which regulated the importation and transport of salt in the Presidency of Bombay was the Bombay Salt Act, VII of 1873. The plaintiffs, who were salt merchants, were desirous of exporting salt from the salt-works at Uran and Panvel, and accordingly, under the provisions of Act VII of 1873, made four several applications in writing to the Assistant Collector of Salt Revenue for the necessary permits on the following dates, viz., 27th November 1877; 17th December 1877, 17th December 1877, and 24th December 1877. Each application stated the amount of salt which it was proposed to export, and at the time of sending in such applications the duty payable in respect of the amount of salt therein mentioned was paid. Receipts for the duty so paid were given to the plaintiffs, and all four applications were duly registered before the 28th December 1877. The salt comprised in the first three applications amounted in all to maunds 20,972, and the whole of this quantity, with the exception of maunds 2,748, had been removed by the plaintiffs before the 28th December 1877; but at that date no part of the salt which was the subject-matter of the last application (24th December 1877), and which consisted of maunds 10,483, had yet been removed. On the 28th December 1877, Act XVIII of 1877 came into force, by which Act the excise duty on salt manufactured in Bombay was raised from Rs. 13-0 to Rs. 2-8-0 per maund, and on that day the sarkarkun refused to allow the plaintiffs to remove the balance of the first three lots (viz., 2,748 maunds) or the last lot of maunds 10,483, unless an additional duty, at the rate of eleven annas per maund, was paid in respect thereof, alleging that the same was leviable under Act XVIII of 1877. The plaintiffs paid under protest the additional duty demanded, amounting to Rs. 9,096-5-0, and exported the salt to British Malabar, having previously obtained certificates from the Collector that excise duty, at the full rate of Rs. 2-8-0 per maund, had been paid upon the said salt. On production of these certificates at the ports of British Malabar, the salt was admitted free of customs duty. The plaintiffs subsequently brought this suit to recover the said sum of Rs. 9,096-5-0, together with a sum of Rs. 1,000 damages alleged to have been sustained by reason of the delay in removing the salt caused by the conduct of the sarkarkun. The plaintiffs contended that having paid the duty in respect of the salt comprised in the four applications, and the said duty having been received by the Collector before Act XVIII came into force, they were not liable to pay any further duty, and that Act XVIII of 1877 did not apply to the said salt. The defendant contended that the additional duty was rightly levied on the salt, and further claimed to set-off against the plaintiffs' claims the sum of Rs. 9,056-5-0 which the plaintiffs would have been obliged to pay in importing the salt into British Malabar if they had not already paid it to the authorities in Bombay, but from payment of which they had been exempted on production of the certificates above mentioned. Held that on the 28th December 1877 the plaintiffs had acquired the right to remove the salt, whenever they might think proper, by simply complying with the usual forms required by Act VII of 1873, and that Act XVIII of 1877 did not operate retrospectively so as to destroy that right and to impose on the plaintiffs a heavier burden as a condition of their removing the salt. Held also, however, that as the salt was allowed to pass free into British Malabar on the strength of its having already paid the duty of Rs2-8-0 per maund at Bombay, the sum of Rs9,096-5-0 must be deemed to have been appropriated by the plaintiffs to the payment of the customs duty payable on the importation of the salt into the ports of British Malabar, and was, therefore, no longer recoverable from the defendant. The plaintiffs, by applying to the Collector of Customs at Bombay for certificates that the duty had been paid, by presenting them at the Malabar ports, and claiming, in virtue of such certificates, that the salt should be admitted free of customs duty, virtually appropriated the Rs9,096-5-0 excess of excise duty (which remained in the hands of the customs authorities as money had and received to the use of the plaintiff) to the payment of the enhanced customs duties at such ports. *BRITO v. 1. ——— Principles of salvage lien.

—Right to salvage—A claim to salvage is founded on a principle of equity which the Courts of British India are bound to recognise. It accrues irrespectively of the circumstance that the rescue is from a danger incurred on inland waters, or of the circumstance that a portion of the services may be rendered from the shore. A boat laden with indigo seed left Permut Ghât, about three miles above the pontoon bridge over the Ganges at Cawnpore, on the morning of the 6th of August. While the boatmen were endeavouring to cross the stream, the boat struck the bridge at a point where the current was running with a velocity of 530 feet per minute. The boat came athwart two of the pontoons, and by the pressure of the stream canted over on its side. From this cause, and also from the strain and other injuries, it began to take in water. Had it been allowed to remain in this position, the bridge must have broken from its moorings, or, more probably still, the boat and cargo would have been submerged. The persons in charge of the bridge might have at once obviated all danger to the bridge by submerging the boat. They took measures to relieve the strain on the bridge and to remove the cargo. It was impossible to remove the boat until the whole of the cargo had been discharged. This was done, and the boat was towed to a place of safety, and the cargo was removed and stored in a warehouse. Held that a right to salvage accrued. Persons in these provinces, to whom a right of salvage has accrued, are entitled to retain the property saved until a reasonable sum has been paid or tendered to them in satisfaction of their claim. GILMORE v ROSE. 6 N. W., 311

2. ——— Services entitling vessel to salvage.—Towage—Where a ship is in a condition of actual peril, and the services of a tug are sought for and directed to the purpose of releasing her from that condition, such services are salvage services. But where there is nothing in those services as regards risk or exertion or other conduct of the salvors to make them differ from ordinary towage services, their reward should be estimated as for towage with salvage liberality. IN THE MATTER OF THE "ALABAMA". 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 139

3. ——— Towage.—Extraordinary towage—Claim of master and crew—Award.—Apportionment.—The S. S. C., while employed as a Government transport to convey troops and stores from Bombay to Egypt, broke her screw shaft and became disabled. While in that condition the S. S. H. B. met her and towed her back to Bombay, the voyage occupying eleven days. The owners of the S. S. C. settled the claim of the owners of the S. S. H. B. for Rs37,500, but refused to recognise any separate claim to remuneration in the plaintiffs, the master and crew of the S. S. H. B. Held that the services rendered were, under all the circumstances of the case, salvage and not merely towage services, and that Rs10,000 was a fair remuneration for the master and crew of the salving vessel, to be apportioned, Rs4,000 to the master, the rest to the crew according to their ratings. The plaintiffs held entitled also to one thirty-second part of the freight, if any, which might be recovered by the S. S. C. under her charter party with the Indian Government. If towage leads to the rescue of a vessel in actual danger, or in reasonable apprehension of danger, the services should be remunerated as salvage. When the steam power of the salving vessel is the efficient cause of the salvage, the owners are entitled to the larger share of the reward. This is especially the case where the master and crew of the salving vessel incur no risk to life. But the reward of the latter ought nevertheless, in the interests of commerce and humanity alike, to be on a liberal scale. The rule no longer obtains which made the salvage reward proportionate to the value of the salved ship. The Courts are only bound to give such amount as is fit and proper with reference to all the circumstances of the case, including value. RAFFIN v. S. S. "CHILKA". I. L. R., 7 Bom., 196

SALVAGE—continued.

4. ———— Calculation of salvage award.—Steamers—The Court is bound to consider the time, labour, skill, enterprise, and risk of the salvors, as well as the value of the property engaged in the service, and also the degree of danger from which the property is rescued, and the value of the property so rescued. Steamboats are entitled to a higher rate of reward than other vessels by reason of the promptness with which they are enabled to render services in such cases. IN THE MATTER OF THE "LADY JOCELYN" 2 Mad., 355

5. ———— Goods put on flat during squall—A dinghee laden with gilders valued at R20,000 was being propelled across the river when, a squall coming on and the dinghee being in some danger, the gilders were taken on board a flat for safety, and kept there till the squall subsided. Held that the owners of the flat had no claim for salvage, and that R150 was a fair remuneration for services rendered. URNA CHURN CHETTY v. 3. ———— Right to cut timber.—Prescriptive title.—Construction of grant.—In construing grants by former Governments, the rule of English law as to the construction of grants to the subject by the Crown is the correct rule to be applied by the Courts in India. Where a sanad contained only the words "The village of Manavali has been conferred on you as inam, to be enjoyed by you, your son, and grandson. The Government dues of the village,—viz., the koolbale koolkunoo (i.e., all taxes and assessments), present taxes and future taxes, together with the house tax but exclusive of haks due to hakdars, shall continue to be debited from year to year, from the year next succeeding,"—it was held that the plaintiff's sanad did not operate as an alienation of the soil of the villages, or confer on him a proprietary title in it, and therefore gave the plaintiff no right to the timber growing upon the soil. The owner of such a sanad, having only a right in the revenues and none in the soil of a village, cannot by thirty years' user become the proprietor of the timber. VAMAN JANARDAN JOSHI v. COLLECTOR OF THANA 6 Bom., A. C., 191

4. ———— Grant of village by Government, Existing rights how affected by—The grant of a village by Government, whether native or British, is subject to all existing rights against Government, whether or not the deed of grant contains an exception or reservation of such rights. Government cannot, by alienating its own rights in a village, albeit that the sanad purports to grant the village as a whole, extinguish or affect any substantive right therein appertaining to third persons, or convey to the grantee any larger or better estate or interest than was vested in Government. DESAI HIMATSINGJI JORAVARSINGJI v. It is not open to the grantor to say that such words as the above mean nothing but land revenue. The saving of the rights of the hakdars and inamdars does not prevent the property in the soil, so far as it can be regarded as vested in Government, from passing to the grantee. RAVJI NARAYAN MANDLIK v. and enjoy possession from generation to generation," subject to an allowance for maintenance to a certain class of the family described as "lowahokans" and "motalokans" (dependants and relations). A's heir afterwards alienated a part of the estate for a valuable consideration. Held, first, in the absence of evidence of any class of persons answering the description of "lowahokans" and "motalokans" (which might have created a trust), that A took an absolute estate in the lands assigned to him; and, secondly, that the limitation in the sanad "from generation to generation" did not create such an estate as to operate as a bar to alienation by sale. *NURSINGH DEB v. 8. ————— S. C., a Hindu, granted a talook to his sister, K, by a sanad in the following terms "You are my sister, I accordingly grant you as a talook for your support the three villages, H, F, and K, belonging to my zemindari, with all rights appertaining thereto, at a tabut jumma of Rs. 361. Being in possession of the lands and paying rent according to the tabut jumma, do you and the generations born of your womb successively (santan sreni kreme) enjoy the same. No other heir of yours shall have right or interest." At the date of the sanad K had one child, a daughter, C. She had afterwards a son, who died in her lifetime without issue, but whose widow, by his permission, adopted, after his death, a son, C. L. K. held undisputed possession of the talook during her lifetime, and by her will devised it to C, her daughter, and C. L., her grandson by adoption, in equal moieties. On K's death, H. C., as heir of his father, S. C., took possession of the talook, whereupon C and C. L., claiming under the will of K, sued for possession. Held by the Court of first instance that C took an absolute estate under the sanad on the death of her mother, K, but that having elected to take under her mother's will, and to admit the co-plaintiff C. L. to a half share in the estate, both plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the action. Held by the High Court, on appeal, that C, having been born before the date of the sanad, took under it a life-interest in the talook in succession to the life-interest of her mother; but that, as the plaintiffs had not sued in respect of the life-interest, but claimed under the will of K, which she was incompetent to make, the suit must be dismissed. The term "santan" bears the wider and more general meaning of issue, and is not confined to male progeny. The true meaning of the words "sreni kreme" in a sanad, as gathered from the context, was held to be in "succession" in the sense of succession first of the mother, and then of the children born of her womb. Held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the earlier words of the sanad, when read together, were to be taken as conferring an absolute estate on K; and that the effect of the concluding words "no other heir of yours, &c.," was to make the absolute estate before given defeasible in the event of a failure of issue living at the time of K's death, in which event the estate was to return to the donor and his heirs, but as that event had not occurred, it followed that K took an estate which she could dispose of by will, and

During the minority of that grandson the four surviving sons executed a sanad which, after reciting certain arrangements made by their father, directed that "the zemindari should be held by A, the son of the eldest son. A and we four also shall take in equal shares the mam lands. Until A attains his proper age, we all should jointly manage the affairs of the said zemindari. After A attains his proper age the zemindari of the mam lands allotted to him should be delivered over to him, and each should confine himself to the share allotted to him." Certain jewellery was also divided in similar manner. A died leaving a son, C, who died in 1865 without issue,

11. ————— Impartibility.—

"Heirs."—In 1793 the ancient zemindari of Nuzvid, which descended to a single heir, having been before British rule a raj or principality held on the tenure of military service, was resumed by the Government for arrears of revenue. In 1802 the Government formed two zemindaris out of it, and granted one of them, since called Nuzvid, to the second son of the rajas, under a "sanad-i-milkat istemrari," which described the zemindari lands comprised in it as "the six pergunnahs of Nuzvid in the Kondapalli Circar." The provisions of the sanad did not differ from those of an ordinary grant under the permanent settlement. On the question whether this zemindari was, or was not, subject to the same rule of impartibility as that to which the ancient and entire zemindari of Nuzvid had been subject before 1793,—Held that the six pergunnahs granted in 1802 were a new zemindari, subject only to the ordinary obligations imposed on zemindaris in general, and the word "heirs" used in the sanad construed to mean heirs of the grantee according to the ordinary rules of inheritance of the Hindu law. Also that this quality had not been transmuted into partibility either by the passing of the Regulation XXV of 1802, or by that law coupled with the issue of the sanad containing certain of its terms. *Venkata Rao v. The zemindari in which these lands were situated was settled in 1802, and was in 1850 sold for arrears of Government revenue. The appellant claimed to set aside the sanad of 1807, on the ground that Government had no right to give such a sanad, but he contended that, if it had, it could be set aside by a purchaser at a Government sale. Held that the sanad was not a new grant, but a confirmation of the one made before the decennial settlement, and that Government was competent to give such confirmation. *LOPEZ v. 24. ———— Sanction "at any time."—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s 169—"At any time"—The words "such sanction may be given at any time" in section 169, Code of Criminal Procedure, must be construed reasonably, and "any time" meant a time which did not unduly prejudice the party to be prosecuted, or put him in a worse position than he was before. *SEETARAM SAHOO v. 4. NOTICE OF SANCTION.

27. ———— Necessity of notice.—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 195, cl c, para. 2.—A sanction to prosecute, when applied for subsequently to the termination of the proceedings in the course of which the offence is alleged to have been committed, ought not to be granted, unless the person against whom the sanction is applied for has had notice of the application and an opportunity of being heard. *ABHILAKH SINGH v. 5. NATURE, FORM, AND SUFFICIENCY OF SANCTION.

29. ———— Nature of sanction.—Permissive nature of sanction.—Discretion of party obtaining sanction.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 468.—The sanction to prosecute, contemplated in section 468 of the Criminal Procedure Code, was not a direction to prosecute, but was a permission granted to a private person to exercise his own unfettered discretion as to whether he would take proceedings or not. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF GRIDHARI MONDUL. NARAIN PASSEE . 25 W. R., Cr., 14

31. ———— Form of sanction.—Sanction in writing and attached to record.—It is very desirable that such sanction or direction should be in writing and attached to the record, but it is by no means legally imperative. QUEEN v. KRISTNA RAU

33. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss. 169, 170.—Statement of particular offences.—When a Civil Court gives sanction to a prosecution under sections 169 and 170, Code of Criminal Procedure, it should state with precision the particular offence or offences for the prosecution of which it gives sanction. *QUEEN v. 34. ———— General sanction.—Prosecution for false evidence.—Penal Code, s. 193.—A general sanction by a Judge to a prosecution for giving false evidence under section 193 of the Penal Code, and for false verification, is not sufficient. The exact words upon which the prosecution is based, and the exact offences which the Magistrate is to investigate, should be pointed out. QUEEN v. KARTICK CHUNDER HOLDAR

Contra, QUEEN v. KADIR BUX alias KADIR MAHOMED 11 W. R., Cr., 17

35. ———— Prosecution under Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 470.—Requisites of proper sanction.—A sanction for a prosecution under section 470 of the Criminal Procedure Code must designate the Court where the false statement was alleged to have been made and the occasion on which it was committed. It is desirable, if not necessary, that in the sanction for prosecution the description of the offence intended to be prosecuted should be stated in general terms, although details may be omitted. IN RE BALAJI SITARAM

36. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 195.—False evidence.—Specification of place and time of offence.—A sanction to a prosecution for giving false evidence granted under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code should specify the place where, and the time when, the alleged false evidence was given, and in substance the assignments of perjury, as also the sections of the Penal Code under which proceedings are authorised. *HAE DIAL v. [I. L. R., 6 All., 98]

38. ————— Specification of particulars of offence—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 195—False evidence—Preliminary inquiry—In a suit on a bond, instituted in the Court of a Munsif, the question whether the defendant had executed the bond or not was referred to arbitration. The arbitrator decided that the defendant had not executed the bond, and that it was a forgery. The Munsif dismissed the suit in accordance with the award. The defendant then applied to the Munsif for sanction to prosecute the plaintiff, without specifying in his application the offences in respect of which he desired to prosecute. The Munsif granted sanction, merely observing that there were sufficient grounds for sanctioning the prosecution, without giving any reasons or specifying the offence or offences in respect of which sanction was granted. Held that the terms in which the Munsif had given his sanction to a prosecution were not sufficiently explicit, and that he should have mentioned the section or sections of the Penal Code under which he authorised criminal proceedings to be taken, as also in a general way the offence or offences to be charged, the date of commission, and the place where committed. Further, that as the Munsif himself had not determined the question of forgery in the suit, he should have made some inquiry to satisfy himself that there were materials to justify a prosecution. PARSOTAM LAL v. BHAJ

[I. L. R., 6 All., 101]

39. ————— Omission to specify particulars of offence—False evidence—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861), ss. 169 and 170—Where persons were charged with offences under sections 471 and 193 of the Penal Code, committed in proceedings before the Civil Court, and for which therefore the sanction of the Civil Court was necessary under sections 169 and 170 of Act XXV of 1861,—Held that the sanction, which simply gave permission, and did not specify the particular act or acts and the particular words which constituted the offences, was insufficient. QUEEN v. GABIND CHANDRA GHOSE

40. ————— Refusal of sanction under mistake or as being unnecessary—Held, that the declining by a Court of Revenue to sanction a prosecution under sections 468 and 469 of Act X of 1872, under a mistaken view of the law and under the impression that sanction was unnecessary, did not constitute sanction *EMPRESS OF INDIA v. after sanction by Deputy Collector—In a suit by A for arrears of rent above Rs100, a decree was passed against B, C, and D, wherein certain documents filed by them were held to be forgeries. A applied for, and obtained, an order from the Deputy Collector who tried the suit, for leave to prosecute B and C in the Criminal Court. A afterwards applied to the Collector for leave to prosecute B, C, and D, whereupon the Collector passed the following order: "Sanction has already been given once by the Deputy Collector. I, however, have no objection to give it a second time, as the petitioner desires it." D was convicted by the Sessions Judge on a charge under section 471 of the Penal Code. On appeal by D,—Held that no proper leave had been obtained to prosecute D, and this defect was not cured by the subsequent proceedings, and the conviction must be quashed. QUEEN v. MAHIMA CHANDRA CHUCKERBUTTY

[7 B. L. R., 26; 15 W. R., Cr., 45]

42. ————— Statement by Munsif that he has no objection to give sanction if evidence is thought sufficient—Sufficiency of sanction—On an application to a Munsif for sanction to prosecute, the following order was made upon the petition: "If the petitioner thinks there is sufficient evidence against A, I have no objection to give such sanction." Held that the order was not a sufficient sanction to support a prosecution. IN THE MATTER OF JADU NATH HAZRA v. ANNODA PROSAD SIRCAR

[11 C. L. R., 53]

43. ————— Penal Code, s. 193—Sufficiency of sanction—Sanction for the prosecution of the accused was accorded by an Assistant Sessions Judge in the following terms: "There is no doubt whatever that Tai, Bai, and Bala, these three persons, made before me certain statements contradictory of the statements which they had made before the committing Magistrate. Therefore, if from such statements of theirs they may be liable to any charge, there is sanction from here" (i.e., I give my sanction) "for their prosecution." Held that this gave sufficient sanction for the prosecution of the accused under section 193 of the Penal Code, and that it was not necessary that the authority giving the sanction should specify the particular section of the Penal Code under which the accused was permitted to be prosecuted. REG. v. TAI 8 Bom., Cr., 24

44. ————— Issue of warrant—Implied sanction—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 169—The object of the sanction required by section 169, Code of Criminal Procedure, was to ensure that the prosecution should be instituted after due consideration on the part of the Court before whom the false evidence was given, or on the part of a Court to which such Court was subordinate. When a Magistrate perused the papers of a case which had been forwarded to him by a Subordinate Magistrate for consideration, and then sent on the papers to the District Superintendent of Police with an opinion adverse to the prisoner, and the District Superintendent of Police requested the Magistrate to issue a warrant against the prisoner, charging him with giving false evidence, it was held that the issue of the warrant was a sufficient sanction, under section 169, on the part of the Magistrate. QUEEN v. MAHOMED HOSSAIN . . . 16 W. R., Cr., 37

45. ————— Instruction from Sessions Judge to Magistrate—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s 468—Prosecution for giving false evidence—An instruction to the Magistrate of the district by the Court of Session, contained in the concluding sentence of its judgment in a case tried by it, to prosecute a person for giving false evidence before it in such case, was held not to amount to sanction to a prosecution of such person for such offence, within the meaning of section 468 of Act X of 1872, that section supposing a complaint, or at least an application for sanction for a complaint. EMPRESS v. GOBARDEAN DAS . . . I. L. R., 3 All, 62

46. ————— Order of Munsif directing that Magistrate inquire into a case—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, ss 195 and 476.—“Sanction.”—“Complaint”—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s 643.—On the 2nd August 1884 a Munsif, who was of opinion that in the course of a suit which had been tried before him certain persons had committed offences under sections 193, 463, and 471 of the Penal Code, and that the prosecution of these persons was desirable, made an order which he described as passed under section 643 of the Civil Procedure Code, and in which he directed that the accused should be sent to the Magistrate, and that the Magistrate should inquire into the matter. In May 1885, upon an application by one of the accused to the District Court to “revoke the sanction for prosecution granted by the Munsif,” it was contended that the “sanction” had expired on the 2nd February 1885, and had ceased to have effect. Held by the Full Bench that the Munsif’s order, whether it was or was not a sanction, was a sufficient “complaint” within the meaning of section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that the limitation period prescribed by that section was not applicable to the case. Per PETHERAM, C. J., and STRAIGHT, J.—That, considering that section 643 of the Civil Procedure Code was closely similar to section 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Munsif’s order might be taken as having been passed under the latter section. Also per PETHERAM, C. J., and STRAIGHT, J.—The words in section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code, “except with the previous sanction or on the complaint of the public servant concerned,” must be read in connection with section 476, which was enacted with the object of avoiding the inconvenience which might be caused if a Munsif, or a Subordinate Judge, or a Judge, were obliged to appear before a Magistrate and make a complaint on oath, like an ordinary complainant, in order to lay the foundation for a prosecution. The language of section 476 indicates that where a Court is acting under section 195, a complaint in the strict sense of the Code is not required, and that the procedure therein laid down constitutes the “complaint” mentioned in section 195. ISHBI PRASAD v. SHAM LAL [I. L. R., 7 All, 871

47. ————— Report of police or medical officers.—Prosecution under Bom Military Cantonments Act, III of 1867.—Reports of police or medical officers are not a sufficient sanction for prosecutions under this Act. A complaint on oath or solemn affirmation is necessary. REG. v. LADU [7 Bom., Cr., 87

48. ————— Implied sanction.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1869, s 168—Penal Code, ss 177, 193.—Framing charge—The form of an accusation by a District Superintendent of Police, under section 193 of the Penal Code, does not preclude a Magistrate from framing the charge under section 177; the sanction of the District Superintendent required under section 168, Code of Criminal Procedure, to give the Magistrate jurisdiction, need not be express, but might be implied. IN THE MATTER OF ASHEUFF HOSSEIN [16 W. 55. ——— Sanction mentioning wrong section of Code.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss. 169, 170.—Prosecution under different section than that for which sanction was obtained.—The prosecutor applied to a Civil Court for leave to prosecute, under section 170 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a witness who had appeared before the Court. The Court granted the permission as applied for. The prisoner was tried for and convicted of an offence coming under the provisions of section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held that the mention of section 170 in the permission to prosecute granted by the Civil Court might be treated as surplusage, and that the prisoner was rightly convicted. *REG. v. 6 POWER TO GRANT SANCTION.

59. ——— Implied power.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1869, s. 167—Prosecution of public servant—Upon the construction of section 167 of the Criminal Procedure Code,—Held that the section by implication vested in the Court or authority to whom the Judge or other public servant not removeable, &c., was subordinate, the power of sanctioning or directing such prosecution. It did not say that the Government must give the power, but that it shall exist unless limited or reserved. Every Court or authority, therefore, has it unless there is a limitation. *QUEEN v. 83. ————— Necessity for fresh sanction.—Postponement of case.—Expiration of limitation.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s 195.—It is competent for a Court which has granted sanction to a prosecution under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code to give a fresh sanction, if the one previously granted has expired by efflux of time. The limitation of six months mentioned in section 195 means that a Magistrate shall not take cognisance of a case under a sanction which is more than six months old, not that the whole prosecution must be completed within that period. Held, therefore, where sanction to a prosecution had been granted under section 195, and the prosecution had been instituted, and the Magistrate, in consequence of the evidence of the complainant not being procurable, had ordered "the case to be shelved for the present," and the complainant, after the six months mentioned in section 195 had expired, applied to the Magistrate to reopen the proceedings, that it was competent for the Magistrate, having once taken cognisance of the case, and it still remaining on his file undetermined, to take it up again at any moment, and proceed with the prosecution, without fresh sanction. The plaintiff then, on the 20th August 1884, applied for a fresh sanction, which was granted on the 13th April 1885. Held that, assuming that the Munsif who granted the fresh sanction had power to do so, as to which the Court expressed no opinion, such fresh sanction should not have been granted unless some explanation was given for the omission to commence proceedings within six months; and as no such explanation was given, nor any special grounds

Held that a single Judge is vested with all the powers of an Appellate Court with reference to the costs of an appeal; that, when an appellant resides within the jurisdiction of the Court he is amenable to its orders as to the costs of an appeal, and that an appellant who has no available property must, if required, give security for the costs of an appeal before proceeding with it MONOHUR DOSS v. 20. ———— Beng Reg. XIV of 1829, s 2, cl. 1.—Inhabitant of foreign territory.—Bengal Regulation XIV of 1829, section 2, clause 1, enacted that every person being an inhabitant of a foreign territory should be required to furnish security for costs, such security to be furnished by a plaintiff or appellant within six weeks of the date on which his plaint or appeal was filed, and that unless such security be so furnished, the suit of such person, if plaintiff, should not be proceeded with, or appeal admitted unless he had furnished the necessary security to cover costs in the appeal. In an appeal to the Sudder Court from a decree of the Zillah Court by a party then temporarily absent in England, but having real estates and factories within the jurisdiction of the Court, no security was furnished by the appellant's wakil within six weeks after lodging the appeal. The respondent in the first instance put in an answer to the grounds of appeal filed by the appellant, but afterwards filed a petition for dismissal for non-compliance with the requirements of Bengal Regulation XIV of 1829, section 2, clause 1, contending that the appellant was a resident of a foreign territory, and had not furnished security within six weeks as required by that Regulation. The Sudder Court held that such security ought to have been furnished by the appellant, who, residing in England pendente lite, was to be considered as resident in a foreign territory within the meaning of the Regulation, and dismissed the appeal. Held by the Judicial Committee (remitting the suit to India for trial) that the Sudder Court had not, by Regulation XIV of 1829, any power ex mero motu to dismiss the appeal, (1) as the appellant was guilty of no default under that Regulation, not having been called upon by the respondent or the Court to furnish security for costs, (2) as the appellant was not guilty of laches in not voluntarily offering security; the Regulation providing only that a suit or appeal should not be proceeded with until security was furnished. Semble,—The putting in an answer to the appeal before objecting to the want of security for costs operated as a waiver by the respondent of the want of security for costs required by Bengal Regulation XIV of 1829, section 2, clause 1. Quære,—Whether Act III of 1845,

21. ———— Grounds for ordering security—Cause being shown on a rule nisi for an order for security to be given by an appellant for the costs of an appeal (similar orders having been previously made on the application of other defendants), it appeared that an unusual number of defendants had been joined in the suit, which had been withdrawn on a previous occasion when nearly tried out, and that the plaintiff, who sued as a relator, was poor and resided out of the jurisdiction, and had not paid interlocutory costs, for which an attachment had issued. Held that an appellant will not be ordered to give security for costs previously incurred that the fact of similar applications having been granted in the suit, the poverty of the appellant, and the fact of his dwelling out of the jurisdiction, as well as the peculiar circumstances of the case, non-payment of interlocutory costs, a former withdrawal of the suit, and the joining of an unusual number of defendants, are grounds for granting an order for security to be given by an appellant for the costs of an appeal that a relator suing to enforce a public right must give security for the costs of those against whom he proceeds. *MUZHUR HOSSEIN v. The information to be required by a Magistrate, before issuing an order under section 112, may to some extent be of a hearsay and general description, but when the party to whom the order is directed appears in Court in obedience thereto, the inquiry must be conducted on the lines laid down in section 117. It is not because a man has a bad character that he is therefore necessarily liable to be called upon for sureties of the peace or for good behaviour. There must be satisfactory evidence in the one case that he has done something, or taken some step, that indicates an intention to break the peace or that is likely to occasion a breach of the peace, and in the other, that he is within the category of persons mentioned in section 110, the determination of which question must always be guided by the considerations pointed out in *Empress v Nawab, I. A Magistrate is not competent, upon information that suggests the likelihood of a breach of the peace, to resort to section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and it is altogether ultra vires for him to demand security for three years in such a case. In ordering the arrest of a person under section 114 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate must act on recorded information; it is not enough for him to express a belief that such a course is necessary. Not only must he have "reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace," but "that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person." *EMPRESS v. But when the evidence was entirely in a person's favour, and showed him to be of excellent character and in every respect contrary to the sort of person against whom the section was directed, to apply its provisions to him on a weak and unsupported charge of mischief by fire, was foreign to the intentions of the Legislature, and not only illegal but oppressive. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF HAMIDOODEEN AHMED

The mere record of previous convictions, on account of which the person has undergone punishment, does not satisfy the requirements of sections 110, 117, and 118 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), and it is wrong to use these provisions so as to add to the punishment for past offences. IN RE RAJA VALAD HUSSEIN SAHEB

Where, therefore, the evidence adduced before the Magistrate did not show that a person was "by habit a robber, house-breaker, or thief, or a receiver of stolen property, knowing the same to have been stolen" but showed only that he had been guilty of acts of violence,—Held that the Magistrate could not, under section 506 of Act X of 1872, order such person to furnish security. 56. ————— House-breaking and theft — Joinder of charges — Limit of conviction — Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), ss 452, 454, 455. — Held that, where in the course of one and the same transaction an accused person appears to have committed several acts, directed to one end and object, which together amount to a more serious offence than each of them taken individually by itself would constitute, although for purposes of trial it may be convenient to vary the form of charge and to designate not only the principal but the subsidiary crimes alleged to have been committed, yet in the interests of simplicity and convenience it is best to concentrate the conviction and sentence on the gravest offence proved. 60. ————— Criminal Procedure Code, ss 35 and 235—Penal Code (Acts XLV of 1860 and VIII of 1882), ss 71, 380, 457—Simultaneous convictions for several offences.—Sentence—The accused was convicted at one trial by a Magistrate of the first class of the offences of house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, punishable under section 457, and of theft in a dwelling-house, punishable under section 380 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860),—the two offences being part of the same transaction, the theft following the house-breaking. The prisoner was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment under section 457, and to six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of ₹100, or, in default of payment, three months' further rigorous imprisonment, under section 380. The District Magistrate referred the case to the High Court, on the ground that the aggregate of punishment awarded on the two heads of charge exceeded the powers of the First Class Magistrate who tried the case. The Sessions Judge, to whom an appeal had been preferred, was of the same opinion, and reduced the sentence to two years' rigorous imprisonment. Held that as the accused committed two distinct offences which did not "constitute, when combined, a different offence" punishable under any section of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860), section 71 of the Code did not apply, and as the aggregate punishment did not exceed twice the amount of punishment which the trying Magistrate was competent to inflict, the sentences were legal under section 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882). Per JARDINE, J—The rules for assessment of punishment, contained in section 454 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1872, having been omitted in section 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1882, must now be sought for in section 71 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860) and in section 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code (X of 1882). QUEEN-EMPRESS v SAKHARAM BHAI [I. 66. ————— Joining unlawful assembly and rioting with deadly weapon.—Penal Code, ss. 144, 148—There is nothing illegal in sentencing a prisoner for both offences of joining an unlawful assembly armed with a deadly weapon (section 144), and rioting armed with a deadly weapon, though the former is almost merged in the latter offence. SREEKISSEN v. JUGLAL . 9 W. R., Cr., 5

67. ————— Rioting armed with deadly weapon—Causing hurt by shooting.—Where prisoners are charged both with rioting, being armed with deadly weapons, and with causing hurt by shooting, and their conviction of the latter offence rests solely on the fact of their belonging to a party by one of whom (not one of the prisoners) fire-arms were used, it is wrong to pass a cumulative sentence, and to punish the prisoner both for the rioting and for the causing hurt. The punishment should be for either one or other of those offences. QUEEN v. DURZOOLLA 9 W. R., Cr., 33

they were also charged under section 324, coupled with section 149, with causing hurt by a dangerous weapon to X, and B was further charged under section 324 with causing a like hurt to Y, A being also charged under section 324, coupled with section 149, in respect of the hurt caused by B to Y. A and B were convicted on all charges, and separate sentences, to take effect in succession, were awarded in respect of each offence charged. The offences under section 324 were committed during the riot. Held that the several acts with regard to which the prisoners were charged did not fall within the provisions of section 71 of the Penal Code, inasmuch as it was not found that the causing of the hurt was the force or violence which alone constituted the rioting, and that consequently under section 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code the several sentences passed were strictly legal. *LOKE NATH SINGH v. The Deputy Magistrate convicted all the accused of offences under sections 147 and 353 of the Penal Code, and sentenced them to six months' rigorous imprisonment under the former section and two months' rigorous imprisonment under the latter. He further convicted one of the accused of an offence under section 324, in respect of the assault on A, and sentenced him to one month's rigorous imprisonment in respect of that offence, and directed that the sentences were to take effect one on the expiry of the other. Held that the offence of rioting was completed by the assault on A, and that the assault on the peon was a further offence under the first sub-section of section 235 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Held, further, that even if A had not been assaulted, the conviction and sentences passed for rioting and the assault on the peon were legal, inasmuch as the acts of the accused, taken separately, constituted offences under sections 143 and 353 of the Penal Code, and, combined, an offence under section 147, and under 235, sub-section 3 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the accused might be charged with and tried at one trial for the offence under section 147, and those under sections 143 and 353, and therefore also separately convicted and sentenced for each such offence,

75. ————— *Penal Code, s 71—Criminal Procedure Code, ss 39, 235—Rioting, grievous hurt, and hurt—Punishment for more than one of several offences—On the 8th August 1884 a Magistrate of the second class began an inquiry in a case in which several persons were accused of rioting and of voluntarily causing grievous hurt. On the 6th September the powers of a Magistrate of the first class were conferred on the Magistrate by an order of Government, which was communicated to him on the 8th September. On the 9th September, the case for the prosecution having closed, the Magistrate framed charges against each of the accused under sections 323 and 325 of the Penal Code, recorded the statements of the accused and the evidence for the defence, and on the 10th September convicted the accused of all the charges, passing upon each of them, in respect of each charge, sentences which he could pass as a Magistrate of the first class, but could not have passed as a Magistrate of the second class. On appeal, the Sessions Judge, on the ground that the prisoners had committed the offence described in section 148 of the Penal Code, held that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were illegal, as being inconsistent with the provisions of section 71, paragraphs 2 and 4, and he accordingly reduced the sentences of imprisonment which the Magistrate had passed to the maximum of imprisonment which the Magistrate could have inflicted under section 148. The object of Rule 389 of the Supreme Court Rules, which required a party, who wished to enforce an order by sequestration, to indorse, upon the copy of the order served upon his opponent, a memorandum to the effect that in default of performance of the order he would be liable to be arrested, and to have his estate sequestered, was to enable the party making such endorsement to apply ex parte for the writ. In the absence of such a memorandum indorsed upon the copy order, a party desirous of enforcing an order by sequestration must give proper notice to his opponent of his intention to apply for the writ. An order commanding an act to be done "forthwith" is sufficiently in conformity with the rule that requires the time within which an act ordered to be done is to be performed to be specified in the order. HARIVALLABHDAS KALLIANDAS v. 14. ———— Service of summons on agent—Principal and agent.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss 76 and 87, cl. (c).—Carrying on business.—To satisfy the conditions of section 76 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) as to service of summons on an agent, there must be a person residing without the local jurisdiction but carrying on business or work within those limits by a manager or agent, and sued on account of such work,—that is, business either actually itself carried on by the agent or manager, or forming part of the business in the sense of a connected course of transactions to the management of which he has been duly appointed. Section 76 and section 37, clause (c), are to be construed together, and are intended to carry out the scheme of relief which rests upon the idea that where an agent has been put forward substantially to take the place of his principal within a particular jurisdiction, he should take the place of such principal (at the option of any person who has dealt with him) in any legal proceedings that may arise out of the business or work in which the agent has been virtually a local principal. The manager or agent contemplated by the Code is one who has an initiative and independent discretion, albeit subject possibly to principles and general orders prescribed for his guidance. A mere servant employed to carry out orders or to execute a particular commission, or a factor or common agent who is not identified with the firm for which he acts, is not such an agent. The firm of G S carried on business at Agra. It had no place of business in Bombay, but it employed G as its agent in Bombay in certain dealings which it had with the plaintiff. The letters and telegrams of the firm to G were sent to the plaintiff's place of business, or addressed to G as an individual, not in the name of the firm. G did not himself initiate any business or in any way stand between his employers' firm and the plaintiff. Held that G was not the defendants' manager or agent within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, section 76, and that in an action against the defendants, service of summons upon him was not due service. G in particular instances drew hundis on the firm of G S which that firm duly accepted and paid. Held that he might reasonably be deemed their agent or manager for this particular kind of business, if for no other, and service on him might probably suffice in the case of a plaintiff suing on hundi transactions as with the firm through him. Service truly made under section 76 does not become effectual by reason of the fact of service being subsequently notified to the parties really interested as defendants. Semle,—Service duly effected under

16. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 17.—Recognised agent—Carrying on business in name of principal—Ship's agents.—Messrs. R S & Co., European merchants, carrying on business in Bombay, received a letter from the owner of the ship Rialto by which Messrs. R S & Co were constituted agents to obtain freight for the Rialto on a voyage from Bombay to Liverpool, the ship being placed in their hands for that purpose. Acting on this letter Messrs. R S & Co obtained freight for the Rialto, signing the shipping orders in their own name as agents for the master of the Rialto. Messrs. R S & Co held no other authority from the owner of the Rialto than that contained in the above letter. Held that Messrs. R S & Co did not carry on business for, and in the name of, the owner of the Rialto, and were not, therefore, his recognised agents within the meaning of sections 17, clause 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure, to accept service of a summons on his behalf in respect of a cause of action that arose out of the loading of the Rialto. Whether, in order to constitute a recognised agent within the meaning of the above section, the business carried on by him must be continuous, and not an occasional or desultory business. Quere Semle,—A Bombay firm simply employed by the owners of a ship visiting Bombay to procure freight for her for a particular voyage, cannot, under ordinary circumstances, be regarded as carrying on business in the name of the owners of such ship. RATANSI PANCHAM v SAUNDERS. 8 Bom., O. 23. ————— Issue of summons—Summons transmitted to local Court for service.—Return of local Court when sufficient evidence of service—Form of return to be made by Civil Court —Where the service of summons has been effected on a defendant by affixing a copy of the summons on the door of his dwelling-house, the Court must decide whether the summons has been duly served by such affixing or not, and, if it decides in the negative, a new summons must be issued, or substituted service directed. Before the Court can decide in favour of the sufficiency of this mode of service, it must be satisfied that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service. Where a summons has been transmitted by one Court to another for service by the latter, the transmitting Court is not bound, in every case, to satisfy itself that the law as to service has been strictly followed. The presumption in favour of the proceedings of a Court of Justice is that everything has been duly performed, and if the return made by the Court serving the summons states that the summons has been duly effected, that presumption must prevail, unless the return discloses some patent irregularity or clear divergence from the law. As a rule, on a return from a competent Court that summons has been duly effected, it may be presumed that either personal service has been effected, or substituted service under section 82, or under sections 80 and 82 combined, of the Civil Procedure Code (XLV of 1882). As proof of due service of summons, a return from the Court of Small Causes at K. was relied upon in the High Court. The return was in the following words: "Read bailiff's endorsement on the back of the process, stating that the summons has been affixed to the defendant's house on the 22nd December 1884, at 9 A.M., and proof of the same having been duly taken by me, it is ordered that the summons be returned." Held that there was no sufficient service. The return itself proved the insufficiency. There was no statement, under the hand of the Judge, that the summons had been duly effected, and it did not appear that anything had been done beyond fixing the summons on the defendant's door. That affixing was not sanctioned after inquiry by the local Court, as required by section 82. All that appeared to have been done was the affixing prescribed by section 80, which was insufficient until confirmed under section 82. Reg v Tukaya, 1 L R, 1 Bom, 214. NUMUR MAHOMED v. KAZBAI . 29. — Discretion to issue second summons.—Absence of return to first summons —

When there is no return of service to a summons, the law gives a Court full discretion either to issue a second summons or to take or not take stronger measures. It is not imperative on one Court to take measures to expedite the service in another Court, but it is the business of the party interested to move the Court to do what is necessary. Held that the case having come on for hearing, and there being nothing to show that the plaintiffs had been in any way deceived by B., the proper order to be made was for the dismissal of the suit. Act II of 1865.—Bom Act VII of 1863—Held (1) that, in the absence of fraud and collusion, adverse possession during twelve years during the life-time of one holder of service vatan lands is a bar to succeeding holders (2) In the absence of fraud and collusion, judgment against one holder of service vatan lands is res judicata as regards a succeeding holder (3) Such lands become alienable when the services are abolished, except in cases where there is a concurrent family custom operating similarly to keep the vatan estate together. Such a custom may continue and may singly bind the hands of the successive holders of the property after the former restriction has failed or been removed. The abolition of the public duty does not alter the nature of the estate. If the family custom forbids alienation beyond the life time of the alienor, the custom will operate equally after the patrimony has ceased to be a vatan, as before. Where, however, such a concurrent custom does not affect an estate, then when it is freed from its connection with the public office the reason arising from that connection for the preservation of the estate necessarily fails, and the lands become subject to the ordinary law of descent and disposal. Per WEST, J.—(1) Lands with respect to which a summary settlement under Bombay Acts II and VII of 1863 has been effected, are wholly exempt from official obligation (2) Where service lands, or what were deemed service lands, have been aliened, and at a later period the service has been disclaimed or abolished, this subsequent abolition or discharge renders the title of the alienee in possession undisputable by the alienor's heirs, assuming that there is no special family custom operating apart from the law which preserves service lands for the intended uses. Lapse of tenure—As an ordinary rule, if land is given on a quit-rent, or no rent at all, in consideration of service to be performed, the tenure would lapse when those services ceased. Quære,—When no service has been required or performed for a long series of years, and the tenure has been allowed to be held at a quit-rent, or no rent at all, whether there has not been such a waiver of service as puts it out of the power of the grantor to resume the tenure, simply on the ground that he has now no need of the service for which the tenure was originally created? Quære,—Whether when land is given at a quit-rent, on condition that the grantee shall aid the grantor in repelling the attacks of his enemies or for any other particular purpose, while the grantee is willing to render those services, the grantor can put an end to the contract by saying that he has no enemies to repel, and therefore no need of the grantee's further services? NILMONEY SINGH DEO v SHEO TEWARY [W. 17. ————— Commutation of services—Desaigiri allowance.—Right to hold as personal gratuity—Amin sukhdi—Suit to establish right to amin sukhdi.—The parties, who were desais of Mahudha, in addition to their "desaigiri" allowance enjoyed an allowance called "amin sukhdi." In 1847 the plaintiff sued the defendant's father and the Collector of Karra for a share of the allowance, but as the whole of it had been reserved by the Collector to the defendant's father as the officiating desai, the suit was rejected under Act XI of 1843. In 1866 an arrangement was come to, under which a sum of Rs 40-2-0 was to be annually available over and above the remuneration of the officiator. On the 9th of July 1867 the defendant received this sum for the first time. In 1873 a new arrangement was effected under which the service was abolished, the Government resuming half of the allowance, and giving up the other half freed from service unconditionally to the desais. On the 4th of October 1878 the plaintiff brought this suit to establish his right to a share of the moiety of the amin sukhdi allowance given to the desais by the Government, and to recover his share of the amount received by the defendant. The defendant contended that the allowance was impartible and in the nature of a personal gratuity exclusively enjoyable by himself. Held that independently of its origin and the light in which it was regarded by the Government and the parties, the amin sukhdi allowance having been actually included in and dealt with as part of

20. ————— Resumption of tenure.—Partition where service lands are all allotted to one co-sharer—The joint proprietors of a talook assigned to the defendants a portion of land therein in consideration of chowkidari services rendered by him throughout the area of the talook. A butwara having been effected, the plaintiff obtained a fourth share within which fell the assigned land. Upon this the plaintiff sued the defendant to take back three-fourths of the service land on the ground that being a one-fourth shacholder he ought not to pay more than a one-fourth share of the consideration for the services rendered. Held that as long as the defendant's services were required and rendered, the plaintiff could not, in equity or justice, withdraw from the defendant that land which had been given him by all the shareholders, when they were joint, as a consideration for those services. BEECHOOK PASBAN v KULLAR SINGH 20 W. The laying down of general rules by Government as to the resumption of service lands, under article 3, clause 3 of section 2 of the Act, was not a condition precedent to their protection from suits and actions in respect of such lands. PREMSHANKAR RAGHUNATHJI v. BROOBUN SINGH. BROOBUN SINGH v. QUEEN*

[9 W. R., Cr., 36]

9. ——— Power of Sessions Judge to add charge and try it.—Addition of charge triable by any Magistrate.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 28.—Subject to the other provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, section 28 gives power to the High Court and the Court of Sessions to try any offence under the Penal Code, and the provision it contains as to the other Courts does not cut down or limit the jurisdiction of the High Court or the Court of Session. Three persons were jointly committed for trial before the Court of Session, two of them being charged with culpable homicide not amounting to murder of J. and the third with abetment of the offence. At the trial the Sessions Judge added a charge against all the accused of causing hurt to C, and convicted them upon both the original charges and the added charge. The assault upon C. took place either at the same time as or immediately after the attack which resulted in the death of J.—Held, that the Sessions Judge had power, under section 28 of the Code, to try the charge assuming that he had power to add it. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SESSIONS JUDGE, JURISDICTION OF.

Magistrate—R having been committed by a Magistrate for trial by a Sessions Court on a charge, under section 202 of the Penal Code, of having intentionally omitted to give information which he was legally bound to give respecting a murder, pleaded guilty, on his trial, to the charge on which he was committed. Upon the application of the Public Prosecutor, the Sessions Judge, under protest on the part of the prisoner, added a charge, under sections 109 and 201 of the Penal Code, of abetting C, a female co-prisoner charged with having assisted in burying the body of the murdered person, required R to plead to the charge and, having tendered a pardon to, and examined C as a witness, convicted and sentenced R to two years' rigorous imprisonment—Held that, as there was no evidence before the Magistrate to support the charge against R framed by the Sessions Judge, the action of the Judge was ultra vires and the conviction on the added charge illegal—Held, also, that inasmuch as the Sessions Judge considered R more culpable than C, the proper course would have been to have adjourned the trial, sent the record to the Magistrate, and suggested an enquiry as to whether there was ground for a more serious charge against R. See semble.—The object of restricting a Sessions Court from taking cognizance of any offence (except as provided in sections 455, 472, 474 of the Criminal Procedure Code), unless the accused person has been committed by a Magistrate, is to secure to the prisoner a preliminary enquiry which affords him an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offence imputed to him, and enable him to make his defence. MUTIRAKAL KOVILAGATHA RAMA VARMA RAJA v. QUEEN . . . I. L. R., 3 Mad., 351

11. ——— Trial without committal by Magistrate.—Witness sent up with conditional pardon—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss 359, 459—Held that a Sessions Judge acted irregularly in at once trying and convicting a person who had been granted a conditional pardon by the Magistrate, and who had been sent up to the Sessions Court as a witness for the Crown. Such a course was held to be a material irregularity under section 439 of the Code, and the Sessions Judge was directed to order the Magistrate to commit the accused to the Sessions for a fresh trial after hearing his defence and examining his witnesses. QUEEN v. BIPRO DASS [19 W. R., Cr., 43]

12. ——— Order for re-trial on appeal.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 280, amended by s. 28, Act XI of 1874.—It is competent to a Court of Session under section 280 of the Criminal Procedure Code as amended by section 28, Act XI of 1874, to order a re-trial of a case which is before it on appeal. IN THE MATTER OF SHER MAHOMED [2 C. 14. ——— Power in regular appeal.—Insufficient evidence—Acquittal—If the evidence which comes before a Sessions Judge in a regular appeal from a Magistrate's order is not sufficient to reasonably satisfy him that the prisoners have been rightly convicted, he ought to acquit them. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF KHERAJ MULLAH. KHERAJ MULLAH v. JANAB MULLAH [11 B. L. R., 33: 20 W. R., Cr., 13]

15. ——— Power to suspend sentence.—A Sessions Judge has no authority to suspend his own sentence. ANONYMOUS . . . 4 Mad., Ap., 2

17. ——— Power to prevent prisoner from appealing.—Right to appeal.—It is not the province of the Sessions Judge to decide whether a prisoner has a right of appeal or not, he is bound to allow a prisoner, whose conviction he has confirmed, to execute a vakalatnama to appeal. QUEEN v. VAIYAPURI GAUNDAN . . . 1 Mad., 4

18. ——— Mitigation of sentence without appeal.—Held that a Sessions Judge has no power to mitigate a sentence passed upon a prisoner who has not appealed to him. REG. v. MULIYA NANA . . . 5 Bom., Cr., 24

19. ——— Power to sentence on appeal from decision of Magistrate.—Commutation of sentence—A Sessions Judge cannot, on appeal from a Magistrate's decision, inflict a term of imprisonment in commutation of a fine longer than that which the Magistrate himself could have inflicted. REG. v. HARI BIN VITHOJI . . . 1 Bom., 139

20. ——— Power to pass sentence of death.—Affray with murder—Offence before Penal Code came into operation—In a case of affray attended with murder, in which the offence was committed before the Penal Code came into force, it was held that a Sessions Judge had himself power, under section 4, Act XVII of 1862, to pass sentence of death, instead of referring the matter for confirmation of the High Court. QUEEN v. BUSTI SINGH [14 W. R., Cr., 78]

21. ——— Amendment of sentence.—Alteration of conviction.—Criminal Procedure Code 1861, s. 22.—Held that an order of a Sessions

Judge, by which he altered a conviction by the Assistant Sessions Judge, of "dacoity" to one of "robbery," was illegal, not being an amendment of a sentence or order within the meaning of section 22 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Held further, that if the accused were, in the opinion of the Sessions Judge, improperly convicted of "dacoity," he ought to have declined to confirm the sentence, and to have left them to be charged with and tried for "robbery." REG. v. THOMESIT 5 Bom., Cr., 22

22. ——— Concurrent jurisdiction with Magistrate.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s 434—Report to High Court—A Full-Power Magistrate was not immediately subordinate to the Sessions Court, and therefore a Sessions Judge had no concurrent jurisdiction with the Magistrate of the district, under section 434 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. His proper course, if he thinks that an illegal sentence or order has been passed by a Full-Power Magistrate, is to make a report to the High Court, which will then, if it thinks fit, call for the proceedings. REG. v. SHIVBASAPA

[7 Bom., Cr., 73]

23. ——— Power to call for and refer to the High Court proceedings of Magistrate.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1869, s 23—Held that under the provisions of section 23 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1869, a Full-Power Magistrate was, for the purposes of section 434, immediately subordinate to the Magistrate of the district, and not to the Court of Session. The Sessions Judge therefore had no power to call for or refer to the High Court proceedings in a case before a Full-Power Magistrate. REG. v. KESHAVSHET 6 Bom., Cr., 74

24. ——— Power to refer to High Court.—Unnecessary reference to High Court—Where an appeal is preferred to a Sessions Judge from the order of a Magistrate which he considers illegal, the Sessions Judge should himself deal with the case, instead of referring it to the High Court. QUEEN v. NUSSUROODDEEN SHAZWAL

[11 W. R., Cr., 24]

25. ——— Power to call for report from Magistrate.—Power to call for record and proceedings—A Sessions Judge ought not to call for a report from the Magistrate of the district in any case in which it is not competent to such Sessions Judge to call for the record and proceedings, e. g., in the case of a person tried by a Subordinate Magistrate who has appealed to the District Magistrate. In trials by the Magistrate of the district, or Full-Power Magistrate, in which the Sessions Judge can call for the record and proceedings, he has power also to call for a report. REG. v. GIRDHAR DHARAMDAS

[6 Bom., Cr., 33]

26. ——— Power to call for and examine record.—Absence of order by Magistrate—There was no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, which made it lawful for a Court of Session to call for and examine the record of a case tried by a Subordinate Magistrate where no sentence or order had been passed thereon by the immediately subordinate Court of the Magistrate. REG. v. BHASKAR KHARKAR 3 Bom., Cr., 1

27. ——— Trial in case committed by Magistrate.—Objection that case was tried without complaint—A Court of Session cannot treat as a nullity the commitment of a Full-Power Magistrate, on the ground that he investigated the case, and committed the prisoner, without a formal complaint being made to him, but should proceed with the trial in the usual course. REG. v. RANCHODDAS NATHUBHAI 4 Bom., Cr., 35

28. ——— Objection to irregularity of proceedings.—The fact of a commitment being made by a Joint Magistrate, who is an officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate, was sufficient, under section 359, Code of Criminal Procedure, to enable the Sessions Judge to proceed with the trial, and it lay with the party impugning the correctness of the proceedings to show that there was no jurisdiction. QUEEN v. KOMUROODDEE SIKHDAR [13 W. R., Cr., 17]

29. ——— Power to quash sentence of Assistant Sessions Judge.—Sentence submitted for confirmation—Held that a Sessions Judge had no power to quash a sentence passed by an Assistant Judge, and by him submitted for confirmation, and to direct a new sentence to be passed, even supposing the sentence of the Assistant Sessions Judge to be illegal. REG. v. MURAR TRIKAM . 5 Bom., Cr., 3

30. ——— Power to quash commitment for illegality.—Duty to report proceedings to High Court—The Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, did not authorise the Sessions Judge to quash a commitment on the ground of illegality. If the Sessions Judge is of opinion that the order of commitment should be annulled as illegal, he should move the High Court to annul the same under section 404 of the Criminal Procedure Code. QUEEN v. MATA DYAL [4 N. W., 6]

31. ——— Power to annul conviction and sentence.—Offence beyond jurisdiction of subordinate Court—It is only when a Court subordinate to a Court of Session convicts a person of an offence not triable by such Court, that the Court of Session can annul the conviction and sentence. If the prisoner is guilty of an offence beyond the jurisdiction of the subordinate Court, the Court of Session should refer the case to the High Court. QUEEN v. ICHABUR DOBEY 4 W. R., Cr., 11

7. ——— Right to set off a claim for an unascertained amount.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 111—

The provision of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), section 111, does not take away from parties any right to set-off, whether legal or equitable, which they would have had independently of that Code. And such right exists not only in cases of material debts and credits, but also where cross-demands arise out of the same transaction, or are so connected in their nature and circumstance as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover, and the defendant should be driven to a cross-suit. Where, therefore, a decree had been obtained against certain persons in respect of arrears of rent of an ijara held jointly by them, and one of them having been forced to pay the whole amount of decree sued the others for contribution, and where in such suit the defendants pleaded that, although the plaintiff had paid off the whole of the decree in question, he was not entitled to recover any portion from them, inasmuch as he was indebted to them for his share of the ijara rents, the whole of which had been paid by them to the zemindar in previous years, as well as in respect of rent due to them for the share on account of a portion of the land which he himself held in nij-jote, and for which he had paid no rent, and that on accounts being gone into, it would be found that their claim exceeded that of the plaintiff,—Held, following Clark v. Ruthnavaloo Chetti, 2 Mad., 296, and Kishorchand Champalal v. Madhowji Visram, I. L. R., 4 Bom., 407, that notwithstanding the provisions of section 111 of the Civil Procedure Code, the defendants' claim for the share of rents paid by them to the zemindar on account of the same ijara might properly be pleaded as a set-off, and be taken into account in determining the plaintiff's suit as arising out of the same transaction, but that their

8. ————— Right to set off damages for breach of contract.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 111.—“Ascertained” sum.—A suit was brought by P against the Elgin Mills Company for recovery of the price of wood supplied under two contracts, each of which contained a clause by which the plaintiff contracted to indemnify the defendants for loss arising by reason of failure on his part to supply the wood as contracted for. Defendants claimed a set off as damages for loss incurred by the plaintiff's failure to supply all the wood contracted for, such loss having arisen on the 25th October 1879, and subsequently. Held that although, taking the word “ascertained” to mean “liquidated,” the claim of the defendants for damages would not come within the meaning of a set-off under section 111 of the Civil Procedure Code, that section was one regulating procedure, and was not intended to take away any right of set-off, whether legal or equitable, which parties would have had independently of its provisions, that the right of set-off would be found to exist not only in cases of mutual debts and credits, but also where the cross-demands arose out of one and the same transaction, or were so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover and the defendant be driven to a cross-suit, and that as, in the present case, the claim sprang out of the same contract which the plaintiff sought to enforce, and could readily be determined in the same suit, it was equitable that it should be so determined. Gauri Sahai v. Ram Sahai, 7 N. W., 157; Kistnasamy Pillay v. Municipal Commissioners of Madras, 4 Mad., 120; and Kishor Chand Champa Lal v. Madhouri Visram, I L. R., 4 Bom., 407, followed. Per OLFIELD, J.—That the excess of the set-off in favour of the defendants over and above the claim of the plaintiff might properly be decreed to them, and that the set-off should be allowed, if at all, to its full extent, and not merely to the extent of defeating the claim. Per DUTHOIT, J.—That although the set-off might properly be admitted as an equitable protection to the defendants against being cast in the plaintiff's suit, the defendants could not, failing the provisions of section 111 of the Civil Procedure Code, be allowed to recover a sum of money from the plaintiff, they having paid no court fees on that account. *PRAGI LAL v. the creditors demanding payment, which debts are joint and have hereunder been declared payable by both parties. Should one party neglect to pay or show carelessness in the matter, and should the other be obliged to pay the whole amount of any such debts, the latter shall be competent to realise from the former portion of the debt paid on his account, together with costs and interest, by the enforcement of this award, and shall also be entitled to recover the amount by suit in Court. Both parties shall act up to this award in its entirety. The sum of R338-0-9, which has been found due and payable by G. to R. as per account showing the mutual dealings between the parties, shall be made good as follows, i.e., G. shall pay to R. the whole amount of R338-0-9 by the middle of the month of Pous 1276 Fash, either in a lump sum or by instalments, and in case of non-payment within the said period he shall be charged with interest at the rate of one per cent up to the day of payment.” R. sued to recover from G. the money found to be due and payable to him under the award. G. admitted the claim, but desired to set off half the amount of certain debts which were payable under the award by the parties jointly, and which he alone had satisfied. The lower Appellate Court deducted from the claim items of the demand admitted by R., but refused to determine G.'s right to set off the items which R. disputed on the ground, that they could be more conveniently inquired into in a separate suit. It was held (per STUART, C. J., SPANKIE, J. dissenting) that G. was entitled to demand a set-off, and that the lower Appellate Court should have inquired into the disputed items of the demand, and not have referred G. to a separate suit in respect of those items. GAURI SAHAI v. It appeared that the defendant had previously sued the plaintiff to recover the same amount as was now claimed by way of set-off, as being due for the price of cloth sold and delivered by the defendant to him, and the plaintiff (then defendant) pleaded that there had been no sale to him, but the cloth had been delivered to him on commission sale. The suit was dismissed on the ground that there was no proof of a sale of cloth, and the question whether any sum was due for cloth sold on commission sale was not gone into. The cloth now alleged to have been delivered on commission sale was the same as that alleged in the former suit to have been actually sold to the plaintiff. Held that the defendant was entitled, under section 111 of the Civil Procedure Code, to set off the amount claimed as due for goods sold on commission against the plaintiff's demand. Held, also, that the court fee payable on the claim for set-off was the same as for a plaintiff in a suit *AMIR ZAMA v. defendants 3 and 4 sold their zemindari right in 2 annas and 15 gundas share to K, the plaintiff, retaining 5 gundas share on their own account. The plaintiff sued to recover the rent of 2 annas and 15 gundas from the defendants 1 and 2, who denied the plaintiff's claim, while they admitted that they were liable for 8 annas rent of the putni, treating themselves as their own zemindars for 2½ annas share in the zemindari, and they alleged payment of 5½ annas of the putni rent to the 8 annas shareholder in the zemindari, and a set-off against the other 2½ annas against their own claim as zemindars. Held that as the defendants 1 and 2 were strangers to the transfer of the rights of defendants 3 and 4 to the plaintiff, they had, as between themselves and the plaintiff, a right still to do what they did formerly,—namely, set off their putni liability against their zemindari right. *GOOROO DYAL CHUCKERBUTTY v. The lower Court refused to consider the defendant's plea, on the ground that it was in the nature of a set-off, and that not being a debt due from the plaintiff to the defendant, it was not such a set off as could be allowed by the Court. Held that the plea was a plea of payment merely, and not in the nature of a set off. *KOONJO BEHARY SINGH v. —In a suit brought against a lessee of a portion of an estate by one of the co sharers for money alleged to be due as the plaintiff's share of arrears of rent for a certain period, where the claim was admitted, —Held, the defendant was not entitled to set off, under section 121, Act VIII of 1859, the plaintiff's share of the Government revenue of the whole estate which had been paid by the defendant for the period for which the arrears of rent were alleged to be due. Held, also, that there was no such connection between the claim of the plaintiff and the counter-claim of the defendant as would entitle the defendant, as a matter of equity apart from legislative enactment, to a set-off HOSSEINA BIBI v SMITH

The lower Appellate Court, finding that the defendant had a 2-anna share in the zemindari, as well as in the shikmi, considered that the one right might be set off against the other, and that the plaintiffs had consequently no claim against the defendant. Held that this conclusion was erroneous, for though there were in a certain sense opposing rights, still they were not mutual rights as between the parties to the present suit. The plaintiffs were entitled to get a 2-anna share of the jumma from the defendant and the 14-anna talookdars jointly, and the defendant was entitled to get a like share from these 14-anna talookdars and himself jointly, but the defendant had no right to set off the debt thus due to him against the debt due to the plaintiffs from the same persons HUREE KISHORE ROY v HUR KISHORE ADHIKARIE 23 W. The zemindar brought a suit for rent of the jote against A and B and got a joint decree, in execution of which he put up the jote for sale. C, in order to save his miras right, paid the amount of the decrees before sale, and then sued A and B for the amount so paid. Held that C was entitled to recover, and that a claim for rent by B against C, but which C disputed, could not be admitted as an answer to C's claim in the present suit or as a set-off. It is essential to the validity of a set-off that the debts should be mutual, due from and to the same parties and in the same right. Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819, section 13, and Bengal Act VIII of 1869 section 62, discussed BHOIRUB CHUNDER Doss v HAFEZUNISSA KHATOON 2 C. In the first, the plaintiffs appealed, and in the second, the defendant, who also, by cross-appeal, claimed a sum which, as he alleged, would have been found due to him had accounts on both sides been taken in the first of the above suits. Held that as the first suit was for an account only, and not for the recovery of money, rendering it at least doubtful whether a set-off could be pleaded in defence; and as, also, no issue had been framed, or even asked for, on the question, it was not open to the defendant to raise it on this cross appeal. NAN KARAY PHAW v. 53. Execution by two decree-holders—Act VIII of 1859, s 209—Where there were cross-decrees, and one of the decree-holders was, by an order of the Court made with the consent of both parties, bound in executing his decree to set off the amount of the decree against him,—Held that it would be inequitable to allow the other decree-holder to obtain execution in full without setting off the amount decreed against him. *HARO SANKER SANDYAL v. 54. Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 209—Attachment—In April 1877 M sued S for money, and on the 10th May 1877 S sued M for money, both suits being instituted in the same Court. In the meantime, on the 9th May 1877, B applied for the attachment of the money claimed by M in his suit, and obtained an order prohibiting M from receiving, and S from paying, any sum which might be found in that suit to be due by S to M. On the 23rd June 1877 M obtained a decree in his suit against S, and S obtained a decree in his suit against M, S's decree being for the larger sum. On the same day, under the provisions of section 209 of Act VIII of 1859, satisfaction for the smaller sum was entered on both decrees, and execution taken out of S's decree for so much as remained due. At the same time S objected to B's attachment, but his objection was disallowed. Held, in a suit by S against B to have the order disallowing his objection set aside and the propriety and legality of the set-off above mentioned established, regard being had to the provisions of section 209 of Act VIII of 1859, that the attaching order of the 9th May could have no operation or effect, and that even if B had followed up that order and attached M's decree against S, that step would not have put him in a better position, for the same section being followed, and the decrees being essentially cross-decrees, that for the smaller sum became absorbed in the one for the larger, and attachment could not affect it. BHUUHAWAN LAL v SUKHAJ RAI

56. Cross-decrees for mesne profits—In 1827 S commenced a suit against B, and before judgment applied for and obtained, under Bengal Regulation II of 1806, an attachment of certain immoveable property belonging to the defendant. In 1828 S obtained a decree, upon which he did nothing immediately, but in 1844 he sold the attached property in execution and purchased it himself. Thirteen years after B commenced proceedings to set aside that sale, and in 1860 obtained a final decree reversing the sale restoring to him the possession, and awarding him mesne profits. The mesne profits were ascertained, and a third party (R.) attached the decree in respect of a judgment-debt due to himself from B. Upon this S, after tying ineffectually to stay R's proceeding, brought a suit claiming to set off the amount of the decree of 1828 against the decree of 1860. Held that whatever equitable right S might have in consequence of the situation of the parties, it should have been urged in the suit before decree, and not in execution when rights of third parties had accrued, and that what R sought was not the mesne profits attached by S under the decree of 1828, but the amount decreed to be paid by S to B. RAM COOMAR GHOSE v GOBIND NATH SANDYAL

59. Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 209—Decree barred by limitation—In a suit for resumption of land, plaintiff obtained a decree for a portion of her claim, with costs in proportion. Subsequently, on application for a review, she obtained a further decree for the rest of her claim. The latter decree was reversed on appeal by the High Court, who gave defendants all costs of the proceeding in proportion. Plaintiff allowed more than three years to elapse from the date of the former decree without applying for execution, but when defendant applied to execute his decree for costs, she petitioned for a set-off of so much of the costs as had been decreed to her. Held that these two judgments and decrees must be treated as reduced to one, wherein judgment was given in part for the plaintiff and in part for the defendant, and before issuing a warrant of execution, the Court was bound to ascertain how much, on the whole case, was due to the party executing, and to issue a warrant for that sum and no more. Held, further, that no question of limitation could arise in respect to the execution of the first decree, which became incapable of execution as soon as the High Court's decree in appeal (which was for a larger sum) was passed; but that the latter, under section 209, Code of Civil Procedure, could only be executed to the extent of the difference between the two decrees.

75. ——— Decree in favour of one party with costs in favour of the other—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 209—When a decree in favour of an appellant describes a set of costs as due by the appellant to the respondent, it means not that any sum should be actually paid to the latter, but that the costs in question should be deducted from the gross amount decreed, and the remainder only recovered under the decree. To make section 247 of the Code applicable in the case of cross-claims under one decree, the parties entitled thereunder to recover from each other must hold the same character and possess identical rights of enforcing execution, and enforcement of the decree can only be refused, or satisfaction entered up, when this is the case. Held, therefore, where a decree for money of a Court of first instance directed that the money should be realisable from certain specific property of the defendant, and exempted his person and other property, and the lower Appellate Court modified this decree by extending it to the person of the defendant, and in second appeal the High Court set aside the lower Appellate Court's decree and restored that of the first Court, directing that the costs of the defendant in the lower Appellate Court and in the High Court should be paid by the plaintiff, that, inasmuch as the plaintiff was only entitled to recover the judgment-debt due to him from the defendant from such specific property, whereas the defendant was entitled to recover the judgment-debt due to him from the plaintiff from his person and property, the provisions of section 247 were not applicable. *KALKA PERSHAD v. 78. ————— Conditional decree.—Purchase-money.—Costs—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss 214, 221, 247—Decree in suit for pre-emption—The decree in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption directed, in accordance with the provisions of section 214 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the plaintiff should obtain possession of the property and recover costs of the suit from the defendants (vendor and vendee), on payment of the purchase-money within a fixed time, but that on default of such payment the suit should stand dismissed. The plaintiff deposited within time the purchase-money with the exception of a sum less than the amount of costs awarded to him. He subsequently applied for delivery of possession of the property in execution of the decree and for the recovery of the costs awarded to him, deducting from such costs the unpaid portion of the purchase-money. Held, applying, by analogy of sections 221 and 247 of the Civil Procedure Code, the equitable doctrine of set-off, that the plaintiff was entitled, when depositing the purchase-money under the decree, to deduct therefrom the sum the decree awarded to him as costs, and that therefore the decree did not become null and void by reason that he had not deposited the full amount of the purchase-money within time. *Degumburee Dabee v. 7. ——— Right on resumption.—Suit to set aside settlement—In a suit by a person claiming certain lands which have been resumed by the Government, the plaintiff is entitled, on the allegation that he is the rightful owner of the lands, and that the defendant obtained a settlement by false allegations of ownership and of possession, to an adjudication of his right to a settlement. 8. ——— Ghatwali tenures.—Suit against Government for settlement—Limitation—A ghatwali tenure was resumed by the Government under Bengal Regulation II of 1819. After the resumption, H. N., the former holder of the tenure, claimed settlement as proprietor. The Government denied his title, but offered him a lease on his giving security. On his failure to find security, the Government in 1841 made a temporary settlement with J. S., who entered into possession of the land. No malikana was reserved to or ever paid to H. N. In 1862 the Government settled the land permanently with J. S. The heir of H. N. then brought a suit in the Civil Court, praying that this settlement should be set aside, and for a declaration of his right to have a settlement concluded with him. Held that supposing H. N. ever to have had any legal right to a settlement as proprietor, the suit to enforce such right was barred by limitation, he having been effectually dispossessed, and the cause of action, if any, having accrued in 1841. Note.—The Court appeared to consider that in fact H. N. never had any right to maintain an action in the Civil Court to compel the Government to make a settlement with him. JOY MUNGUL SINGH v. POKHARUN SINGH GOVERNMENT v. POKHARUN SINGH . . . 7 W. The Government did not cancel the talook, but settled it with A. for twelve years. The Collector, who was made a defendant, stated that the hookumnamah rules of the district directed that land should be given to mirasidars on their tendering sufficient security, and that the plaintiffs on previous occasions had received lands for which offers had been made by others in consideration of the plaintiffs' preferential right, but that they had failed to cultivate the lands or pay the assessment in breach of their agreements. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief sought for. COLLECTOR OF MADRAS v RAMANUJA CHARIYAR KULLAPPA NAIK v. 14. ——— Evidence necessary to establish creation of talooks.—Shikmi talookdars.—Registration of tenure.—The registration of a talook, or of the sanads creating it, is not absolutely necessary to prove the creation of the talook before the decennial settlement. The omission of any mention of such a talook in the decennial or quinquennial settlement, and the inclusion of the lands in the decennial settlement as part of the zemindari for which the jumma is assessed, does not afford any strong inference against the evidence of the talook being only a shikmi talook paying rent to the zemindar, the talookdars were not required to mention it, nor was it necessary for the zemindar to do so. 4. MODE OF SETTLEMENT.

16. ——— Procedure on making fresh settlement.—Beng Reg VII of 1822, s. 14.—Refusal to accept new settlement.—Time to remove house.—Where the Collector had issued due notice of enhancement under section 14, Bengal Regulation VII of 1822, of the jumma of lands situate in a town and subject to that Regulation, and the tenant refused to accept a revised settlement, under such circumstances he was held to be entitled to a reasonable time within which to remove a house standing upon the lands in question. RAM CHAND BERA v. VII of 1822, s. 20.*—Where the plaintiff's title was recognised by the settlement officer in 1836, who assigned an allowance of 5 per cent. on the Government demand,—Held that the Collector had no power in subsequent years during the pendency of this completed settlement to interfere with the arrangement of the settlement officer, except to the extent allowed by section 20, Regulation VII of 1822. Section 20, Regulation VII of 1822, did not confer on the Collector the power of remodelling the arrangements completed by the settlement officer under section 10 of the Regulation; nor could the notification of Government extend to revenue officers an authority that the law did not allow to them. HIMMUT SINGH v. 28. ———— Effect of resumption and settlement of lakhiraj.—Invalid lakhiraj.—Assessment of revenue by Government upon invalid lakhiraj land after resumption does not confer a new estate on the lakhirajdar, and does not cancel or extinguish a mokurrari lease granted by the lakhirajdar previously to the settlement, and during the time he was in possession of the land as lakhiraj. PRATAB NARAYAN MOOKERJEE v MADHU SUDAN MOOKERJEE 8 B. 29. ———— Abadkari talookdar.—Acceptance of farming leases—Sale of Government right.—A Government settlement, whether permanent or farming, so far from destroying the rights of a talookdar, always preserves them if there be really a dependent tenure. Neither the acceptance of farming leases by the talookdar quâ farmer, subject to the Government proprietary right, nor the sale of that Government right in any way, ipso facto, extinguishes any talookdari right existing in the abadkari talookdar in that capacity, if otherwise valid. *HURO PERSHAD BHUTTAACHARJEE v. 30. — Settlement with several persons.—Presumption as to equality of rights.—In the settlement of a talook, after resumption by Government with thirteen persons, it is not to be presumed that all thirteen persons had equal rights, simply because the settlement was made with all of them jointly, particularly where the settlement proceedings show that the question of the extent of the shares was in dispute, and that the settlement was made jointly with the whole without prejudice to title. GOOROO CHURN PODDAR v. HAFEEZA BIBEE [7 W. R., 366]

31. — Omission to settle boundaries and proportion of assessment which each cultivator ought to pay.—Liability to pay revenue individually.—In a suit against a Collector for an illegal seizure and subsequent usurpation of plaintiff's shares in an Agraharam village for non-payment of trivari due from other tenants of the village, and to recover the increased trivari imposed by the Collector,—Held that the fact of pottahs having been issued separately to each tenant, stating the share of land occupied, without defining the holding by boundaries and the proportionate amount of assessment which the cultivator is to pay for it, though affording cogent evidence of the distinct liability of each for the amount of trivari stated in his pottah and no more, is not conclusive evidence of such individual liability. ELLAIYA v. KUMOLA KANT ROY 11 W. R., 38

33. — Private rights.—Limitation.—Right of action as proprietor.—Certain land having been settled by Government for a period of ten years, one S. bought the benefit of that settlement at an auction-sale for arrears of rent, and afterwards sold his rights to one M. On the expiration of the temporary settlement, Government effected a permanent zemindari settlement with M. In the following year (1865) the zemindari title was sold, and the purchaser now (1869) sues to recover possession of certain specified land. The lower Appellate Court, finding that none of the persons above-mentioned had possession within twelve years immediately preceding the filing of the plaint, considered the suit barred,—Held that the question was one solely of a private right, and that the plaintiff did not stand in the position of Government in regard to the statute of limitations. Held, also, that the plaintiff's claim was traceable solely through M. from whom he bought, that at the time of settlement Government has nothing more than a right of action by virtue of its being proprietor, and not the right of action S. had as auction-purchaser; and only the former right passed by the settlement. *RUGHONATH SUBMAH v. 34. — Permanent lease made by proprietor pending resumption.—Where the proprietor of resumed lakhraj land leases it for valuable consideration, and at a stipulated jumma, while the settlement proceedings are under reference to the higher revenue authorities for confirmation, he cannot afterwards turn round upon the lessee and plead that he had no power to grant a permanent lease, on the ground that the settlement with him was temporary, and not permanent. *AMEER ALI v. SETTLEMENT—continued.8. EXPIRATION OF SETTLEMENT—continued.*Revocation of sanad—continued.

Bombay Act VII of 1863, Government cannot reform or set it aside without the assent of all parties interested therein. To do so would be an assumption by Government of the function of a Civil Court. A Civil Court cannot, on the ground that Government has, by mistake, granted such a sanad to a person not the owner of the land, reform or set aside the sanad. Section 7 of Bombay Act VII of 1863 renders the quit-rent, fixed by the sanad, binding alike on Government and on the rightful owner of the land, but the latter may recover the land from the grantee of the sanad, subject to the quit-rent, fixed by the sanad, payable to Government, and such grantee will be declared to have taken the sanad as a trustee for the rightful owner. Where Government had granted seven sanads to certain garasis in respect of lands, part of which had been previously sold by the garasis and Government had attempted to revoke and cancel those sanads, and had subjected the lands to a full assessment on the ground that the garasis were not entitled to any of the said lands and that the sanads had been granted by mistake,—Held, that such attempted revocation, cancellation, and re-assessment were void and of no effect, and that the grantees were entitled to hold the lands on the terms mentioned in the sanads, but, so far as regarded the sold portion of the said lands, in trust for the vendees thereof and their heirs, representatives, and assigns. Quære,—Whether a Civil Court can give relief, either by reforming or cancelling such sanads, against mistakes, other than those relating to ownership, which may be found to exist in the sanads. DALSANG BHAVSANG v COLLECTOR OF KAIBA

40. ——— Dispossession.—Dependent talookdars—Cause of action—When a dependent talookdar, holding under a temporary settlement, has that settlement placed in abeyance by the Collector taking the collections into his own hands khas, the Collector's act is not one of dispossession from which limitation can count, but limitation will reckon from the date when the purchaser, at a sale after the Collector had ceased to hold khas, had himself made collections, and so created cause of action by dispossession of the former talook. MYENOODDEEN v RAMMOON CHOWDHRAIN 7 W. R., 182

41. ——— Shikmi talookdari right.—Payment in lieu of shikmi talookdari right.—Where a shikmi talookdar accepted from Government a pottah, which admitted him to be a person having a right to a settlement, and gave him as a separate and distinct allowance under the head of expenses (in addition to the usual allowance for collections, &c.), the allowance which had, under the previous settle-

GOLAB SINGH . 3 Agra, 303

2. ——— Powers of, in making entry in jumabandi.—A settlement officer is bound to record in the jumabandi the existing rights of cultivators, and cannot impose an enhanced rent without notice on those entitled. DOORGA MONEE DOSSEE . . . 21 W. R., 410

3. ——— Act XIV of 1863.—Application under Act X of 1859, s 28—The powers which the Government was authorised by Act XIV of 1863 to confer on settlement officers were limited to powers for the decision of suits of the nature mentioned in section 23 of Act X of 1859, or in Act XIV of 1863, and there was no authority given to Government to invest settlement officers with any other of the powers which were vested in a Collector by Act X of 1859, consequently an application under section 28 of that Act could not be entertained by a settlement officer. THAKOORBE v. The powers in section 8 of Act XIV of 1863 were the powers spoken of in section 150 of Act X of 1859, and were distinct from the powers given to a Collector by the second clause of section 162. Section 10 of Act XIV of 1863 enacted that if a suit for enhancement of rent be brought before any officers empowered under section 8 to hear the same, such suit should be heard and determined by such officer, and it was not provided that he might refer it for trial and decision to another. PUNCHUM SINGH v HOORMUTOONNISSA . . . 5 N. The purchaser pledged them with the I. P. L. and China Bank, and deposited with them the blank transfer. This Bank applied to the National Bank without producing a letter from the pledgor to register their lien, and on its refusal sold the shares to the plaintiff and delivered to him the transfer, also in blank. The plaintiff inserted his own name in the transfer, and requested the National Bank to register the shares in his name. In an action against the National Bank to recover the price of the shares,—Held that they were justified in refusing to register. Held also, that the plaintiff having received back from his vendors the price of his shares, had no cause of action KNOWLES v NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA 2 B. SHARES.—Transfer of shares—continued in the N. Bank at R4 premium per share (Signed) Sree Coomar Sircar, Broker." The bought note exactly corresponded. On the 23rd April plaintiff received from defendants the following—"With reference to the sixty N Bank shares sold by you, we shall thank you to send us three transfer deeds on Friday next, viz, two for twenty-five shares each, and one for ten shares." On the 26th April plaintiff sent to defendants sixty N Bank shares, some standing in the name of H, and some in the name of P, accompanied by transfers, all executed by P alone. These shares were all returned by the defendants, with the following memorandum—"The accompanying shares in the N Bank purchased for delivery to-day are not in order." Later on the same day, the 26th, plaintiff took personally to defendants the same sixty shares with transfers, executed some by H, and some by P, the name of the transferor corresponding number by number with the name in the shares. On this, as on the previous occasion, the name of the transferee was left blank. These shares were also rejected by the defendants as not in order. Plaintiff then, on April 27th, about 1 P M, had the shares registered in his own name, and, within two hours afterwards, sent them to the defendants with corresponding transfers, and with the following letter—"In compliance with request in your memorandum of the 23rd instant, I now send you the sixty shares N Bank, with three transfer deeds, and will feel obliged by your paying the amount to the bearer." The defendants declined to receive the shares, and they were re sold at a loss. The plaintiff never had any personal interest whatever in the shares, either on the 26th or 27th April, and was a mere benami holder for H and P. The articles of association of the N Bank required transfers to be in the form F appended to Act XIX of 1857. The transfers tendered by plaintiff were on each occasion in that form. The defendants swore that the "Friday, the 27th April, mentioned in their memorandum of the 23rd April, was inserted by accident, instead of Thursday," the 26th April, and that they consequently rejected the tender on the 27th. Held (1) that the contract as it stood on the bought and sold notes was a contract by the vendor (as in Stephen v. De Medina) that "in consideration of such a sum, I will execute any proper conveyance which you tender me." (2) That the memorandum of April 23rd, coupled with the fact of the vendor having made tenders of transfers of the shares, was evidence enough to show that the vendor bound himself to tender a proper conveyance to his vendees. (3) That the document of conveyance must be complete at the time of tender, or capable of being then made complete. (4) The transfers, with a blank for the name of the transferee, were incomplete and insufficient, the vendor showing no authority from H. and P. (5) That the Court below must deal with the question of fact, whether or no the mention of Friday, the 27th, instead of Thursday, the 26th, was a mistake, and, semble, that, if the defendants had received the blank transfers, and acted upon them, the waiver would have rendered them complete.

5. ———— Equitable assignment of right to sue.—Readiness and willingness to deliver.—Tender.—Constructive tender—A contract for the delivery of shares at a future day is a contract that can be assigned in equity, and the assignee of such a contract can, in his own name, maintain a suit to recover damages for its breach in the Civil Courts in India. In such a suit the plaintiff would be subject to any equities that might subsist between his assignor and the defendant. In order to support an allegation of readiness and willingness to deliver, an actual tender is not in all cases necessary, e.g., a tender will be dispensed with where the defendant has refused to perform the contract, or where, on the day for the performance of it, he has absconded, and, having closed his place of business, has left no agent or other person to represent him. DAYABHAI DIPCHAND v DULLABHARAM DAYARAM. tered ship in Calcutta—Merchant Shipping Act, ss. 53, 55—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court—Execution of Small Cause Court decree—Form of transfer to purchaser—A, not a British subject, contracted with B, a British subject, for the purchase of a ship which was registered in the port of Calcutta in the name of C (also a British subject). A and B entered into the contract as if both had been British subjects. Held that, on the evidence, the parties contracted with reference to the Merchant Shipping Act, and that the intention was that a title under that Act should be given. Held also, that, although it turned out that A's nationality prevented the possibility of his being registered as owner, this did not affect the liability taken upon himself by B to have himself put on the register as owner, or his liability to put A in a position to have a change of ownership noted in the register under section 53 of the Merchant Shipping Act. Held further, that B, not having had himself put on the register as owner, and not having put A in a position to have a change of ownership noted under section 53, and B having declined to take any further steps towards attaining either of these objects, A was entitled, although he had got possession of the ship, to rescind the contract, and to recover back a portion of the purchase-money which he had paid, and also to recover damages for the breach of contract. The Calcutta Court of Small Causes had power to seize and sell a vessel in execution of a decree of that Court, and the bailiff who sells the vessel is the person who ought to execute the bill of sale to the purchaser. A British ship having, in execution of a decree of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes, been sold to a person qualified to be the owner of a British ship.—Held that it was necessary that the transfer to the purchaser should be by bill of sale as prescribed in section 55 of the Merchant Shipping Act, and the mere sale and delivery to the purchaser did not pass a title to him. ESAU AHMED v JASSIM BINSAFF

SHIPMENTS.

1. ———— Consignment of goods—Bills of exchange—Presumption of payment of—Sale of goods—The plaintiffs in London and the defendant in Calcutta had dealings, which consisted in the defendant shipping jute cuttings and rejections to the plaintiffs in certain quantities, and within certain limits as to price, the defendant drawing bills on the plaintiffs in respect of such goods, which the plaintiffs accepted. The plaintiffs alleged that there was an agreement between them and the defendant, that in case of shipments in excess of the limits given by the plaintiffs, they should at their option receive the goods on their own account, or treat them as consignments on account of the defendant, but the defendant denied there was any such arrangement. The defendant made several shipments in excess of the plaintiffs' limits, and the plaintiffs treated them as consignments on the defendant's account, selling them on defendant's account and forwarding him account sales, and drawing bills on the defendant for any balance due to them in the transactions, which bills the defendant refused to pay. In an action brought by the plaintiffs for the balance due to them from the defendant in respect of the shipments which had been treated by the plaintiffs as consignments in the defendant's account, the defendant admitted he had sold the bills and received the money for them, they were produced by the plaintiffs, the acceptors. Held that the bills being produced by the acceptors after due date, and the defendant having received a notice of dishonour, and no demand for payment of the bills, the presumption was that they had been paid by the plaintiffs. In exercising their option of treating shipments in excess of their limits as on their own account or as consignments on account of the defendant, the plaintiffs were entitled to treat each shipment separately, and were not compelled to decide on an average of the shipments taken all together. SHEARMAN v FLEMING

2. ———— Bills of lading fraudulently signed—Title of endorsees for value against holder of mate's receipts who has not paid.—The plaintiffs agreed with the defendant K M to purchase and ship cotton on account of K M, and to retain the mate's receipts for the cotton so shipped until the purchase-money should be paid by K M. Under this agreement the plaintiffs shipped 609 bales on board the Teresa. Before the greater part of the 609 bales had been shipped, and before paying for the same, K M, without production of the mate's receipts, induced the master of the ship to sign bills of lading for the said 609 bales, and endorsed over the bills of lading for 310 of such bales to J C & Co, bonâ fide endorsees for value without notice. In a contest between the plaintiffs, holders of the mate's receipts, and J C & Co, endorsees for value of the bills of lading of the said 310 bales, it was held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the possession of the 310 bales to the exclusion of J C & Co. RAJARAM GOVINDRAM v BROWN

The next flood swung both ships, and the T fouled the A, damaging her, and causing her to part her cables, in consequence of which she suffered further damage from subsequent collisions. The owners of the A sued the T for the whole damage done. The defence was that the promovents, by adopting certain precautions, might have prevented the accident, that the T being in charge of the port authorities was not liable, and that no care or skill on her part could have prevented the accident. The T did not allege a liability of any of the vessels subsequently collided with. Held that liability for damages occasioned by collision rests, primâ facie, on the colliding vessel. That a ship in port is bound to be prepared for such exigencies only as might be expected to arise from the circumstances she knew to surround her, that is, a ship is protected by the port rules from liability for damage only when it is due to the acts or omissions of the officials in charge of her. Held also, that the ship is liable for all the consequences occasioned by an accident that results from any defect in her equipment, or want of care or skill of her crew, &c.

IN THE MATTER OF THE "THALATTA"

[Bourke, Ad., 1

Held on appeal, that an accident to the gear of a ship does not of itself alone render her liable for damages for a collision of which it is a remote occasion, and that a ship at anchor in the port should keep a look-out, and be ready to take all reasonable means for her own safety in an emergency. THE "THALATTA" v THE "ANNE"

3. ———— Liability of ship for fault of pilot — Port Rules, 1856. — Act XXII of 1855 — The ship H, in charge of a pilot (acting as harbour-master), when proceeding across the bow of the ship I S, which was at anchor, to take up a clear mooring, came into collision with and slightly damaged her, and this suit was for the damage so occasioned. Both sides relied on Act XXII of 1855 and the Port Rules of 1856, the plaintiff contending that the officer in charge was not such officer as the said Act and Rules referred to, and the defendant that he was. The suit was dismissed with costs. Held that a ship is primâ facie liable for damages occasioned by a collision resulting from an error in judgment of the officer in charge of her. Held also, that a vessel is exempted from liability for the fault of a pilot in charge of her, — first, where a master is authorised to employ a pilot, and is exempted from responsibility if he elects to do so, and, secondly, where the employment of a pilot is compulsory, and the owners of the vessel so employing him are relieved from responsibility for his misconduct: that the legislation regarding the employment of pilots and other officers in the port of Calcutta is contained in Act XXII of 1855 and the Port Rules of 1856 that where no special requisition is made by the port authorities, under Rules 2 and 7, a ship may move at her discretion in the port and that it is unlawful, under section 12 of Act XXII of 1855, to moor a vessel in the port without having a port officer on board to take command of the ship. 5. ———— Moving vessel in harbour — Act XXII of 1855 — Negligence of pilots — Bombay Harbour Rules — Lights on vessels. — Duty to carry or show — The taking of a steam-vessel in a trial trip from Mazagon to the sea and back again is a moving of such vessel within the meaning of section 12 of Act XXII of 1855. For such a trip, therefore, the employment of a pilot is compulsory. Where the employment of a pilot is compulsory on board a vessel, and such pilot being on board, an accident happens through negligence in the management of the vessel, it lies upon the owners, in order to exempt themselves from liability, to show that the negligence causing the accident was that of the pilot. If such negligence is partly that of the master or crew and partly that of the pilot, the owners are not exempted from liability. If it be proved on the part of the owners that the pilot was in fault, and there is no sufficient proof that the master or crew were also in fault, in any particular which contributed, or may have contributed, to the accident, the owners will have relieved themselves of the burden of proof which the law casts upon them. Rules of Bombay harbour with regard to the showing of lights by vessels in the harbour considered. Independently of special regulation or legislation, there is no general obligation by maritime law on sailing vessels, either under way or at anchor, to carry a light throughout the night, although, for the sake of avoiding a misfortune, it may under particular circumstances become their duty to carry or show a light. Although that is so, yet the Court will go some way to treat the dark boat as the wrong-doer, and if a vessel be either under way or at anchor at night in a channel, fair way, or ordinary track or path of other vessels, she is bound by general maritime law either to carry or show a light in order to indicate her position when other vessels are approaching her, and in sufficient time to enable them to avoid her. MUHAMMAD YUSUF v PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY

The master, who had been engaged at Singapore, then brought a suit on the Admiralty Side of the High Court, to recover out of the surplus proceeds of the ship his wages up to the time when he could return to Singapore, and his passage-money to that port. 1. ————— Offence of using unlicensed slaughter house.—Beng. Act VII of 1865, s 7—Slaughter house license—Transfer of slaughter house—R was fined by the Deputy Magistrate for using an unlicensed slaughter house. He subsequently gave an ijara or lease to A to carry on the business. R was prosecuted again for evading the law by “slaughtering cattle or allowing cattle to be slaughtered” without a license. He was fined Rs200 by the Deputy Magistrate. On appeal to the Sessions Judge he was acquitted. On the motion of the Municipal Commissioners for a rule to set aside the order of the Sessions Judge, it was held (per JACKSON, J) that R, by giving a lease to A, had parted with his interest, and had ceased to have any power to allow or disallow the slaughtering of cattle, that section 7 provides penalties only, and does not describe an offence or relate to a conviction. It is quite another question whether the act itself is an offence irrespective of section 7, and whether R could be dealt with as an abettor. Per MITTER, J (dissenting)—The Judge has found that the lease was given by R with the avowed object of continuing the slaughter house, and admittedly for the express purpose of evading the law, the case, therefore, falls within the express words of the section, “or allows cattle to be slaughtered.” IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF THE MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS FOR THE SUBURBS OF CALCUTTA

SLAVERY.

————— Act V of 1843.—Mahomedan law—Succession—Will—Emancipated slaves—Assuming that, by the willa rule of the Mahomedan law, the heirs of the master who emancipates a slave are entitled to the property of which the emancipated slave dies possessed to the exclusion of his natural heirs, the effect of section 3, Act V of 1843, which enacts “that no person who may have acquired property by inheritance shall be dispossessed or prevented from taking possession thereof on the ground that the person from whom the property may have been derived was a slave,” is to abrogate the rule of the Mahomedan law, and to secure the succession of the heirs of the emancipated slave, as if he had never been a slave. The provisions of the Act apply not only where the person whose property is claimed has been emancipated after the passing of the Act, but also where he has been emancipated before its passing. The exclusion of the natural heirs of an emancipated slave in favour of the heirs of his emancipator, is a disability arising out of the status of slavery similar in its nature to the exclusion, under the Mahomedan law, of the natural heirs of an emancipated slave by a master or his heirs; and since the general scope and object of Act V of 1843 is to remove all such disabilities, the Civil Courts are bound, in construing it, to give it the widest remedial application which its language permits, and cannot, consequently, limit it to those cases only in which the person from whom property is inherited was a slave at the time of his death, when the words of the statute allow of its being applied to the property of any one who had at any time been a slave. UJMUDDIN KHAN v ZIA-UL-NISSA BEGUM

Slavery is a condition which admits of degrees, and a person is treated as a slave if another asserts an absolute right to restrain his personal liberty, and to dispose of his labour against his will, unless that right is conferred by law, as in the case of a parent, or guardian, or a jailor. *QUEEN v. The amount of both claims was within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court, but the pecuniary claim in each case was cognisable by the District Munsif on the Small Cause Court side. Held that the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. ARUNACHELLAM CHETTY v GANGATHARAM AIYAN . . . 5 Mad., 287

9. ——— Suit for interest on bond for more than Rs 500 — Where a suit was brought for interest amounting to less than Rs 500, due upon a bond for Rs 1,000, not then payable, — Held that a Court of Small Causes had jurisdiction to try the case, the plaintiff having had a separate and complete cause of action upon the bond entitling him to recover the annual interest as it accrued due. 88. ————— Suit to recover a share of money recovered by co-plaintiff under a decree.—Act XI of 1865 (Mofussil Small Cause Courts Act), s. 6—Held that a suit to recover a share of money which had been recovered by a co-plaintiff under a decree, was a claim for money due on a contract, within the meaning of section 6 of the Mofussil Small Cause Courts Act (XI of 1865), and was therefore a suit of the nature cognisable by a Court of Small Causes, in which, under section 586 of the Civil Procedure Code, no second appeal could lie. DEBI DAS v. 90. ————— Agency.—Recovery on joint decree—Plaintiff and defendant having been co-sharers in a decree in which the respective shares of the decree-holders were definitely fixed, defendant amicably received from the judgment-debtor his own share and plaintiff's share on her behalf. The latter brought the present suit to recover the same from defendant, whose plea was that the amount had been paid to the plaintiff. Held that if defendant acted as agent of the plaintiff, there was a contract implied between them that the former would recover what was due from the latter, and pay it over or account for it to her, and that therefore the case came within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. Held that as the Subordinate Judge before whom the case came in appeal was also Small Cause Court Judge, he might have dealt with the case without referring the above point for the decision of the High Court. SHUMBOONATH MOZOOMDAR v. Accordingly where the plaintiffs, who were co members with the defendants of a division of a caste, and as such, tenants-in-common with them of certain cooking vessels of less than Rs500 in value, were excluded by the defendants from possession and common use of the vessels, and sought for a declaration that the plaintiffs and the defendants were equally entitled to the use of the said vessels, and for restoration of the same to some third person who should hold them to the use of the plaintiffs and defendants,—Held that the suit was not a suit for a declaratory decree, but for the recovery of property within the meaning of the Small Cause Court Act (XI of 1865), and as such, was exclusively triable by a Small Cause Court. A obtained a decree against B for the amount of the loan and attached the buffaloes in execution. This attachment was set aside at the instance of C, who purchased the buffaloes from B after the date of the ikrar given by B to A. A sued C (making B a party) in the Small Cause Court, praying for the sale of the buffaloes pledged to him by B, or, in default of that, for the sum due to him. Held that such a suit was not a suit within section 6, Act XI of 1865, to recover personal property, or the value of personal property, and was not cognisable by the Small Cause Court. RAM GOPAL SHAH v. 203. ——— Suit involving question of partnership account—A, B, and C, the joint owners of an estate, sued their tenant in the Munsif's Court for rent, the tenant defeated the suit by proving payment of the entire rent to B. A then brought a suit in the Small Cause Court against B for damages equal in amount to the one third of rent due to him and the costs incurred by him and awarded against him in the rent-suit in the Munsif's Court. B. pleaded that he had expended the share of rent due to A for the benefit of the joint estate, and that A. had collected the rents of other mehals belonging to the joint estate, and had not accounted for such rents. Held that the suit being one which involved questions of partnership account between the joint proprietors of an undivided estate, could not be entertained in a Court of Small Causes. RAMTONU ACHARJEE v. The landholder, to whom G owed rent for the land, sued G and S for the amount of the rent, on the ground that under section 56 of the N-W P Rent Act the produce of the land was hypothecated for the rent. Held that the defendants could only be held responsible ex delicto, and the suit was therefore one for damages, and, the amount claimed being under Rs500, one cognisable in a Court of Small Causes. SHIBBA v. Ultimately D, ignoring such payment, recovered the rent from B. by a separate suit in which no plea of payment was raised, and the latter again recovered his due from plaintiff by a separate suit. Held that an action was not maintainable in the Small Cause Court against the zemindar defendant D. Held that, in the absence of any authority from B to plaintiff to set off his payment to D. against the rent due to B., the Collector had no jurisdiction to try whether B. owed the plaintiff a sum equal to the rent, and that the Judge of the Small Cause Court was competent to try whether the plaintiff did pay money for the use of B at B's request, and, if so, to give plaintiff a decree for the same. DEANUT MUNDUL v. A previous suit brought by the plaintiff, under Act X of 1859, had been therefore dismissed, and no oral evidence was admitted to prove the terms of the pottah and kabuliat. Held, the suit on the bond was properly cognisable by the Small Cause Court as a simple debt due under the bond. It was clearly not for rent, nor was it an abwab or illegal cess, whether it was nuzzur or salami was immaterial. DINANATH MOOKERJEE v. DEBNATH MULLICK

—A suit to recover arrears of rent on a tahood kist bundi, under which defendant had been appointed a tahsildar to collect rents, having been filed before the Munsif, it was returned as being cognisable by the Court of Small Causes. The Judge of the latter Court, seeing that the instalment-bond on which the suit was brought was exactly in the form of a kabuhat, and that the defendant was in possession of the land for which the rent was claimed, referred the question of jurisdiction to the High Court, which held that the money which the defendant contracted to pay being rent, could not be sued for under Act XI of 1865. PEARRE MOHUN ROY CHOWDHRY v. 222. ————— Suit for rent where there is no contract to pay it—A suit was brought in the Small Cause Court by a zemindar against a ryot for arrears of rent. The plaintiff alleged that he had tendered pottahs which the defendant was bound to accept, and the defendant alleged that the rent specified was such that he was not bound to accept the pottahs. Held that the suit was not cognisable by a Court of Small Causes, there being no contract between the parties for the payment of rent. VENKATACHALA REDDIAR v. The then zemindar and his successors continued the remissions, always, however, entering the faisal rates in the pottahs and setting down the remissions as munasib. In 1861 the plaintiff became lessee of the zemindari, and in 1862, pursuant to notice, he tendered pottahs for Fasli 1272 to the defendant and the ryots at the faisal rates. Held, first, that the plaintiff was not precluded from rais-

Plaintiff therefore rightly brought his suit for damages, and not for rent, and the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to entertain it. But as the Court rejected the suit as being substantially one for rent, its order was set aside, and the suit ordered to be restored to the file of that Court. BHOOBUN MOHUN BOSE v. 227. ————— Damages on account of rent.—Suit for use and occupation—Trespass.—Ejectment.—Mesne profits.—The plaintiff, alleging that the defendant, without her permission, removed a lock placed by her on her house and took possession of it, sued in a Court of Small Causes for "damages on account of rent" of which she was thus deprived. The Court, regarding the suit as one for use and occupation, made a decree in favour of the plaintiff. Held that the suit was not rightly regarded as one for use and occupation, for the claim was not based on any contract, express or implied, it should have been regarded as an action of trespass, brought to try a question of title,—an action in which the Court of Small Causes had no jurisdiction. The plaintiff's proper remedy was by an action of ejectment in the ordinary Civil Courts, to which, if he chose, he could add a claim for mesne profits for the period during which the defendant had been in occupation. The decree of the Court of Small Causes was, accordingly, annulled. JAMNADAS v. BAI SHIVKOR . I. L. R., 5 Bom., 572

228. ————— "Damages on account of rent."—Suit for use and occupation—Trespass—Ejectment.—Mesne profits.—The plaintiff obtained a decree declaring him entitled to a certain house. He thereupon gave to the defendant, who was in occupation, notice to pay him rent, and on default of such payment he sued the defendant in the Court of Small Causes to recover "damages on account of rent." Held that the suit was not maintainable in a Court of Small Causes, which could not be used as a medium for ejecting, by indirect means, a person in possession of immovable property. Held, also, that the plaintiff's suit was only maintainable as a suit for damages on account of trespass, and in such a suit it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove possession prior to the trespass, or to have obtained a decree in ejectment which would relate back to the date of the trespass. The plaintiff had obtained nothing more than a decree declaring him to be the owner of the house, but this did not necessarily import a right to immediate possession, nor could the plaintiff be allowed to derive from it all the benefits which he might derive from a decree in ejectment. KALIDAS v VALLABEDAS I. 232. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 295—Suit for refund of proceeds of execution sale—S. and L. held mortgage-bonds executed in their favour by the same person S's bond was dated the 16th June 1882, and was registered, the registration being compulsory, L's bond was of prior date, the 30th December 1880, and was not registered, the registration being optional. Both instituted suits on their bonds against the obligor, and obtained decrees for sale of the property, the decrees being passed on the same day. The property was attached in execution of both decrees on the 14th August 1882. The sale-proceeds were divided by the Court executing the decrees equally between the parties by an order dated the 1st May 1883, notwithstanding that S. claimed the whole on the ground that he was an incumbrancer under a decree passed on a registered instrument, and therefore entitled to priority. The zemindar brought a suit for arrears of rent of the talook against the defendant, obtained a decree, and in execution of that decree sold the tenure. The proceeds of the sale, after satisfying the zemindar's decree, were taken by the defendant, and the plaintiff instituted the present suit to recover an 8-anna share thereof. Held that such a suit was not cognisable by a Small Cause Court. *Mata Prasad v. The remaining heirs opposed the claim in regard to rehalallah, which they said the plaintiffs had no right to collect, and which could only be collected by the mutwahi appointed by the deceased manager, urging that if the Court did not admit the appointment of the mutwahi, it would have to decide whether collections should be made by the heirs in equal shares or in shares allowed by the Mahomedan law. Held that the suit ought not to be entertained by the Court of Small Causes. KOREEM BUX v. The facts not being disputed, the Judge may grant a new trial as to what amount of damages were sustained, and in determining that question, he may alter his opinion as to the principle on which damages ought to be assessed, and upon the new trial assess them on the proper principle. A question of law arising on an application for a new trial, was a question which might be referred to the High Court for its opinion as a question within the meaning of section 1, Act X of 1867, arising at any point in the proceedings previous to the hearing of a suit. Consequently, the Government Resolution No 2133, of the 3rd of April 1878, investing the Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Ahmedabad with powers, under the said chapter, to adjudicate in insolvency matters, was ultra vires and invalid. LALLU GANESH v. Held, in a suit brought in respect of the same damages for the full amount due to them, that the plaintiffs were not precluded, by their having abandoned the excess in the former suit, from recovering the full amount sued for. 5. ———— Splitting cause of action.— Act IX of 1850, s 34—The defendant, as broker for the plaintiffs, guaranteed all transactions entered into by the plaintiffs with native firms through the defendant. Some of these native firms, in respect of such transactions, became indebted to the plain- tiffs, and the defendant wrote to the plaintiffs re- questing them to sue such defaulting firms. The plaintiffs accordingly sued six of such firms, and sent a letter to the defendant claiming from him pay- ment of the taxed costs incurred in all the suits, amounting to Rs. 7,553-10-6. The defendant having failed to pay, the plaintiffs sued him in the Small Cause Court, to recover payment of the taxed costs incurred in one of the suits, amounting to Rs. 433. The bill was accepted by the defendant, and, when presented for payment, was dishonoured. The bill was paid for honour by the attorney of the plaintiffs. The goods arrived, and (the defendant having refused to pay the bill) were sold by the plaintiffs, after notice to the defendant, at his risk, and realised R1,655-15-4. The plaintiffs refused to hold a survey on the goods unless the defendant paid the amount of the acceptance. The plaintiffs sued the defendant in the Small Cause Court for the amount of his acceptance, giving him credit for the proceeds of the goods, and abandoning the excess. Held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to do so, as the claim on the bill was not brought within the jurisdiction of that Court by payment or admitted set-off. SHORTT v. ABDUL RAHMAN

10. ———— Part payment—Set-off—Suit for balance of account.—The plaintiffs advanced R15,000 against the defendant's grain consigned to Hong-Kong, to be there sold on his account by the plaintiffs' agents. The plaintiffs subsequently gave credit to the defendant for R14,115-3-3, alleged to have been received by them as the proceeds of the sale, and sued him for the balance in the Bombay Small Cause Court, abandoning the excess so as to bring the claim within the Court's extended jurisdiction of R1,000. The defendant disputed the correctness of the account sales forwarded by the agents at Hong-Kong, and contended that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the case. The Judge, subject to the opinion of the High Court upon the facts as stated, struck the case out of the list for want of jurisdiction. Held that, as both the plaintiffs and the defendant were bound, by the nature of the transaction, to have the proceeds of the sale applied to satisfy the advance made by the plaintiffs to the defendant, the receipt by the plaintiffs of the amount, for which they gave credit in their particulars of demand, was in the nature of a part payment; and that the suit was, therefore, on a balance of account, and within the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes. *EWART, LATHAM, & Co., v. The plaintiff alleged that he had purchased the premises in question in 1870 from one N., to whom the defendant had mortgaged them in 1866 with power of sale. The plaintiff produced the deed of mortgage to N., and the conveyance to himself. It was admitted on his behalf that he had never received any rent from the defendant, and never had manual possession of the premises occupied by him. But the plaintiff produced a writing of attornment, dated April 1873, passed to him by the defendant, whereby the latter acknowledged that he was occupying the premises in question as the plaintiff's tenant, and agreed to pay rent for the same at Rs. 25 a month. His defence was that the mortgage, the sale, and the writing of attornment were all merely colourable, executed for the purpose of defeating his creditors and screening the property from execution, that no money had passed between the parties; that the defendant had never been out of possession, and that the plaintiff now required the Court to assist him in turning his own wrong to his own advantage. At the hearing in the Court of Small Causes the defendant proposed to prove the above facts, and submitted that, under the circumstances, a bona fide question of title was raised which ousted the jurisdiction conferred on the Court by section 91. The Court, however, refused to receive the evidence, and held that it had jurisdiction. On reference to the High Court,—Held that the defendant was entitled to set up the defence which he had, and that it ousted the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes to proceed further with the action—inasmuch as such defence raised a question of adverse title, which, in suits under section 91 of Act IX, 1850, that Court had not jurisdiction to decide. LUCKMIDAS KHEMJI v. The defendant admitted the tenancy, but contended that he held under an unexpired lease for four years. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes was of opinion that a question of title was involved, and he dismissed the case on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to hear it. 2. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE

(a) GENERAL CASES

The practice and procedure of the Presidency Small Cause Courts is so different now from what it was under the former Acts IX of 1850 and XXVI of 1864, that most of the cases decided under those Acts have become useless as precedents. The procedure is now governed by Act XV of 1882 by which a great portion of the Civil Procedure Code has been extended to these Courts.

24. ———— Dismissal of suit for want of jurisdiction.—Costs.—Form of decree.—Where a plea to the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Courts established under Act IX of 1850 is successful, the judgment ought to be one dismissing the suit. But whatever the form, it should be stated that the suit abates or is dismissed "for want of jurisdiction." In such a case the Court has power to award costs to the defendant. FRECK v. HARLEY

In such a case it would be open to the defendant to apply to set aside such ex parte order, and the sufficiency of the grounds of the application would be a question for the discretion of the Judge. SUJB CHUNDER MULLICK v. If on hearing both parties the Court thinks further inquiry necessary, it can of course make such inquiry in such manner as seems most fit to it. When new trials are moved for on allegation of facts, it would be very convenient that a practice should be introduced of requiring the facts to be stated by affidavit, and in like manner the answer to be supported by affidavit. *MODHOOSQODUN KOONDOD v. If such party do not deposit the security "forthwith," he must be taken to submit to the judgment of the Small Cause Court. Where, however, a case was sent up without security for costs being deposited, and before the case was heard the plaintiffs tendered a sum as security, which the Judge refused to accept as being too late, the High Court, on the sum being deposited, and it appearing that the defendant would not be prejudiced by such a course, allowed the case to be heard. *FORNARO v. SMALL CAUSE COURT, RANGOON.

1. —Establishment of.—Act XXI of 1863.—Act XI of 1865—Local Government.—Act XXI of 1863, after establishing Recorders' Courts in British Burma, and fixing the limits of their jurisdiction, enacted by section 10 that, "save as in this Act provided, no Court other than the Recorder's Court shall have or exercise any civil jurisdiction whatever within the limits for the time being fixed as aforesaid." Act XI of 1865, after declaring that the words "Local Government" should denote "the person authorised to administer the Executive Government in such part," enacted by section 3 that the Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, constitute Courts of Small Causes under that Act at any place within the territories under such Government. By section 3 the Judge of such Small Cause Court was to be appointed by the Local Government. Act XI of 1865 did not repeal section 10 of Act XXI of 1863. By notification dated 1st September 1869, the Governor General appointed a Judge of the Small Cause Court at Rangoon, extended the provisions of Act III of 1864 to British Burma, and invested the Chief Commissioner of British Burma with the powers conferred on a Local Government by that Act. By notification of 2nd October 1869, the Governor General in Council sanctioned the establishment of a Court of Small Causes in Rangoon under section 3, Act XI of 1865, extended the jurisdiction of the said Court to an amount not exceeding Rs. 1,000 and notified that the territorial jurisdiction would be co-extensive with that of the existing Small Cause Court jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court at Rangoon. Held that the Small Cause Court at Rangoon

2. — Appeal from settlement proceedings.—Notification of the Lieutenant-Governor of the 7th May 1872—Act XXXVII of 1855, s. 2—The officers appointed under section 2 of Act XXXVII of 1855, and not the settlement officers as such, are the persons empowered to try such suits as are referred to by Regulation III of 1872, section 5, and to certify issues to the Civil Courts under that section. The notification of the Lieutenant-Governor, dated the 7th May 1872, being still in force, the settlement officers have no power to deal with such cases. Where a settlement officer referred certain issues to a Deputy Commissioner as a Civil Court under Regulation III of 1872, section 5, to be dealt with by him, and he gave a decision thereon and certified the same to the settlement officer, and it appeared that the Deputy Commissioner had previously been invested with the powers of a settlement officer, and the proceedings were subsequently returned to him for the settlement record to be amended in conformity with his findings, he being thoroughly conversant with all the facts of the case, and he accordingly passed an order and amended the record defining the areas to which the plaintiffs were entitled. On appeal against that order,—Held that so far as he was acting as a Civil Court, the Deputy Commissioner had no jurisdiction to try the issues sent him or deal with the case, but that, inasmuch as he was vested with the powers of a settlement officer, and was fully competent as such to deal with the case himself, seeing that the parties could not in any way be prejudiced by the irregularity committed, the High Court would not interfere to set aside the order. Held also that, treating the action of the Deputy Commissioner as that of a settlement officer, the High Court had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. The plaintiffs applied in execution to recover the total amount. The application was rejected by the Subordinate Judge on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction under section 24 of Act XIV of 1869. On appeal, the District Judge made an order confirming the decision of the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiffs filed a second appeal in the High Court. Held that no second appeal lay to the High Court from such an order. The subject-matter of the suit was within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge, and his jurisdiction continued, whatever might be the result of the suit, in all such matters in the suit as were within his cognisance, amongst which were matters in execution in the suit. The mere circumstance that the amount actually due by process of accumulation exceeded Rs5,000 could not oust him from the jurisdiction he hitherto had over the suit. *SHAMRAV PANDORI v. An application was made to a District Munsif on the 16th July 1877 to issue execution on a decree dated 6th November 1869, obtained on a bond registered under section 53 of the Registration Act of 1866. He made an order refusing execution, the decree being one passed, not in a regular suit, but in a summary suit, and governed by the period of limitation prescribed by article 166, schedule II, Act IX of 1871. On appeal the Subordinate Judge reversed the order of the Munsif, holding that article 167, schedule II of Act IX of 1871, applied. On application to the High Court,—Held that, as section 588 of Act X of 1877 provided that orders passed in appeal from orders under section 244 should be final, no second appeal lay. SURYA PRASAKA RAY v VAISYA SANNYASI RAZU

46. ——— Suit instituted in ordinary Civil Court though cognisable by Small Cause Court.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 586—Questions incidentally arising—Section 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure precludes a second appeal in a suit for damages under Rs500, although the suit has been instituted in the District Munsif's Court and not in a Court of Small Causes, and although a question of title has been raised by the defendant and decided. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—The question what is a suit of the nature cognisable in Courts of Small Causes within the meaning of section 586 of the Civil Procedure Code has reference to the mode of adjudication and not to the forum, and the fact that the suit is instituted in the District Munsif's Court and not in a Court of summary jurisdiction makes no difference for the purposes of that section. If the matter adjudicated on in a suit is only incidentally in issue or cognisable, the adjudication is final whether by a Court of concurrent or limited jurisdiction only for the purpose and object of that suit. MANAPPA MUDALI v MCCARTHY . . . I. 47. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 586—Where a suit, though one cognisable by a Small Cause Court, was instituted and dealt with in the ordinary Civil Courts, it was contended that a second appeal would lie. Held that no second appeal would lie. A small cause is such wherever it is instituted, and the nature of the cause not being variable in any way according to the Court in which it is brought, the circumstance that it has been instituted in an ordinary Civil Court and dealt with there, would not for that reason admit of a second appeal which in such a case is expressly excluded by section 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). KALIAN DAYAL v KALIAN NAREE . . . I. (b) ACCOUNT

48. ——— Suit for balance of account.—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 27—Suit in Civil Court in local jurisdiction of Small Cause Court.—Where a suit for a balance due on account of rents collected from the plaintiff's zemindaris by the defendant's father acting as agent of the plaintiffs for an amount under Rs500 was entertained by the Civil Court within the local jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court, a special appeal lay to the High Court,—section 27 of Act XXIII of 1861 only applying to a suit which is properly brought in a Civil Court, because there is no Small Cause Court having jurisdiction to try it. DYBCKEE NUNDUN SEN v MUDDEE MUTTY GOOPTA . I. (c) AWARD

51. ——— Suit on award.—Award dealing with matters not within cognisance of Small Cause Court.—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 27.—G and R referred to arbitration disputes between them regarding the partition of their paternal estate. The award found that a sum of Rs335 was due by G to R, and contained other provisions which could not be dealt with by a suit in a Small Cause Court,—Held that a suit to recover the money due under the award could not be brought in the Small Cause Court and that section 97, Act XXIII of 1861, therefore did not bar a special appeal. GAURI SAHAI v RAM SAHAI

(d) CONTRACT.

52. ——— Suit to recover collections from co-sharer.—Agreement to pay share to other co-sharers—A suit by a co-sharer to recover from the defendant collections which are in his charge and which he is under agreement to pay to the other co-sharers is a suit for due under a contract, and if less than Rs500 is cognisable by a Small Cause Court. *ALI AHMED v. 53. ——— Suit against agent for money.—Money received for plaintiff—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 27—In a suit to recover the balance, unaccounted for, of the plaintiff's money in the hands of the defendant, who had been employed as a law agent on a salary to conduct and look after the plaintiff's law suits and to receive and disburse moneys connected with such suits, it was held that the case might be brought under the terms "claim for money due under a contract" in Act XI of 1865, section 6, and that therefore under Act XXIII of 1861, section 27, a special appeal would not lie. *JOOGUL KISHORE ROY v. anna, and C and others of the remaining 6 annas B. and his family having occupied and enjoyed, to the exclusion of their co-shareholders, 54 bighas of the mouzah, failed to pay any rent in respect of such occupation. A instituted a suit against them (making C and the other holders of the six annas share defendants to the suit) to recover the sum of R412-8 as the sum justly due to him after making all proper deductions, including as well the share of the rent of the 54 bighas to which the 6 annas shareholders were entitled, as also the share which B and his family were entitled to retain as proprietors of a 1-anna share. Held that the facts showed an implied contract on the part of B and his family to pay to their co-shareholders whatever, upon taking an account, should appear to be due to them, and that, inasmuch as the total amount sought to be recovered in the suit by A, did not exceed R500, the suit was one which might have been brought in a Small Cause Court, and therefore the plaintiff had no right of second appeal to the High Court under section 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *ASMAN SINGH v. The decree-holder thereupon took out proceedings under section 204, Act VIII of 1859, had the surety arrested, and realised from him the amount due under the decree. The surety then brought an action to recover damages for illegal arrest, the sum claimed not exceeding R500. 87. — Suit for recovery of money stolen from Court.—Suit against Government—A sum of money was stolen from the Judge's Court of Tippera while A was the Nazim. A paid the amount to Government, and died, leaving B his heir. B sued Government for recovery of the amount paid by A, on the ground that as there was no negligence of A, and as the amount was under the custody of the guards of Government at the time of the theft, A was not responsible for the loss thereof. 97. ———— Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, s. 31, cl. 3—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 27.—The expression "or former year" in Regulation XVI of 1827, section 31, clause 3, did not mean the year immediately preceding the current year, but any previous year, and a suit for rent could have been brought before a revenue officer, when Act XI of 1865 was passed, and not before the Small Cause Courts constituted by that Act. A special appeal lay in a suit of this nature. KRISHNARAV RAMCHANDRA v. MANAJI BIN SAYAJI [11 Bom., 106]

98. ———— Suit for zemindari cess.—Suit for payment for use of land—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 27—Where the plaintiff claimed a sum of money under the name of a zemindari cess, but in point of fact what was claimed was claimed on account of the use of land,—Held that such a suit was a suit of a nature cognisable by a Small Cause Court under section 6, Act XI of 1865, and that a special appeal would not lie. BUCHOO CHOWBEY v. GHOROLAIT 4 N. W., 56

99. ———— Suit for Government assessment and local fund cess.—Suit for arrears of rent.—The defendant executed to the plaintiff in 1847 a mulgani kabuliat (i.e. one kabuliat corresponding to a lease at a fixed rental), agreeing to pay to the plaintiff R150 annually. At the date of the execution of the mulgani the Government assessment was R56-8-0, but in 1872 it was enhanced to R129-8-0, and a local-fund cess of R4-9-0 imposed in addition. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover from him the enhanced assessment and the cess. On appeal an objection was taken that, the amount claimed by the plaintiff being less than R500, the suit was cognisable by a Court of Small Causes, and that, therefore, there was no second appeal. Held that the suit might be regarded as one for arrears of rent at an increased rate, and, as such, was not cognisable by a Court of Small Causes. *BAHSHEETI v. In a suit brought by the former against the jotedar for the value of the portion last mentioned, the Court of first instance went into the question of the custom entitling to property so saved. 145. ————— Omission to consider evidence—Error in decision on the merits—Every Judge of a question of fact is bound to take into consideration all the allegations and proofs upon the record bearing upon that question, as well as the material presumptions arising therefrom, and to overlook them is a defect in law. But before such defect can constitute a good and valid ground of special appeal, it must be of such a character that it may have caused an error in the decision of the case on the merits. GUNE BISWAS v. SREEGOPAL PAUL CHOWDHRY 8 W. R., 395

146. ————— Decision of lower Court as to credit to be given to particular proofs—It is the province of the Court which has to decide issues of fact to determine the amount of credit to which each particular proof offered is entitled; and with the full exercise of its discretion in this respect by such Court, the High Court, as a Court of special appeal, is not at liberty to interfere. MUTHRA DOSS v. MAGH SINGH 2 N. W., 207

147. ————— Weight of reasons given for decision—No special appeal will lie on a ground relating merely to the weight of the reasons given by the lower Appellate Court for the conclusion arrived at. DOORGA CHURN SETT v. SHAMANUND GOSSAIN 12 W. R., 376

148. ————— Weight of evidence—Discretion of Court under Act XL of 1858.—Weight of evidence is not a point on which the High Court can interfere in special appeal, nor will it interfere with the discretion of the Judge in not allowing a person to represent a minor. DHOONDH BAHADOOR SINGH v. PRIAG SINGH [17 W. R., 314]

149. ————— Giving credit to evidence—Where the lower Appellate Court has dealt with the evidence on both sides, has weighed it and come to the conclusion that one side ought to be believed, the giving in the course of his observations a bad reason for believing it is not a ground of special appeal. *SHEO GOLAM SAHOY v. 151. ————— Ground for discrediting evidence found not to exist—Where it was found, in special appeal, that the main ground on which the lower Appellate Court had suspected the evidence for the plaintiff and given credence to the evidence for the defendant had no existence, the High Court ordered a reconsideration of the evidence. AMEERUN v. CHERAG ALI 24 W. R., 343
MACKENZIE v. JOWAHIR MAHTOON 25 W. R., 137

152. ————— Erroneous dealing with evidence—Whether or not a lower Appellate Court commits such an error in dealing with a case on the evidence before him as would make his conclusion on the facts bad in law, if he does not treat the evidence otherwise than reasonably, he gives no room for special appeal. MOHUR MAHTOON v. UMATUM 18 W. R., 499

153. ————— Improper mode of dealing with evidence—Remand—On special appeal it appearing that the Judge had dealt with the evidence in the case in an improper manner, it was pointed out where he had committed errors, and the case was remanded that he might pass a fresh decision upon it. *RAM DAS SAHA v. KOOLDEEPNARAIN SINGH v. RUMMON SINGH [22 W. R., 278]

155. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s 584—Grounds impugning findings of fact—Held by the Full Bench (PETHURAM, C. J., dissenting) that under section 584(c) of the Civil Procedure Code, it is competent for the High Court to entertain pleas in second appeals which impeach the findings of fact recorded by the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that such findings are conjectural, that they ignore the evidence, and that the Court has given no reasons for the conclusions at which it arrived. Where a lower Appellate Court has drawn strained or unreasonable conclusions from the evidence, or has discredited or disbelieved witnesses or documentary proof upon capricious or unsustainable grounds, or has stated no intelligible reasons for

arriving at its findings of fact, the High Court may take notice of all such matters in second appeal Futheema Begam v. Mohamed Ausur, 1 L R, 9 Cal, 309; Assanullah v. Hafiz Muhammad Ali, 1 L R, 10 Cal., 932, and Lal Mahomed Bepar v. Shoula Bewa, 11 C L R, 104, referred to Per PETHERAM, C J—The High Court is not at liberty in second appeal to look into the evidence in the cause for the purpose of ascertaining whether the lower Courts have found the facts correctly, inasmuch as no question of fact is included in the grounds of appeal allowed by section 584 of the Civil Procedure Code, and it would seem that the intention of the Legislature was that in small causes the findings of the lower Courts on questions of fact should be absolutely final. By "specified law" in clause (a) of section 584 is meant the statute law, and by "usage having the force of law" the common or customary law of the country or community, and the clause is confined to cases in which the lower Appellate Courts have either misconstrued a statute or written document, or have come to a wrong conclusion as to what is the customary law of the country or community with reference to questions at issue between the parties. Clause (b) can only refer to mistakes in law, and does not extend the operation of clause (a). The term "procedure" in clause (c) means the practice followed by the Courts in the trial of cases, and cannot be construed as including the mental process by which a Court comes to a conclusion upon a question of fact. Per MAHMOOD, J—That the Legislature, by framing section 574 of the Civil Procedure Code, intended to guard against such failure of justice as might arise from the defective or arbitrary exercise of the extensive powers possessed by the Court of first appeal in cases which, with reference to their nature, would be proper subjects of second appeal, and a judgment of a Court of first appeal which falls short of due compliance with the various clauses of section 574, is essentially defective, and may properly be made the subject of complaint in second appeal under section 584. Ramnaram v. Bhawam-din, Weekly Notes, All, 1882, p 104, and Sheoambar Singh v. Lallu Singh, Weekly Notes, All, 1882, p. 153, referred to. The word "procedure" in clause (c) of section 584 must be understood in its most generic sense, including all the rules contained in the Civil Procedure Code or any other law regulating the investigation of cases by the Civil Courts. When the Court of first appeal, after having entered into the merits of the case, has considered the evidence and adjudicated upon the merits in the manner required by section 574, the mere circumstance that the conclusions at which the Court has arrived are erroneous or opposed to the weight of evidence, will not justify interference in second appeal, even though such conclusions proceed upon an improper conception of the exact effect and bearing of the case upon the merits. On the other hand, when the Court of first appeal, while adjudicating with due compliance with the provisions of section 574, arrives at conclusions upon the merits ignoring any steps essential for justifying those conclusions, or where such conclusions are based upon evidence inadmissible by law, or proceed upon an erroneous view of the legal effect of any material part of the evidence, or are arrived at under a misconception either of the rules of evidence or of any other law, such conclusions, though they purport to be distinct findings of fact, would lay the judgment of the lower Appellate Court open to second appeal under clause (c) of section 584, so long as the error was substantial enough to have possibly affected the justice of the case upon the merits. NIVATH SINGH v. BHIKKI SINGH. BHIKKI SINGH v. NIVATH SINGH. I. L. R., 7 All., 649

156. —Finding on issue of fact remitted—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss 565, 566, 568—Held by the Full Bench (TYRRELL, J, dissenting) that the findings upon issues remanded by the High Court in second appeal cannot be challenged upon the evidence as in first appeals, but objections to these findings must be restricted to the limits within which the original pleas in second appeal are confined. Nivath Singh v. Bhikki Singh, 1 L R, 7 All., 649, referred to Per PETHERAM, C J, and TYRRELL, J—Sections 565 and 566 of the Civil Procedure Code are, as far as may be, incorporated in Chapter XLII of the Code relating to second appeals, and when the evidence for disposing of the real issues in the case has been taken and exists on the record, it is the duty of the High Court, on the hearing of a second appeal, to itself fix and determine such issues on the evidence on the record, and not to put the parties to the expense and delay involved by a remand. Per STRAIGHT, J—Section 587 of the Civil Procedure Code does not mean that the provisions of Chapter XLI relating to first appeals are to be applied indiscriminately or in their entirety to second appeals, and implies no warrant for the decision by the High Court of questions of fact in any shape or at any stage of a second appeal. Ramnaram v. Bhawam-din, Weekly Notes, All, 1882, p 104, and Sheoambar Singh v. Lallu Singh, Weekly Notes, All, 1882, p 153, referred to. Per TYRRELL, J—The jurisdiction of Courts of second appeal in respect of questions of fact is restricted, in so much as the appeal may not be entertained on "grounds" of fact, but under the circumstances of section 566 of the Code, no less than under the abnormal circumstances contemplated by the ruling of the Full Bench in Nivath Singh v. Bhikki Singh, I. L. R., 7 All., 649, the Court may take cognisance of omitted issues of fact, and must determine them if there be evidence upon the record sufficient for that purpose. In cases where the Court, still acting under section 566, has been obliged in the absence of evidence on the record to supplement the defect through the agency of the Court below, its jurisdiction in respect of such evidence does not become limited thereby or by reason only of the circumstance that the evidence is accompanied by a "finding" of the inferior Court,—the term "finding" being used in section 566 in its restricted sense of an answer to the proposition referred for inquiry, and not of an award or decision of the issue before the Court

BALKISHEN v JASODA KUTAR
[I. L. R., 7 Ail, 765]

157. — Findings of fact—Procedure of the High Court—Where the lower Appellate Court has clearly misapprehended what the evidence before it was, and has thus been led to discard or not give sufficient weight to important evidence, and to give weight to other evidence to which it is not entitled, and has thus been led not into any mere incidental mistake, but totally to misconceive the case, the High Court will interfere in second appeal, though it is not the ordinary course of procedure for it to interfere in such cases with any findings of fact which have been arrived at by the lower Appellate Court. FUTEHMA BEGUM v MAHOMED AUSUR. I. L. R., 9 Calc, 309

158. — Question of fact—Finding on evidence—The finding of a fact by the lower Appellate Court upon evidence, a portion of which was inadmissible, is not such a finding of fact as cannot be interfered with in special appeal. GURU DAS DEY v SAMBHNATH CHUCKERBUTTY. [3 B. L. R., A. C., 258]

159. — Giving undue weight to inadmissible evidence—Where the lower Appellate Court gave very great weight to evidence which ought not to have been treated as evidence between the parties, and this error materially affected his judgment throughout, the High Court in special appeal held that there had been a mis-trial, and remanded the case for re consideration. ROHEE LALL v DINDYAL LALL. 21 W. R., 257

160. — Error in law—Rejection of evidence—There is a material difference between a case in which a Judge has assigned one bad reason for believing or disbelieving a particular piece of evidence, while he has given one or more good reasons for the same belief or disbelief, or a case in which, putting this particular piece of evidence wholly aside, enough remains to support the judgment, and a case in which the essential question, or one of the essential questions to be decided rests upon the evidence believed or disbelieved regarded as of great value, or considered worthless, for a reason which is unsound and unsustainable. In the latter case an Appellate Court can interfere on special appeal. HURO PROSAD ROY v WOMATARA DEBEE

161. — Misdirection—Ground of special appeal—Error of law—The fact that the lower Appellate Court has misdirected itself as to the effect of evidence which has been admitted in a suit, is an error of law affording a good ground for a second appeal. RAMPROSAD DAS v RAJO KORE. 5 C. L. R., 94

162. — Disregard of evidence—Where the lower Appellate Court's judgment was not based on the whole evidence on the record (it having left some important evidence out of consideration), the judgment was set aside in special appeal, and the case remanded for re-trial. SHUNDHABUN MOHUNT v SHURUT CHUNDER ROY. MOHUN SINGH v JUGBUTTY KOORE
[24 W. R., 297]

163. — Disregard of evidence—Error in law—A complete disregard of evidence which, although not conclusive and an estoppel, is of such a nature that a judgment in opposition to it cannot be allowed to stand, amounts to an error in law. HEERA LALL GHOSE v KALLE DASS MOOKERJEE. 23 W. R., 65

ANUND CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v RUTNESSUR DOSS SEN. 25 W. R., 50

164. — Irregular dealing with evidence—Where an Appellate Court ignores the great body of evidence on the record and places reliance on what can be shown either to be no evidence at all, or which points almost exclusively the other way, and where it lays down, as positive dicta of law, points which are not law, the High Court would be justified in considering such proceedings as errors of law, notwithstanding that the Court below has ostensibly based its judgment on the evidence. ROOP NARAINEE KOORE v RESSAL TEWARREE. [24 W. R., 119]

165. — Improper dealing with evidence—In this case, departing from its general rule in special appeals not to disturb the finding of fact arrived at by the Court below, the High Court, seeing that, on the one hand, the Judge had misrepresented the effect of the evidence in some important particulars, and on the other hand omitted to notice facts very much in favour of the defendants, considered itself justified in saying that his mode of dealing with the appeal had led to material defects in the investigation of the case which had produced error in the decision on the merits. It accordingly reversed his judgment and remanded the case for re-trial. SHIBO SOONDUREE DOSSEE v CHUNDER KANT GHOSE. 21 W. R., 217

[23 W. R., 87]

166. ————— Improper and erroneous dealing with evidence—Error in law—The investigation of a case upon a portion of the evidence, excluding the other portion under a mistaken impression that it was not legal evidence but conjecture, is an investigation erroneous in law, and is likely to produce an error in the decision of the case on its merits. The mode in which evidence is to be dealt with discussed. MATHURA PANDEY v RAM RUCHA TEWARI. 3 B. L. R., A. C., 108: 11 W. R., 482

167. ————— Partial consideration of evidence—It is a ground for special appeal, if the Appellate Court disregards one side of a case, and turns its attention exclusively to the evidence on the other, but it is no error of law merely to pronounce no objection upon the evidence on the former side. DEO SURUN POORY v MAHOMED ISMAIL. 24 W. R., 300

168. ————— Ground for setting aside decision on facts—The lower Appellate Court has quite as much authority to decide upon facts as the Court of first instance, and the High Court is not at liberty to interfere with verdicts setting aside judgments of the Court of first instance, simply because such judgments are more detailed or even more satisfactory on the evidence. *DORBO CHUNDER ROY v. 172. ————— Finding as to genuineness of deed from copy put in evidence.—The finding of a lower Appellate Court pronouncing, on evidence, on the genuineness of a deed on the production of a copy (the original having been lost) is not open to interference in special appeal. BHUGWAN CHUNDER BANERJEE v DUKHINA DEBIA

174. ————— Use of probabilities against direct evidence—Where the lower Appellate Court merely on the appearance of a document discarded the evidence of witnesses who testified to the making and signing of it, the High Court reversed its decision, on the ground that probabilities which are useful as aids in considering the true value of direct evidence, can seldom be safely had recourse to alone for the purpose of entirely invalidating direct evidence. *LALLAH JHA v. 177. ————— Receipts for rent—Comparison of signatures—Credibility of evidence—In a suit for rent the defendant pleaded payment and put in evidence receipts for the rent claimed. The Court of first instance disbelieved this evidence and gave a decree for the plaintiff. The Judge on appeal compared the signature of the plaintiff on the receipts with his signature to a document not in evidence in the case, and reversed the decree and dismissed the suit. Held that the decision of the Judge, proceeding upon the point as to the credibility and weight of evidence, could not be objected to on special appeal. RAMSOONDER SIRCAR v KIS-TOBAG BAG. . . Marsh., 322 2 Hay, 421

178. ————— Receipts for rent—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 372—Error in investigation of case—In a suit for arrears of rent the defendant pleaded payment and filed receipts. The Collector distrusted the receipts, and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff, saying that, as to three of the receipts evidence had been given which he did not believe, and that with respect to the other receipts no evidence had been offered. The Judge on appeal reversed the decree, and gave a decree in favour of the defendant, expressing an opinion that the distrust of the evidence in support of the three receipts was without sufficient reason. Held that, with respect to the receipts in support of which no evidence had been offered, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the rents to which they applied, and that the finding of the Judge that such rents had been paid without any evidence having then been given of such payments was an "error in the investigation of the case" which had produced error in the decision of the case upon the merits, within section 372 of Act VIII of 1859, and was therefore ground of special appeal. MOHUN CHUNDER DHUR v KIDGE. . . Marsh., 381: 2 Hay, 419

181. ————— Misconstruction of document—Error on facts—Where the Court in recording the words of a document on which it relies puts one term for another, it is a misconstruction "affording ground for special appeal," but where for reasons given it places a particular boundary mark in a particular spot its decision, even though wrong on the facts, would not be a misconstruction unless incompatible with the wording of the document. KALEE CHURN PATTUR v CHUNDEE CHURN MUNDUL. . . 9 W. 182. ————— Question of fact—Erroneous use of admission by lower Courts—The High Court, in special appeal, interfered with the concurrent finding of the first Court and the lower Appellate Court on a finding of fact, where the decision turned entirely on the construction of a written admission which had been wrongly understood. *LALLA IMBIT LALL v. 198. ———— Omission to remind witness of former contrary statement—Reference to statement in judgment—When witnesses under examination make statements which are contrary to statements previously made by them, the Court ought to draw their attention to the contradiction, but an omission to do so does not make the judgment bad in law, because he has remarked on those contrary statements in his judgment. SHAM LALLALAS SHAMA v. 199. ———— Putting onus of proof on wrong party—Irregularity affecting merits—Error in law—A suit instituted in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen was transferred under section 6 of Act VIII of 1859, to the Court of the Munsif, who took further evidence, and decreed in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant appealed to the District Court, on the ground (amongst others) that part of the evidence had been taken by the Principal Sudder Ameen, and the District Judge reversed the Munsif's decree, not on this ground, but on the merits. The plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, objecting that the suit had been illegally decided by the Munsif, upon evidence recorded by the Principal Sudder Ameen, and that the onus of proving the bona fides of the transaction, which was the subject-matter of the suit, was thrown by the District Judge on the plaintiff, instead of on the defendant, who alleged the want of it. Held (1) that the Munsif's having used the evidence recorded by the Principal Sudder Ameen was only an irregularity which was waived by the plaintiffs not requiring the witnesses to be examined again, and proceeding with the suit, and producing other witnesses to be examined in support of his claim, and as this irregularity did not affect the merits of the case, the decree of the Munsif being in the plaintiff's favour, it was not a ground for reversing the decree on special appeal; (2) that the onus was not thrown by the Judge upon the plaintiff in its proper sense, and so as to be an error in law, as the Judge did not hold that the defendant was entitled to succeed without giving any evidence, unless the plaintiff disproved the allegation of the want of bona fides. NARANBHAI VEJIBHUKANDAS v. 203. ———— Refusal to admit secondary evidence of lost deed.—All that it would be right for the Court to require for the protection of the revenue in cases where a lost deed was shown not to have had a stamp, would be that the same money should be paid, before admitting secondary evidence, as would have to be paid if the deed itself were produced. SPECIAL OR SECOND APPEAL—continued5. OTHER ERRORS OF LAW OR PROCEDURE—continued.*(c) DISCRETION, EXERCISE OF, IN VARIOUS CASES.

222. ————— Order for security for costs.—Appeal struck off in default—Absence of error in law—When the Civil Procedure Code gives to a Court of regular appeal a discretionary power, and that discretionary power has been fairly exercised, it is no good ground of special appeal that a wiser exercise of the discretion would have led to different results. In a regular appeal the District Judge, at the instance of the respondent, on 26th March, called upon the appellant, who resided out of British territory, to show cause, within two days, why, under section 342 of Act VIII of 1859, he should not furnish security. The appellant appeared on the 13th of May, and filed a written statement that he owned land in Jhansi, and prayed that if the statement was denied, inquiry might be made. There was nothing to show that this statement was disputed. The Judge on the same day made the following order: "As I cannot say whether or no this is true, and am not aware of the terms under which land is held in Jhansi, if indeed the appellant holds any land there, the excuse cannot in its present form be accepted, nor can the respondent be exposed to risk while enquiries are pending. The appellant must file security within fourteen days or the appeal will be struck off." On 28th May the appellant produced certificates that he held maafi lands in Jhansi. The Judge not considering these to be security, after recording that no further order could be passed, struck off the appeal with costs. A special appeal having been admitted from the Judge's orders, the respondent objected that no special appeal would lie. Held, that the High Court ought not to interfere in special appeal merely on the ground that, in the exercise of the discretion given to the lower Appellate Court, another Court might have thought it unnecessary to call upon the appellant to furnish security. Held, also, that unless it could be shown that the investigation of either of the issues of fact touching the appellant's residence and property had been defective, or that there had been error in law, the High Court had no power to interfere in special appeal. Held, also, that if the appellant had, after the order of 26th March, come into Court without delay, or even on 13th May applied for an adjournment to enable him to put in proof that he held land in Jhansi, and been refused that permission, the Court would have interfered in special appeal. GOPAL KHUNDEE RAO v. 248. ——— Error in description of defendant as a minor.—Appeal by guardian treated as appeal by minor.—The father of a defendant filed an appeal from the judgment of the first Court, describing his son as a minor. It afterwards appeared that the defendant was not a minor, and the lower Appellate Court refused to pass an order, allowing the appeal by the father to stand as an appeal by the defendant. Held that the lower Appellate Court could, in the exercise of its discretion, allow the appeal to stand as an appeal by the defendant, but the High Court could not interfere with the order in special appeal. *SHAMA CHARAN GHOSE v. Where, however, a lower Appellate Court, directing certain persons to be made parties to the suit, erroneously remanded it under section 351 for the trial of a particular issue,—Held that, if the case went back under section 351, inasmuch as the error, by restricting the Court of first instance to that particular issue and thus leaving the finding of the lower Appellate Court on other portions of the case final, might have produced error in the lower Appellate Court's decision on the merits, the

265. ——— Irregularity in remanding case.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss 352, 354—Where a Judge, instead of remanding a case under section 352 of Act VIII of 1859, when the Munsif had not disposed of the case upon any preliminary point, ought to have disposed of it under section 354, keeping the case on his own file, and ordering the Munsif, after taking the necessary evidence and deciding any issue fixed by him, to send up his finding with the evidence to his Court, and then proceeding to try the case as an appeal,—Held that the irregularity was not one which affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, so as to justify interference with the Judge's decision in special appeal. GUNGA MONEE DOSSEE v. ISSUR CHUNDER SHAHA . 17 W. R., 465

266. ——— Error in trial of case—In a suit for a pottah, the Deputy Collector having failed to take the evidence of certain witnesses produced by the plaintiff for examination, the lower Appellate Court remanded the case with a view to the evidence being taken. This was done, and the case was re-tried by the Deputy Collector, who again dismissed the plaintiff. On appeal the decision was reversed. Held that the Judge may have been so far in error, in that while remanding the case he did not direct the lower Court to send the case back to him with the additional evidence, yet, as the error did not interfere with the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court (the evidence having been before the Judge in appeal), it would not warrant interference with his decision in special appeal. NUSSEROODDEEN HOSSEIN CHOWDHRY v. The defendants denied that the plaintiffs were the heirs of the deceased obligee and contended that they should have obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 before suing. There being good reason to doubt the validity of the title of the plaintiffs, the lower Appellate Court postponed the decision of the case for a certain time in order to give the plaintiffs an opportunity of obtaining such certificate. 325. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss 565, 566—Determination of case by High Court.—In a suit for pre-emption, based on the wazib-ul-urz of a village, the Court of first instance dismissed the claim on the ground that no right of pre-emption had been proved to exist in the village. The lower Appellate Court, dissenting from this opinion, reversed the first Court's decree, and remanded the case under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code for a decision on the remaining question of fact, viz., the amount of the consideration for the sale. On appeal from the order of remand, the High Court, on the 3rd January 1884, observed that it was not disposed to interfere with the finding of fact that the plaintiffs had a right of pre-emption, and accordingly dismissed the appeal, but added that the Judge was in error in remanding the case under section 562 of the Code; that his order must so far be set aside; and that he should proceed under section 565 or section 566 as might be applicable. The Judge, on receipt of this order, replaced the case on his file, remitted an issue to the Court of first instance, under section 566, as to the amount of consideration, and, accepting the first Court's finding upon that issue, decreed the plaintiff's claim. In second appeal by the defendants the High Court was of opinion that the Judge had disposed of the case upon a condition of things which the plaintiffs had never asserted, inasmuch as he had treated the right of pre-emption which was in issue as one arising from custom, and not, as alleged by the plaintiff, as arising from a contract between the ancestors of the parties. All the evidence necessary to the determination of the case was on the record. Held per PETTIBAM, C J, and OLDFIELD and TYRELL, JJ, that the High Court was competent, in second appeal from the Judge's decree, to look into the evidence already on the record for the purpose of finding whether a right of pre-emption existed in fact in the village, if the evidence for answering this question was already on the record, and that, in such a case, the question need not be referred to the Court of first appeal. *Bal Kishen v. In 1860 the Sudder Court, acting as Special Commissioners under Regulation III of 1828, at the instance of the zemindar, directed the release of the resumed lands, but did not decide as to the right to the mesne profits which the Government had received from the ghatwalls during the period of resumption, deeming this question beyond their competency as Special Commissioners. The zemindar having appealed to the Privy Council, complaining of the omission, and contending that the mesne profits should have been wholly adjudged to him,—Held that the Special Commissioners had jurisdiction to decide upon the true title to the whole money in dispute, and to direct the payment and disposition of the same with interest. *LEELANUND SINGH v. On second appeal such third person contended that the discretion given to the Court under section 22 of the Specific Relief Act ought not to be exercised, as the plaintiff had slept on his rights for nearly three years. Held that, although the principle of the objection, as to the delay of the plaintiff in bringing his suit, was an important one, and one which ought to be considered by the Courts, in the exercise of their judicial discretion under section 22 of the Specific Relief Act, yet the point not having been taken in the Courts below, and there being nothing on the record to lead the Court to presume that the ordinary rule applicable to suits of this nature had been disregarded in the Courts below, the objection ought not under the circumstances to be allowed to prevail in second appeal. MOKUND LALL v. The application of the doctrine of specific performance to partnerships is governed by the same rules as those which govern it in other cases. There are only two classes of cases in which specific performance of an agreement to enter into a partnership has been decreed first, where the parties have agreed to execute some formal instrument which would confer rights that would not exist unless it was executed; secondly, where there has been an agreement which has come to an end to carry on a joint adventure, and the decree that the agreement is valid, prefaced by the declaration that the contract ought to be specifically performed, is made merely as the foundation of a decree for an account. VIRDACHALA NATTA v. One party having resiled from this agreement, it was held that the other party was entitled to sue for specific performance, and such a suit would lie only in the Civil Court. Held that the absence of mention of any money consideration in the agreement was no bar to its being enforced, as the parties thereto had waived all objection on the score of the particular village named, or any other, falling wholly

19. ——— Contract for appointment of arbitrators under Land Acquisition Act.—In the matter of land acquisition proceedings under Act VI of 1857 a notice was, on the 28th of November, served upon the defendants, signed by the Collector, stating that he had appointed an arbitrator on behalf of Government, and requiring the defendants to appoint a second arbitrator to determine the amount of compensation for the land (describing it) required by the B B and C I Railway Company. The defendants' secretary wrote in reply, that the defendants had appointed an arbitrator on their behalf to determine the amount of compensation for their land required for the B B. and C. 20. ——— Agreement for renewal of lease.—Agreement by husband alone—Non-concurrence of mortgagee—Immoveable property situate in the island of Bombay was conveyed in 1859 to N. and his wife (Parsis), their heirs, executors, administrators, and assignees, and was subsequently mortgaged by N. and his wife, but the mortgagee did not enter into possession. In 1861 N. alone entered into an agreement with the plaintiff to give them a lease of that property for five years, the plaintiffs being willing to accept that lease with such title as N. could confer. Held that, notwithstanding the non-concurrence of the mortgagee and of N's wife, N. must specifically perform his contract. The non-concurrence of the mortgagee could not prevent the right of the plaintiff to specific performance by N. of the agreement, because N. should either himself redeem the mortgage or permit the plaintiff to do so. *NAORUJI BERAMJI v. The defendant kept the document with him, but failed to get it registered. In a suit by the plaintiff to enforce specific performance.—Held the suit would lie. *TRIPURA SUNDARI v. Agreement—The plaintiff lent defendant Rs 20,000, and received a document in the following terms "On demand we promise to pay S V M R. C and C. T. A C. C. the sum of rupees twenty thousand, value received. Memo For the above promissory note, the grant of the dockyard and offices to be deposited in three days, and a proper agreement drawn out. The time of credit to be one year or eighteen months, the interest at Rs 10 per cent per mensem." Afterwards A granted two mokurrari leases of the same mouzabs, upon terms more favourable to himself, to C and D who, at the time of such grant, had notice of A's previous agreement with B. Held, in a suit for specific performance brought by B against A and to which C and D were added as defendants, that, notwithstanding the provisions of sections 49 and 50 of Act III of 1877, B could obtain a decree for specific relief, and a declaration that the leases to C and D were void as against him. NEMAI CHARAN DHABAL v. Each brother was to occupy an assigned division and have the use in common of the rest. If either wished to leave the house, he was bound to offer his share to the other at a fixed price; or if he wished to purchase the share of the other and the other refused to sell, then the party refusing to sell at a fixed price was bound to buy the share of the other brother who wished to purchase. V called upon R in 1877 either to pay Rs 418 or give up the house. Held that this was an agreement enforceable by law, that until demand no cause of action arose, and limitation only began to run from the demand, that specific performance should be granted in the alternative. Venkappa Chetti v Akku, 7 Mad., 219, distinguished. VIRASAMI MUDALI v. 26. ——— Contract for sale of land by Receiver.—Misdescription—Purchaser having personal knowledge.—Title to land between high and low water mark—The defendant, who for twelve years had occupied land as tenant, purchased the land at a sale by the Receiver, but refused to complete the purchase on the ground of material misdescription in the advertisement of sale, in that a road and ghât, comprised within the boundaries mentioned in the advertisement, were not the property of the parties whose land the Receiver purported to sell; and also that, to make up the quantity of land as stated in the advertisement, viz., 20 bighas by estimation, land lying between high and low water mark had been taken into calculation. The owners of the property sold having brought a suit against the defendant for specific performance, the defendant contended that the Receiver was a necessary party to the suit, and that the sale had been rescinded by a statement of the Receiver that he would forfeit the deposit in the event of the defendant not carrying out his contract. In support of his objection to quantity, the defendant relied on a Collectorate chitta as showing that the area of the land sold was only 9 bighas, 8 cottahs, 10½ chittaks; the same chitta, however, in giving the eastern boundary of the property, described it as lying "on the west of the low water of the Ganga." Held that there had been no rescission of the contract, that the plaintiffs, being owners of the land down to low water mark, were entitled to all subsequent accretions, and were, therefore, entitled to include in their measurement all land down to low-water mark, and having regard to the fact that the defendant was personally acquainted with the property sold, it was not open to him to

27. ——— Agreement to sell land at a valuation.—Land of peculiar character.—Construction of agreement in a pottah.—Assignment of pottah.—Rights of assignees against original lessors.—The owners of ancestral village lands gave a mokurraṇi pottah of land in a mouzah to the proprietor of a neighbouring colliery "for quarrying coal, for building stores, for garden, for orchard, for road making, and for other uses." The pottah, besides the above, contained the following, as translated "You will build a factory according to any plan you choose, and possess the same. Within that aforesaid mouzah we will not give settlement to anybody. If you take possession, according to your requirements, of extra land over and above this pottah, we shall settle such land with you at a proper rate. Thereat we shall make no objection." The lessee, after being in possession for some years under the pottah, assigned it to the plaintiffs, who afterwards took possession of the whole of the extra land, and demanded a pottah therefor from the defendants, and made a contract advantageous to themselves to sell it to third persons. The defendants refused to grant them a pottah. In a suit for specific performance,—Held in the High Court that where a contract is made to sell land at a fair valuation, and there is no difficulty in ascertaining what a fair valuation would be, the Court will take the usual means of ascertaining it, and decree performance of the contract accordingly. But when, having regard to the peculiar character of the property, as in the case of land supposed to contain coal, or valuable minerals, the value of the land must be to a great extent a matter of guess and speculation, the Court will not decree specific performance, as it has no means of ascertaining by the ordinary methods what price the plaintiff should pay. Held by the Privy Council, on the construction of the pottah, that if the lessee, or his assigns, had required additional land for the purpose of carrying out the objects for which the pottah was granted, then the lessors would have been bound to settle so much of the adjoining land with them as might have been necessary for such requirements. Held also that the plaintiffs, the assignees, were not entitled to compel the defendants to grant them a pottah of the extra land, even at a reasonable rate, merely for the purpose of selling it. Semble,—In a suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell land, the fact that on account of the extraordinary character of the property, as its containing coal or other valuable minerals, there is considerable difficulty in fixing a reasonable rate for it, is not a sufficient reason for refusing a decree. NEW BEERBHOOH COAL COMPANY v. B., alleging that M. B. had been betrothed to her son, and that, under the Hindu law, betrothal was the same as marriage, and could not be repudiated, and that the defendant had on demand refused to give up M. B. The defendant pleaded inter alia that the betrothal had been repudiated as the family to which the plaintiff belonged had been guilty of female infanticide, and that it would be illegal, according to Hindu law, to enter into relationship with it. The ceremonies necessary to effect a betrothal had not been performed, though some ceremonies had been gone through. Held that, assuming the ceremonies, which are said to have taken place, to have constituted a contract to marry, and taking into consideration the particular cause assigned for the breach, the relief, if the plaintiff were entitled to any, should be in the shape of damages, and not by the specific performance of the alleged contract. NOWBUT SINGH v. 37. ———— Suit for execution of fresh instrument on retention of first one by defendant.—Specific Relief Act (Act I of 1877), ss. 12, 21, 22.—Suit to restore terms of lost instrument.—The plaintiffs, alleging that the defendants, having executed in their favour and delivered to them a bond, the consideration for which was money due to them for rent of land and on a former bond, had received it back for registration, and, refusing to register it, had retained it, sued the defendants to have a similar bond executed and registered. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That it was doubtful whether the suit could be regarded as a suit for specific performance of a contract, and whether the only remedy open to the plaintiffs was not a suit for the money. It was only on the hypothesis that the mere writing of the original bond, in the absence of registration and final delivery, did not amount to a performance of the contract, that the suit was entertainable at all. That, assuming the suit to be one for specific performance of a contract, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the specific relief which they sought, since they could obtain their full remedy by suing for the money in respect of which the fresh bond was sought to be executed, and they had failed to prove the exact terms of the original bond. Observations on the nature of the evidence required to prove a contract of which specific performance is sought. Per STUART, C. J.—That the suit was bad in form and substance, and there was no ground for the remedy by specific performance of a contract. If the alleged bond were in existence, a suit simply and directly for the recovery of the money claimed by the plaintiffs would have sufficed, for in such a suit facts relating to the loss or concealment of the bond might have been proved, and under the circumstances secondary evidence at least of the terms of the bond might have been admissible, or the plaintiffs might have found themselves in a position to make out their claim by other evidence, but if the plaintiffs considered it material to their case to have their claim on the bond, the loss or destruction of which could not be doubted, their proper course of proceeding was by a suit to restore the terms of the lost bond, or, as it was said in Courts of Equity in England, by suit to obtain the benefit of the lost deed or instrument; and that, if the suit could be taken to be one affording such a remedy, it contained no sufficient materials to warrant it being held that the bond was of the tenor and in the terms alleged by the plaintiffs. MAYA RAM v. Please come over to the house of my attorney between 3 and 4 this day with the title-deeds of the house, and receive the earnest. There shall be no doing otherwise." The plaintiffs through their manager wrote in answer to the defendant's wife. "You having agreed to purchase our house for R13,125 have sent a letter through the broker, and we are agreeable to it, and we will be present between 3 and 4 this day at your attorney's and receive the earnest." The plaintiffs and defendants met at the attorney's office in the absence of the attorney, and no inspection of title-deeds or payment of the earnest-money therefore took place. Held, in a suit for specific performance of the above contract, that the first letter contained no absolute proposal or undertaking to purchase, but merely fixed the price to be given for the house, leaving the inspection of title-deed and the payment of earnest-money to be settled at the meeting asked for. That both parties having treated the payment of earnest-money as an element in the contract, the contract could not be completed till the amount of earnest-money had been ascertained. KOYLASH CHUNDER DOSS v. 39. ———— Agreement to sell land by guardian of minor contingent upon the permission of the Court—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 26—A certificated guardian of certain minors entered into an agreement with the plaintiff to sell certain land belonging to them for a fixed price contingent upon the leave of the Court, which was necessary, being obtained to the transaction, and a portion of the purchase-money was paid by the plaintiff. The Court sanctioned the sale but at a higher price than that agreed on between the plaintiff and the guardian, and the latter sold to a third party. The plaintiff thereupon sued the minors by their guardian as next friend and the third party for specific performance of the agreement to sell to him at the price mentioned in the agreement. Held, that the contract was not one which could be specifically enforced, and that section 26 of the Specific Relief Act did not apply. The contract as it stood was never a complete contract at any time, as it was contingent upon the permission of the Court, and the permission of the Court did not extend to the whole contract as agreed upon between the parties. NARAIN PATRO v. on the allegation that one of the defendants, K., had agreed that the putni should be bid for at the sale advertised by the zemindar, and, if purchased, should be taken in the name of K., who should convey half to the plaintiff, the cause of action was stated to be that defendants had fraudulently got a putni lease executed in their names and had taken possession, and refused to make over the stipulated share or take the balance of the consideration-money. The defendant K.'s substantial plea was that the mehal had been sold in one lot along with others, and taken by the head member of the family without knowledge of the agreement, and that plaintiff had himself through an agent competed for the putni at the sale. Consequently that the event contemplated had not happened, and that plaintiff had himself avoided the agreement. H pleaded that he was not privy to the agreement, and the minor that he was not bound. The lower Appellate Court found that both parties had abandoned and avoided the agreement. Held that, even if the agreement were binding on K., the Court could not compel a partial performance, which was all that could take place, for as plaintiff claimed half the putni, and K.'s share was at most one fourth, plaintiff could be entitled to one eighth only. A specific performance could not be decreed, for plaintiff could have resisted an action brought by the present defendants for fulfilment of contract, as he could not have been compelled to buy what he had not agreed to. NUFFUR CHUNDER CHUNDER v. 44. ——— Agreement extending lease on conditions.—Right to possession under former lease expired.—Agreement extending lease on conditions—Right to compensation for being kept out of possession.—The defendant's father was engaged in litigation for the purpose of obtaining possession of a zemindari under a lease for ten years, given by the zemindar, commencing in 1857. While the suit was pending the defendant's father sold five-eighths of his interest under the lease to the plaintiff, and agreed to give plaintiff possession, in consideration of certain sums of money paid and certain liabilities undertaken by the plaintiff. The defendant's father obtained possession in 1865, but refused to put the plaintiff's agents in possession, on the ground that the plaintiff had not complied with the terms of the agreement. In giving a decree for the defendant's father against the lessor, the Privy Council reserved to the zemindar leave to institute a suit for redemption upon payment to the defendant of all sums advanced to him. In a suit instituted by the zemindar for redemption in 1866, a razinamah was signed by the plaintiff and defendant in the suit, by which the term of the original lease was extended to the year 1875 for the considerations therein contained. In 1867 the plaintiff brought a suit for possession, and claimed the benefit of the stipulations contained in the razinamah, or for damages. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession, on the ground that defendant was not in possession under the old lease, inasmuch as the effect of the razinamah of 1866 was not to extend the former old lease, but plaintiff was entitled to recover damages for loss of profits during the defendant's father's possession under the old lease.

This section corresponds with section 15 of the Limitation Act of 1859. The following are cases decided on that section—

1. ————— Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss 318, 319—Dispossession—The object and effect of section 15 of Act XIV of 1859 considered, and the bearing of sections 318 and 319 of the Code of Criminal Procedure with regard to cases of dispossession and the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts, illustrated ENAEETOOLAH CHOWDHRY v. KISHUN SOONDUR SURMA . . . 8 W. R., 386

2. ————— Object of section—Wrongful dispossession—Onus of proof—Section 15 did not affect the general law on the matters to which it related, but provided a special remedy for a particular kind of grievance,—e.g., to replace in possession a person who had been evicted by a wrongful act from landed property of which he had been in undisturbed possession, and to prevent a powerful person from thus shifting the evidence of proof from himself to another less able to support it. KALEE CHUNDER SEIN v. ADOO SHAIKH . 9 W. R., 602

3. ————— Possessory actions by persons wrongfully dispossessed—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 230—Section 230 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1859, which related to possessory actions by persons wrongfully dispossessed in execution of decrees, did not apply to a case determined under section 15 of Act XIV of 1859 GOBIND CHUNDER BAGDEE v. GOBIND GHOSSE MUNDUL
[7 W. R., 171]

4. ————— Suit to enforce right of way—Section 15 of Act XIV of 1859 was not applicable to a suit to enforce a mere right of way. HARO DYAL BOSE v. KRISTO GOBIND SEIN
[17 W. R., 70]

5. ————— Nature of possession necessary for suit—Possession as trespasser—Semble—Mere possession as a trespasser was not sufficient to entitle a plaintiff to recover in a suit brought under section 15 of Act XIV of 1859. There must be in the plaintiff juridical as opposed to mere physical possession DADABHAI NARSIDA v. SUB-COLLECTOR OF BROACH . . . 7 Bom., A. C., 82

6. ————— Warrant of execution—Seizure of immoveable property not described in decree—Illegal possession—Where a warrant was issued to the Sheriff to seize certain specific immoveable property not coming within the description in the decree, it was held that possession under such warrant would not be an illegal possession under the meaning of section 15. JADUB CHUNDER CHECHKY v. HEERALOLL SAHA
[1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 21: Bourke, O. C., 384]

7. ————— Tenants illegally ejected—A tenant in possession after expiry of his lease can only be ejected by due course of law; and if illegally dispossessed he was entitled, under section 15, Act XIV of 1859, to sue and recover possession, notwithstanding a pottah set up by defendant. SOFA-OLL KHAN v. WOOFEAN KHAN . 9 W. R., 123

8. ————— Time within which suit must be brought—The suit must be brought within six months of the alleged ouster, otherwise anterior possession would be of no avail to the plaintiff. AMBER BIBEE v. TUKROONISSA BEGUM

[24 W. R., 435]

The plaintiff is entitled to recover notwithstanding any other title. DOE D. KULLAMMAL v. KUPPU PILLAI . . . 1 Mad., 85

9. ————— Trial of question of dispossession—Plaintiff having sued under section 15, Act XIV of 1859, for possession of a parcel of land of which he alleged himself to have been dispossessed by defendants building a hut upon it, the Court of first instance determined that as the land was part of a village, and plaintiff had not sued for possession of the village, it could neither declare his possession of the entire village nor of the particular parcel. Held that there was no reason why the Court should not try whether the plaintiff was dispossessed as alleged, and whether he should not have possession. OMARCHAND MAHATA v. NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL . . . 11 W. R., 229.

10. ————— Right under decree for possession—A party recovering possession of land in virtue of a decree under section 15, Act XIV of 1859, recovered the land with the crop growing upon it, and was fully entitled to cut the same. SHI-BAJDEE PRAMANICK v. EMAM BUKSH BISWAS
[13 W. R., 104]

11. ————— Suit to set aside award under section—The defendant having had an award under section 15, Act XIV of 1859, the plaintiff's allegation of possession and dispossession by the defendant required him specifically to prove those facts before the defendant could be called upon to prove his case. JUGGUERNATH DEB v. MAHOMMED MOKEEM . . . 17 W. R., 161

12. ————— Suit to set aside award under section—Although in a suit to set aside an award made under section 15, Act XIV of 1859, plaintiff had to establish his own title before the party in possession could be required to make good his case, a Judge should look into the summary case itself, and ascertain if there had been a proper inquiry and trial in that case. SUREBO MOHUN ROY v. SURUT CHUNDER ROY . . . 16 W. R., 84

13. ————— Decree for possession—Evidence—A decree for possession in a suit under section 15 of Act XIV of 1859, was prima facie evidence that the plaintiff in that suit was entitled to recover from the defendant therein, mesne profits for the period of dispossession. RADHA CHARAN GHATAK v. ZAMIRUNISSA KHANUM

14. ——— Mortgagee in possession.

—Dispossession by mortgagor—Suit for possession—Fraud.—It is no answer to a suit for possession under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, brought against a mortgagor by a mortgagee who has been forcibly dispossessed by the mortgagor, to allege that the mortgage and possession under it were obtained by the fraud of the mortgagee. The mortgagor's proper remedy is by way of a suit to set aside the mortgage and recover possession. SAYAJI BIN NIMBAJI v. RAMJI SIV LANGAPA

Under section 28 of the Civil Procedure Code, such an alternative claim may be allowed against one or more of the defendants. RAJDHUR CHOWDHRY v. KALIKRISHNA BHATTACHARYA*

1. ——— s. 21.—Agreement to refer to arbitration.—Refusal to refer.—Pleading.—A contract to sell goods contained the following clause: "That any dispute arising hereafter shall be settled by the selling broker, whose decision shall be final." In a suit to recover damages for breach of the contract, the defendant pleaded that the dispute should have been referred to the decision of the selling broker, and that the suit was therefore barred under section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, the latter clause of which provides that "save as provided by the Code of Civil Procedure no contract to refer a controversy to arbitration shall be specifically enforced; but if any person, who has made such a contract, and has refused to perform it, sues in respect of any subject which he has contracted to refer, the existence of such contract shall bar the suit." Held that, before that section could be relied upon, it must be shown that the plaintiff had refused to refer to arbitration, and that the filing of the plaint was not such a refusal. KOOMUD CHUNDER DASS v. CHUNDER KANT MOOKERJEE

2. ——— Agreement to refer to arbitration.

—Award.—Suit in respect of matter referred barred.—The parties to a suit applied for an adjournment of it on the ground that they had agreed to refer the matters in difference between them in such suit to arbitration. The Court accordingly adjourned the suit, and the matters in difference therein were referred to arbitration by the parties, and an award was made thereon disallowing the plaintiff's claim. Held that, under these circumstances, the further hearing of such suit was barred. SALIG RAM v. JHUNNA KUAB

[I. L. R., 4 All., 546

3. ——— Agreement to refer to arbitration.

—Refusal to refer.—Suit in respect of matter agreed to be referred.—Pleadings.—One of the parties to a contract to refer a controversy to arbitration brought a suit for part of the subject-matter referred. The defendants pleaded the bar of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, but did not allege in their answer to the plaint that the plaintiff refused to perform his contract. Held that the mere act of filing the suit on the part of the plaintiff was not tantamount to a refusal to perform his contract in the sense of section 21 of the Specific Relief Act. The contract, the existence of which would bar a suit under the circumstances contemplated by section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, must be an operative contract, and not a contract broken up by the conduct of all the parties to it. TAHAL v. RAM CHARAN. I. L. R., 1 All., 555

2. — Agreement to convey the mortgaged property in case of default.—Suit for specific performance of contract —Mortgage.—First and second mortgagees—On the 7th February 1873, F mortgaged the equity of redemption of a certain estate to B and G. On the 7th August 1877 he mortgaged such estate to P, agreeing that, if he failed to pay the mortgage-money within the time fixed, he would convey such estate to P, and that, if he failed to execute such conveyance, P. should be competent to bring a suit "to get a sale effected and a deed of absolute sale executed." On the 6th October 1877 F mortgaged such estate to B. and D. By this mortgage the lien created by the mortgage of the 7th February 1873 was extinguished. In December 1877 B. and D. obtained a decree against F. on the mortgage of the 6th October 1877, and in June 1878, in execution of that decree, such estate was put up for sale and was purchased by D. In February 1880 P. sued F and D for the execution of a conveyance of such estate to him in accordance with F's agreement of the 7th August 1877. Held that the mortgage of the 7th August 1877 was not in the nature of a mortgage by conditional sale, and there was no necessity for P. to take proceedings to foreclose the mortgage, and the suit was maintainable. Also that, assuming that D had no notice of the agreement of the 7th August 1877, it was very doubtful whether under section 27 (b) of Act I of 1877 D. could claim that specific performance of that agreement should not be granted, inasmuch as the contest lay between a prior and subsequent lien created upon the same property, which had passed to the transferee under a sale in execution of a decree for the enforcement of the subsequent lien. BADRI PRASAD v. s. 40, and Chap. IV, ss. 35-38.—

Impossibility arising after execution of contract to perform a portion —Suit to cancel such portion.—A contract was entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant by which the plaintiff agreed to cultivate indigo for the defendant for a specified number of years, in certain specified lands situated in different villages, with respect to portion of which lands the plaintiff was a sub-tenant only. During the continuance of the contract the plaintiff lost possession of those lands through his immediate landlord having failed to pay the rent, and having been in consequence ejected therefrom by the owner.—In a suit to have so much of the contract as related to those lands cancelled on the ground that it had become impossible of performance through no neglect on his part,—Held that Chapter IV (sections 35-38) of Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief Act) did not apply to such a case, but that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief he sought under section 40 of that Act, inasmuch as the contract was evidence of different obligations,—viz., to cultivate indigo in different villages. INDER PERSHAD SINGH v CAMPBELL not appear to have been originally expressly intended to operate within any of the zillahs subordinate to the Presidency of Bombay,—Held that they did not come within the scope of Regulation XVIII of 1827. That Regulation, being an enactment imposing stamp duties upon the subject, must be strictly construed, and although the High Court believed that those documents were actually intended to operate, so far as the particular property in question in the suit was concerned, in the zillah of Tanna, the High Court declined to hold “expressly” to mean the same as “actually,” as nothing appeared on the face of the documents to show where the property mentioned in them was situated. *GIRDHAR NAGJISHET v. 3. — cl. 3.—Mortgage—Lease.—Counterpart—Where an agreement between a mortgagor and mortgagee contained a stipulation that the mortgagor should, at the time of redemption, make good the losses arising to the mortgagee from the default of tenants, which it had been agreed the mortgagee might put in, in case the mortgagor made default in payment of the rent agreed upon for the term of the mortgage, such an agreement was not a lease, or the counterpart of a lease, within the meaning of Regulation XVIII of 1827, section 10, clause 3, but was a contract of indemnity against losses to be incurred after the determination of the lease, which, not having any operation so long as the lease was in existence, was, therefore, not exempt from stamp duty under that Regulation. Where an appellant has not tendered the stamp duty and penalty on a document which the Courts below have held to be insufficiently stamped, the High Court will not allow him to do so in special appeal. *RAM KRISHNA GOPAL v. 1. — s. 13.—Intention to defraud revenue—On documents insufficiently stamped under Regulation XVIII of 1827 the question did not properly arise, under section 13 of that Regulation, whether the intention of the parties in not sufficiently stamping them was to defraud Government of its revenue. [3 B. L. R., A. C., 235: 12 W. R., 47]

2. ————— Intention to evade stamp laws—A bond executed between a plaintiff who sued upon it and the defendants, contained the following clause. "And inasmuch as we (the defendants) are urgently in want of money, and are unable to procure a stamp at the moment, we have executed the bond on plain paper. Should it be necessary for you (plaintiff) to bring a suit against us, whatever penalty you may have to pay shall be made good by us, with interest." The Small Cause Court Judge, before whom the case was tried, considered the above clause in the bond to be evidence of an intention between the parties to avoid the stamp laws, and refused to receive evidence to the contrary. He also refused to admit the bond in evidence. Held, on reference to the High Court, that the clause in question did not amount to an agreement to evade the stamp laws. The Judge might have inferred from it that it was the intention of the parties to evade the stamp laws, but in that case he should have heard evidence to the contrary. *SASHI BHUSHAN BANERJEE v. 5. ————— Hundi—Inadmissibility in evidence for want of stamp—The plaintiff brought a suit against three defendants under the following circumstances. The third defendant was the tenant of a village under the second defendant, the first defendant being the agent and manager of the second defendant. The third defendant owed the second defendant a sum of money on account of rent, and drew a hundi on the plaintiff for Rs. 1,000 to be paid to the first defendant or order, and containing these words: "For which amount I shall deliver over to you grain in that village and its hamlets, and for which the Dewan (first defendant) will issue an order to the above effect." The hundi was upon a one-anna stamp. Plaintiff on receipt of this hundi drew upon the back of it another hundi upon his mother-in-law, in the following terms. "On demand please pay to Mahomed Radhamatulla Shaib, Dewan of Venkatagiri (first defendant), or to his order, the within-mentioned amount for grain to be supplied me by M^r. Ward (third defendant) on the order of the said Mahomed Radhamatulla Shaib, the Dewan of Venkatagiri." This was signed by the plaintiff, and beneath his signature was that of the first defendant. The amount mentioned in the hundi was paid to the first defendant, the second hundi was unstamped. The plaintiff's case was, that the first defendant entered upon a binding engagement with him to deliver, or permit the delivery, of grain of the value of Rs. 1,000, and that he failed to fulfil his engagement. The Civil Judge decreed for the plaintiff. On appeal,—Held by the High Court, reversing the decision of the Civil Court, that the second hundi was not admissible in evidence, not being stamped, and that there was no evidence of such an agreement as that relied on by the plaintiff. *MAHOMED RAHAMATULLA v. 6. ————— and s. 15.—Intention to evade payment of duty—Jurisdiction—In a suit brought in a Small Cause Court to recover money, being a debt secured by a hissab entered on a leaf of a khattah book, where the defendant objected to the admission of the leaf as evidence, because it did not bear a proper stamp,—Held that, under sections 15 and 17, Act X of 1862, it was competent to the Judge to find, on the facts before him, whether the absence of the stamp was owing to an intention to evade payment of the stamp duty, and that no question arose for reference to the High Court. RAJ CHUNDER SHAHA v. GOBIND CHUNDER KOOLAL

[13 W. R., 102]

7. ————— Insufficiently-stamped document—Procedure—Admissibility in evidence—The plaintiff sued his elder brother for a share in certain family property. The defendant raised a question of family custom, and relied on a certain deed of release which he said the plaintiff had given him, but the existence of which the plaintiff denied. That document was not stamped, though on the face of it it stated that it was to be stamped. No objection was taken on that score to the document before the first and the lower Appellate Courts, who considered that the document was a genuine document executed by the plaintiff. After its production, it had an insufficient stamp of two annas put upon it. The High Court, on appeal, left the deed as part of the evidence in the case, but qualified its effect and the extent of its operation by making it a deed of release, releasing so much of that which the plaintiff might otherwise claim as would be covered by the insufficient stamp of two annas. Held that the High Court might either have refused to admit the document for want of a stamp, or—which would be more correct—it might have required it to be properly stamped and the penalty paid into Court; but the course taken was entirely without precedent, without principle, and without authority. *MANTAPPA NADGOWDA v. "The sum of Rs. 310-12-6 only, forty-five days from the 5th of August." Held that the instrument was properly stamped as a promissory note payable on demand, and ought to have been admitted in evidence. *Per PEACOCK, C. In a suit for the recovery of money due under a written contract the defendants admitted that a sum of Rs. 328-4-0 was due to the plaintiffs, subject to certain deductions which they claimed to be entitled to set off against the plaintiffs' claim. The defendants put in evidence the written contract, the stamp upon which was only sufficient to cover the sum of Rs. 5,000. Held that, notwithstanding the admission of the defendants, the plaintiffs could only recover Rs. 5,000 in the suit. KISHTNASAMY PILLAY v. This document bore a 2-rupee stamp. In September and October M obtained further advances from the plaintiffs in respect of other indigo, giving them similar letters of assignment, which also bore 2-rupee stamps. The indigo, when manufactured, was claimed by A and B under their mortgage, and their claim being resisted by M, who set up against them the plaintiff's rights under the letters of assignment, A, and B brought a suit to enforce the provisions of their mortgage-deed. In this suit the indigo was attached before judgment and sent to Calcutta for sale. The plaintiffs now sued A, B, M, and the holders for sale to establish their first charge in respect of their advances to M, upon 360 maunds of the indigo on the strength of their letters of assignment. Held, per *GARTH, C. 2. ——— and sch. I, art. 14, and sch. II, art. 36.—Admissibility of unstamped document for collateral purpose—The plaintiff, as administrator of D, sued to recover from the defendants the sum of Rs. 3,000, alleging that, in February 1878, the said sum had been entrusted to defendants Nos. 1 and 2 for investment on D's account, and had been advanced by them as a loan to defendant No. 3. The defendants alleged that the money was originally the property, not of D but of the plaintiff himself, that he had made it over as a gift to his daughter P, by whom it had been lent to defendant No. 3, and that defendant No. 3 had duly repaid it to P. In the defendants' written statement it was alleged that the gift to P had been made in the month of February 1878, and evidence to this effect was given at the trial. At the trial, however, the defendants also alleged that in July 1878 the plaintiff had executed an instrument of gift of Rs. 3,000 to P, and they produced a document, dated 3rd July 1878, purporting to be signed by the plaintiff, whereby he made over Rs. 3,000 to P, of which Rs. 1,000 was to be held by P in trust for D during D's life, and to be paid back to plaintiff on D's death, and the remaining Rs. 2,000 were to be the property of P absolutely. When tendered in evidence the document was objected to as being unstamped, and, therefore, inadmissible. Held that the document, though unstamped, was admissible in evidence, on the ground that the purpose for which it was tendered was collateral to the object of the document, and that its admission did not involve giving effect to it as operative between the parties to it. RUSTOMJI EDULJEE CROOS v. The certificate of sale, therefore, whenever it is possible, should set out the exact amount that is due, at the time of the sale, in respect of the principal sum secured by the mortgage. Semble,—It is otherwise if the mortgage be only recited in the proclamation of sale, and not expressly set out, as an existing incumbrance on the property sold, in the certificate of sale. Arrears of interest due on the mortgage are to be excluded from such calculation, since section 23 of the Stamp Act—which enacts that "where interest is expressly made payable by the terms of the instrument, such instrument shall not be chargeable with duty higher than that with which it would have been chargeable had no mention of interest been made therein"—applies as much in this case as if the document of transfer, on which the stamp duty was to be calculated, had been the document itself which stipulated for the payment of interest. NAGINDAS JEYCHAND v HALALKHORRE NATHWA GHEESLA. The levy of a penalty authorised under proviso (1) of section 34 of the Stamp Act, 1879, implies a punishment for neglect in failing to affix the proper stamp at the time of execution. As a fact only Rs. 2,301 of that amount were actually advanced by Z, the balance, Rs. 4,800, being advanced by R. In 1868 Z sold the mortgagee's interest in the deed of mortgage to R for Rs. 2,301, the transfer being by endorsement and not being stamped. In April 1869 G transferred a portion of the mortgaged property to A. In September 1869

R. sued to have such transfer set aside, claiming in virtue of the deed of mortgage and the transfer endorsed thereon. On the 23rd September 1871 the Court of first instance refused to receive the transfer by endorsement in evidence and to proceed with the suit, because such transfer was not stamped. On the 20th April 1872 Z executed a stamped transfer of the mortgagee's interest in the deed of mortgage in favour of R, treating the order of the 23rd September 1871 as an interlocutory one, presented the instrument of the 20th April 1872, to the Court, and prayed that it would proceed with the suit. The Court proceeded with the suit and gave R a decree. This decree was reversed by the Court of first appeal, on the ground that that instrument did not cure the defect of the transfer by endorsement, and that the order of the 23rd September 1871 was final. The decree of the Court of first appeal was affirmed by the High Court in June 1873. Thereupon R made a criminal charge against Z of cheating, in respect of the transfer by endorsement. This charge was eventually dropped, and was followed by a reference to arbitration by R and Z. According to the agreement to refer, which was dated the 17th August 1874, the dispute between the parties was whether R. should return the deed of mortgage to Z, and Z. return the Rs. 2,301 to R or not. The arbitrators made an award, which was dated the 18th August 1874, which directed, inter alia, that R should return the deed of mortgage to Z and Z return the Rs. 2,301 to R. The deed was returned to Z, but the money was not returned to R. In 1875 Z applied, under Regulation XVII of 1806, to foreclose the mortgage. In 1880 the mortgage having been foreclosed, S, as Z's representative, sued for proprietary possession of the mortgaged property. The lower Courts held that all the acts of R and Z subsequent to the disposal of R's suit of 1869 were fraudulent and collusive, and done with a view to evade the stamp law, and the person actually interested in the deed of mortgage was R and not S, and on this ground, as well as on other grounds, dismissed S's suit. Per STRAIGHT, J—That the transfer by endorsement of the deed of mortgage, notwithstanding such transfer was not stamped, transferred to R. the mortgagee's interest in the deed, that such interest could not be re-transferred to Z except by a formal instrument stamped according to law, inasmuch as any other mode of re-transfer would leave Z under the same disabilities as regards the stamp law as R, as any suit instituted by Z would, strictly speaking, be based, not on the deed of mortgage, but on the re-transfer; and that therefore, under these circumstances, and having regard to the fact that Z. had not returned the Rs. 2,301 to R., S. actually, though not ostensibly, based his suit upon a re-transfer of the mortgagee's interest in the deed of mortgage, which was not stamped, and for which he had not given any consideration, and consequently his suit was not maintainable. Also, that the award could not alter the effect of the transfer by endorsement. Per MAHMOOD, J—That the lower Courts were not justified in their findings as to the fraudulent and collusive nature of the acts of R. and Z. after the disposal of R's suit of 1869, or in finding that the person actually interested in the deed of mortgage was R, and not Z, such findings being based upon pure conjectures. That the unstamped transfer by endorsement was inadmissible to show that Z had transferred his interest in the deed of mortgage to R, whether R or the mortgagor wished to use it in order to show that fact, and consequently Z must be still regarded as the person interested in the deed, and S was therefore entitled to maintain the suit.

1. ——— s. 37, and s. 40—Arbitration—Award—Evading payment of stamp duty—Six persons acted as arbitrators in a dispute between two of their fellow-villagers, and delivered their award in writing. Subsequently the award was filed in evidence by one of the disputants in the civil suit in the Court of the Munsif of Cuttack, who, on the ground that the document bore no stamp, impounded it and forwarded it to the Collector, who ordered the writer to be prosecuted. The Deputy Magistrate, to whom the case was referred, summoned the six persons who had acted as arbitrators, and fined them Rs 25 each. On a reference to the High Court by the District Magistrate, Held that the conviction was illegal, and should be set aside. Held, also, that the procedure laid down in section 37 of the Stamp Act must be strictly followed, and that, before a prosecution can be instituted under section 40, the Collector is bound to form an opinion as to whether the offence was committed with the intention of evading payment of the proper duty. *EMPRESS v. The words “agreed to be given” in article 44, clause (a), can only apply where there is an express or implied agreement to give possession, they will not apply where there is no such agreement, express or implied, but the effect of the document is such that a mortgagee has merely a right which he can enforce in a Court of law to obtain possession. The intention of clause (a) is to cover cases of mortgage with possession, and the words “agreed to be given” are to be read as if the words “at the time of execution” immediately followed and qualified the word “given.” Clause (a) should be read as if it were worded “when possession of the property * * * is given by the mortgagor at the time of execution, or is agreed to be then given, and not * * * “is then agreed to be given.” HINGANGHAT MILL COMPANY v REKCHAND [I. art. 57.—Settlement.—Stamp duty. Under article 57 of schedule I of the Stamp Act, 1879, stamp duty on a settlement is to be calculated on the value of the property settled as set forth in such settlement. Held that these terms do not mean the value of the interest or interests created by the settlement, but refer to the value of the property settled, which, it was intended by the Legislature, should be set forth in the settlement. REFERENCE UNDER STAMP ACT, 1879

art. 60.—Transfer of estates and mining rights held under lease.—In consideration of a sum of £87,500, two coffee estates, opened out on land held under a lease for fifty years, together with the mining rights therein, also held under lease for a term of forty-eight years, were transferred by deed for the residue of those terms. Held that the stamp duty payable on the transfer deed was to be regulated by the provisions of clause 60 of schedule I of the Stamp Act, 1879. REFERENCE FROM BOARD OF REVENUE UNDER STAMP ACT, 1879

Sch. II, art. 11, and sch. I, art. 27.—Vakil—Entry on roll of advocates—Exemption from duty.—By article 11 (a) of schedule II of the Stamp Act, 1879 (which exempts from duty the entry of an advocate, vakil or attorney on the roll of any High Court when he has previously been enrolled in a High Court established by Royal Charter), a vakil on the roll of the High Court, Madras, who applies to be entered on the roll of advocates, is exempted from the duty prescribed by article 27 of schedule I of the said Act. IN RE PARTHASARADI secure the due execution of his office and the due accounting by him of "public moneys, deposits, notes, stamp paper, postage labels, or other property" of Government committed to his charge was or was not exempted from stamp duty by the provisions of article 12 (b) of schedule II of Act I of 1879 regard being had to the words "other property." PER STUART, C. J., that such bond was one to secure the "due execution of an office" and the "due accounting for money received by virtue thereof," and nothing more, as the words "or other property" must be taken to mean property of the same kind as previously mentioned, and therefore "money" or the like of money, and such bond was therefore exempted from stamp duty by the provisions of article 12 (b) of schedule II of Act I of 1879. PER OLD-FIELD, J., that inasmuch as the words in article 12 (b) of schedule II of Act I of 1879 "or the due accounting for money received by virtue thereof" should be regarded as mere surplusage, and the "due execution of an office" and the "due accounting for money received by virtue thereof" be considered one and the same thing, and as the due accounting for property received by him by virtue of his office was the "due execution of his office" by the officer in this case, such bond was one for the "due execution of an office," and was therefore exempted from stamp duty. PER SPANCKE, J., and STRAIGHT, J., that inasmuch as the words in article 12 (b) of schedule II of Act I of 1879 could not be regarded as mere surplusage, and there was a distinction drawn by the Legislature between the "due execution of an office" and the "due accounting for money received by virtue thereof," such bond was not one for the "due execution of an office," and being one for the due accounting for "property" it was not one for the due accounting for "money," and therefore it was not exempted from stamp duty. *REFERENCE BY BOARD OF REVENUE, N.-W. The class of husbandmen or actual agriculturists is meant, not farmers, middlemen, or lessees, even though cultivation may be carried on to some extent by such persons in the area covered by their lease. Held, therefore, where the land, the subject of a kabuliata (counterpart of a lease), was for a large part not cultivable or susceptible of being treated as a "cultivator's" holding in any legitimate sense of that word, that such kabuliata was not exempted from stamp duty under article 13 (c), schedule II of the Stamp Act, 1879. 4. ———— Refund of excess of stamp duty.—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), ss 13, 14, and 15—The plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of his maliki right over a certain putni tenure, and he alleged that the defendants had executed a hiba in his favour in consideration of a diamond ring worth Rs 30,000. He valued his suit at Rs 5,600, being twenty times the malikana of Rs 280, to which the petitioner alleged he was entitled. The Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff was bound to value his suit at Rs 30,000, the consideration mentioned in the hibanama. The plaintiff paid the deficiency, and his suit was ultimately dismissed. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, and valued his appeal at Rs 5,600, which valuation was accepted by the High Court. On an application by the plaintiff for a certificate authorising him to receive back from the Collector the excess of stamp duty paid by him,—Held that the Court had no power to grant it, its power being limited to cases specified in sections 13, 14, and 15 of the Court Fees Act; but that there is nothing in the law preventing the Government from refunding any amount which they may think the plaintiff was improperly ordered to pay. 6. ———— Compromise of appeal before hearing.—Where an appeal had been compromised before a Bench of the Sudder Court, and in the presence of the parties, before it had been entered in the cause list hung up in the Court-room,—Held that appellant was entitled to a refund of the full amount of stamp duty paid by him. STATUTE, CONSTRUCTION OF—continued.

1. ————— Mode of construction.—The meaning of an Act is to be gathered solely by reference to the Act itself. MUDDOOSODEN DEY v. BAMACHURN MOOKERJEE . . . 1 Hyde, 100

2. ————— Duty of Court—Where the terms of an Act are clear and plain, it is the duty of the Court to give effect to it as it stands. GURREBULLAH SIKKAR v. MOHUN LALL SHAHA [I. L. R., 7 Calc., 127: 8 C. L. R., 409]

3. ————— Preamble—A rule of construction is that the enacting words of a statute may be carried beyond the preamble, if words be found in the former strong enough for the purpose. CHINNA AIXAN v. MAHOMED FAKRUDIN SAIB . . . 2 Mad., 322

4. ————— Pre-existing state of law—The pre-existing state of the law, as recognised by the tribunals, is one of the chief means of interpreting laws of procedure. PRABHAKARBHAT v. VISHWAMBHAR . . . I. L. R., 8 Bom., 313

5. ————— Reasons for enacting law.—Motives of parties—If the words of a law are clear and positive, they cannot be controlled by any consideration of the motives of the party to whom it is to be applied, nor limited by what the Judges who apply it may suppose to have been the reasons for enacting it. JODOONATH BOSE v. SHUMS-ONNISSA BEGUM. BUZLOOR RUHEEM v. SHUMS-ONNISSA BEGUM [8 W. R., P. C., 3: 11 Moore's I. A., 551]

6. ————— Intention of Legislature in framing Act.—It is not for a Civil Court to speculate upon what was in the mind of the Legislature in passing a law, but the Court must be bound by the words of the law judicially construed. MOHESH CHUNDER DOSS v. MADHUB CHUNDER SIEDAR [13 W. R., 85]

7. ————— "Objects and reasons" of Act.—Forms in which Bill came before Council.—For the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the Legislature in passing an Act, where that intention, so far as can be gathered from the Act itself, appears doubtful, the "objects and reasons" may be referred to. It is not, however, permissible to refer, for this purpose, to the various forms in which the Bill was brought before the Legislature. MOOSA v. ESSA . . . I. L. R., 8 Bom., 241

8. ————— Stamp duty, Charge of.—If the express words of an Act do not warrant or necessitate a demand of duty or charge, it is not competent to a Court of law to extend such enactment or to give to the words a meaning beyond their strict and literal signification, so as to include any case which may reasonably come within the spirit of the enactment. IN THE MATTER OF THE PORT CANNING LAND COMPANY . . . 16 W. R., 208

9. ————— Special and general procedure.—Inconvenience pointed out of introducing into Acts relating and intitled as relating to special jurisdiction only provisions affecting civil procedure generally. JUDOW MULJI v. CHHAGAN RAICHAND . . . I. L. R., 5 Bom., 306

10. ————— Retrospective effect of Act—Statutes are prima facie deemed to be prospective only. "Nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet, non prius" Moon v. Dui den, 2 Ewch, 22, approved of. DOOLUBDASS PETTAMBERDASS v. RAMLOLL THACKOORSEYDASS [5 Moore's I. A., 108]

CHUTTERDHAREE MISSER v. NURSINGH DUTT SOOKOOL . . . 3 Agra, 371 [S. C. Agra, F. B., Ed. 1874, 163]

11. ————— Retrospective effect of Acts, Principle as to—Mad. Act VIII of 1865*—In a suit for rent for 1865, 1866, it was objected that pottas and muchalkas were not exchanged as required by Act VIII of 1865, which came into force on 1st January 1866. Held (reversing the decision of the Civil Judge) that Act VIII of 1865 was inapplicable to the case. The general principle is that rights already acquired shall not be affected by the retro-action of a new law. Rules as to procedure are not exceptions, but the question here was not one of processual but of material law. MORRIS v. SAMBAMURTHI RAYAR . . . 6 Mad., 122

12. ————— Penal provision in statute—Retrospective effect.—Retrospective effect is not to be given to the penal provision of section 2, Bengal Act VI of 1862. NOBOKANTH DEY v. BORADAKANTH ROY . . . 1 W. R., 100

13. ————— Penal statute.—Excise Act—Beng. Act VII of 1878.—Penal statutes must be construed strictly, i.e., nothing is to be regarded as within the meaning of the statute which is not within the letter and clearly and intelligibly described in the very words of the statute itself. EMPRESS v. KOLA LALANG [I. L. R., 8 Calc., 214: 10 C. L. R., 155]

14. ————— Penal statute—Act XXXI of 1860—A penal statute should, when its meaning is doubtful, be construed in the manner most favourable to the liberties of the subject, and this is more especially so when the penal enactment is of an exceptional character. REG. v. BHISTA BIN MADANNA . . . I. L. R., 1 Bom., 308

15. ————— Repeal by implication.—Repugnancy.—Statutes are not to be held to be repealed by implication, unless the repugnancy between the new provision and a former statute be plain and unavoidable. SITAPATHI NAYUDU v. QUEEN . . . I. L. R., 6 Mad., 32

16. ————— Implied repeal.—Civil Procedure Code, 1839, s. 187—Act IX of 1850, s. 101—A special enactment is not impliedly repealed by a subsequent general enactment, if the two enactments are not so repugnant as to be incapable of standing together. Act IX of 1850, section 101, was not repealed by section 187 of Act VIII of 1859. SABAPATI MUDALIYAR v NARAYANSTAMI, MUDALIYAR. 1 Mad., 115

17. ————— Effect of repeal—Retrospective effect.—Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879—General Clauses Consolidation Act, 1868, s. 6.—The general rule is that a repealed statute cannot be acted on after it is repealed, but, as provided in section 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1868, all matters that have taken place under it before its repeal remain valid. But a new order of a Court, not ancillary or provisional, but directing a further substantive step in the execution of a decree, is a new proceeding which should be governed by the law in force when the order is made, and not by the law which it repeals. An Act passed to promote some public important object, such as the protection of the property of the Deccan agriculturists, may be given on that account a retro-active operation, if necessary, as the rule against such operation rests itself on such a general public interest, which may, under the circumstances, be deemed of less importance than the one embodied in the Act. SHIVRAM UDARAM v KONDAJI MUKTAJI.

[I. L. R., 8 Bom., 340]

18. ————— Law governing suit when law is changed pending suit—The law as it exists when a suit is commenced must decide the rights of the parties to the suit, unless the Legislature has expressed a clear intention to vary the relative rights of the parties to each other in the new law. Rule followed in the interpretation of Act X of 1859. BUNGSHEDHUR DOSS v MAHOMED KHULLEE. 1 Hay, 369

19. ————— Alteration of law while suit is pending.—Act XIX of 1857, s. 219—Repeal, Effect of—Where the law is altered while a suit is pending, the law as it existed when the action was commenced must decide the rights of the parties, unless the Legislature, by the language used, shows a clear intention to vary the mutual relations of such parties. GUJERAT TRADING COMPANY v TRIKAMJI VELJI. 3 Bom., O. C., 45

20. ————— Repeal, Effect of, on right of action—A right of action is not taken away by a change in the law, unless by express enactment, but in the case of mere procedure, unless something is said to the contrary, the new law, where its language is general in its terms, applies without reference to the former law or procedure. FRAMJI BOMANJI v. HORMASJI BARJORJI.

[3 Bom., O. C., 49]

21. ————— Right of suit—Act XVI of 1842—Act VIII of 1868, s. 1—Act XIV of 1870, s. 1—On the 27th of June 1866, it was agreed by and between B, a zemindar, and D, a ryot, that the latter should pay Rs. 20 annually as the rent of his holding, and that for the future no further sum in excess should be demanded or suit brought for enhancement of rent. At the date of the agreement Act XVI of 1842 was in force. The settlement of the district, where the land, in respect of which the agreement was made, was situate, expired on the first of July 1870, before when Act XVI of 1842 was repealed by Act VIII of 1868, which Act was repealed by Act XIV of 1870, both Acts saving any right or title which had already accrued. Held that no right of action to avoid or right to repudiate the engagement of the 27th of June 1866, accrued to the zemindar before the passing of those Acts. DEOJLET v. BHUGWANT. 6 N. W., 373

22. ————— Statutes making contracts void and those prohibiting actions on them—The distinction between enactments which declare contracts absolutely void and those which simply provide that no action shall be brought upon such contracts pointed out. VISSAPPA v RAMAJOGI. 2 Mad., 341

23. ————— Statute imposing duty—Action for failure to perform it—Where a statute imposes a duty, it, without express words, gives an action for the failing to perform that duty, and for wrongfully performing it. PONNUSAMY TEVAR v. COLLECTOR OF MADURA. 3 Mad., 35

24. ————— Limitation Act, XIV of 1859, ss. 20, 21—In interpreting statutes, the words "must" and "shall" may, in some cases, be substituted for the word "may," but only for the purpose of giving effect to the intention of the Legislature. In the absence of proof of such intention, the word "may" should be taken as used in its natural, ie, in a permissive, and not in an obligatory, sense. DELHI AND LONDON BANK v ORCHARD.

25. ————— Hindu Wills Act—In construing an Act of the Government of India, passed in the form peculiar to the Hindu Wills Act, the sound rule of construction is to give their full and natural meaning to the provisions, and only to give effect to the enactments contained in the applied sections and chapters so far as the latter do not contravene the full and natural meaning of the provisions. ALANGAMONJOBI DABEE v SONAMONI DABEE.

26. ————— Land Acquisition Acts—Acts relating to the acquisition of lands for public purposes must be construed strictly in favour of the subject. SORABJI NASSARVANJI DUNDA v JUSTICES OF THE PEACE FOR THE CITY OF BOMBAY.

[12 Bom., 250]

27. ————— Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac I, c. 16—Where words have been long used in a technical sense, and have been judicially construed to have a certain meaning, and have been adopted by the Legislature as having a certain meaning prior to a particular statute in which they are used, the rule of construction of statutes requires that the words used in such statute should be construed according to the sense in which they have been so previously used, although that sense may vary from the strict literal meaning of the words. The words in the Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac I, Cap. 16, section 7, "beyond the seas," are synonymous in legal import with the words "out of the realm" or "out of the land" or "out of the territories," and are not to be construed literally. RUCKMABOYE v. LULLOOBOHOY MOTTICHUND

[5 Moore's I. A., 234]

28. Beng. Rent Act, X of 1859, s. 77—Meaning of "determined"—The word "determined" meant "legally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction" GHALIB ALI v. KHILLOO

[3 N. W., 51: Agra, F. B., Ed. 1874, 243]

29. Road Cess Act, Beng Act X of 1871—Interpretation clause, Construction of—In a suit on a bond by which certain land, admittedly lakhiraj, was mortgaged, the purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property at an auction sale for arrears of road cess due under Bengal Act X of 1871 was added as a defendant, and the lower Courts holding that the effect of such a sale was to pass the property to the defendants free of encumbrances, made a decree excluding that portion from liability in respect of the mortgage-bond. Held, on the construction of Bengal Act X of 1871, that the sale had no such effect, and that the whole of the property was liable to be sold in satisfaction of the plaintiffs' claim. Although the effect of an interpretation clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places in the Act in which that word occurs, it is not the effect of an interpretation clause that the thing defined has annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature. It does not follow, therefore, that because lakhiraj property is defined in the Road Cess Act, 1871, to be a tenure, all the interests and consequences attached by other Acts to tenures generally, or to particular classes of tenures, become annexed to lakhiraj property. UMACHURN BAG v. AJADANNISSA BIBEE

30. Tax illegally levied—A statute not only enacts its substantive provisions, but, as a necessary result of legal logic, it also enacts as a legal proposition everything essential to the existence of the specific enactments. Where the Legislature has imposed certain duties both upon the tax-payer and upon the Municipal Commissioners, and those duties, as to the tax-payer, enforceable by penalties, are to be performed at a particular time,—Held that there was implied a "latent proposition of law," which is as clear and binding as if it had been explicitly declared. That proposition is that there shall be a legally-sanctioned tax at the period at which the duties are to be performed. LYMAN v. DAMODARAYA

31. Acts imposing taxes—Ambiguity in Acts—In order to impose a tax, due, rate, or toll upon a subject, the framers of the Act or bye-law under which such tax, &c., is imposed must use clear and unambiguous words to effect their purpose. When the words used are ambiguous, the intendment of the Courts will be in favour of the subject upon whom the tax is sought to be imposed. Thus where the framers of the Surat bye-law imposed a tax of Rs 1 per Surat man upon "copper," imported into Surat for consumption, it was held that copper wrought up into pots did not fall within the words of the bye-law. Semble,—That when a tax is imposed upon goods imported into a town for consumption, and such goods, after having been subjected to the tax upon being imported into the town, are afterwards taken out for sale into the neighbouring villages and brought back unsold, such goods are not liable to be subjected to tax a second time. *DULLABH SHIVLAL v. 3. ———— Voluntarily assisting in the disposal of stolen property.—“Believe”—“Suspect.”—Penal Code, s. 414—The word “believe” in section 414 of the Penal Code is much stronger than the word “suspect” and involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property, with which he was dealing, was stolen property. It is not sufficient in such a case to show that the accused person was careless, or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen, or that he did not make sufficient inquiry to ascertain whether it had been honestly acquired. *EMPRESS v. It was found that, at the time of the alleged misappropriation, the bull had been set at large by some Hindu, in accordance with Hindu religious usage, at the time of performing funeral ceremonies. Held that the bull was not, at the time of the alleged misappropriation, “property” within the meaning of the Penal Code, inasmuch as not only was it not the subject of ownership by any person, but the original owner had surrendered all his rights as its proprietor, that it was therefore “nullius in terra,” and incapable of larceny being committed in respect of it, and that the conviction must be set aside. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 14. ————— Presumption —

Penal Code, s 411—Receiver of stolen property—Presumption as to possession of property after theft—A common brass drinking-cup was stolen in October 1883, and was discovered in the possession of the accused in September 1884—Held, in a case in which the accused was tried for receiving stolen property, that his possession of the stolen property, coupled with the fact that he had failed to give an account as to how he became possessed of the property, would, under ordinary circumstances, raise a probable presumption of his guilt, but where, as in this case, such possession was not a recent possession, but one eleven months subsequent to the act of theft, the presumption against him was so slight that, taken by itself, he ought not to be called upon to explain how his possession was acquired. The question of what is or is not a recent possession of stolen property is to be considered with reference to the nature of the article stolen. *Rex v Adam, 3 C. & P., 600, Rex v. Dishonest receipt of stolen property—Dacoty—Jury—In considering whether the possession of stolen goods raises a presumption of dishonest receipt of stolen property, the attention of the jury should be drawn to the necessity of satisfying themselves that the possession is clearly traced to the accused. The fact of stolen property being found concealed in a man's house would be sufficient to raise a presumption that he knew the property to be stolen property, but it would not be sufficient to show that it had been acquired by dacoty. *EMPRESS v. The plaintiff then moved the Court to strike off his application for execution, and to send his decree to the second class Subordinate Court of Vita for execution. The Satara Court accordingly sent the decree to the Vita Court and granted a certificate to the plaintiff under sections 223 and 224 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Satara Court also informed the Vita Court that proceedings were pending in the Satara Court regarding the insolvency of R. On the application of the plaintiff, the Vita Court attached certain immoveable property belonging to N and R. Thereupon one V. T. claimed a mortgage lien on it for Rs. 9,415-9-3. SUBORDINATE JUDGE.—Subordinate Judge invested with powers of Small Cause Court—continued

Transfer of decree for execution—Act XI of 1865, s. 20—The Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), s. 223—Act XIV of 1869, s. 28—The Courts of Subordinate Judges invested with the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Small Cause Court under section 28 of Act XIV of 1869 do not thereby become "Courts of Small Causes constituted under Act XI of 1865" They merely exercise a similar jurisdiction. This makes their decisions final in the cases to which the jurisdiction extends, but it does not imply that the variations of procedure prescribed expressly for the Courts constituted under Act XI of 1865 are applicable to Courts constituted under a different Act and subject to different conditions. The Court of a Subordinate Judge exercising Small Cause Court powers is, under section 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), one of the "other Courts exercising jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes," and, as such, its procedure is governed by the Civil Procedure Code without the variations provided by Act XI of 1865. Under section 223 (d) of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court which has passed a decree in its Small Cause Court jurisdiction may, for any good reason, to be recorded in writing, transfer its decree to the other branch of the same Court, as it might to a different Court, for execution, without requiring a certificate under section 20 of Act XI of 1865. For this purpose the two branches or sides of the Subordinate Judge's Court may be regarded as different Courts. BHAGVAN DAYALJI v BALU

15. — Suit for interest due on a mortgage—The plaintiff sued to recover interest due on a mortgage of immoveable property. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had received the profits of the mortgaged property, and had got possession of certain materials worth four thousand rupees, and that the mortgaged debt had been paid off. The suit was tried before a Subordinate Judge in his capacity of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes, who held that he had no jurisdiction to go into the questions raised by the defendant in his defence, and he gave judgment for the plaintiff. Held, on application to the High Court, that the defence being virtually that the debt had been paid off, and that nothing was due to the plaintiff, the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to decide the suit. BABURAY AMBIR PETHE v GANPATRAY DAMODAR

tion of a money-decree passed in his favour by the same Subordinate Judge in his Small Cause jurisdiction, and prayed for rateable distribution of the proceeds along with other decree-holders. Held that the application must be allowed. Although a Subordinate Judge invested under Act XIV of 1869, section 28, with Small Cause powers, acquires the jurisdiction of two Courts, he does not become the Judge of two Courts, but remains the Judge of a Subordinate Court. MALHARI v NARSO KRISHNA

17. — Execution of decree—Transfer of decree for execution—Act XI of 1865, s. 20—Act XIV of 1869, s. 28—The plaintiff, having obtained a money-decree against H and others in a suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court at Dhulha, applied for execution by attachment and sale of their immoveable property. That property was accordingly sold, but before the realisation of the assets the defendant, who also had obtained a money-decree against the same judgment-debtors in the same Court in its Small Cause jurisdiction, applied for the execution of his decree by attachment and sale of the immoveable property which had already been attached at the instance of the plaintiff. The Court, under section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), rateably distributed the proceeds of the sale between the plaintiff and the defendant. The plaintiff now brought this suit in the Small Cause jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge's Court at Dhulha to recover from the defendant the amount paid to him, alleging that it had been illegally paid, as the procedure laid down in section 223 of the Code had not been followed. Held that, as ruled in Bhagavan Dayalji v Balu, I. L. R., 8 Bom., 230, a Subordinate Judge invested with Small Cause Court powers has generally to follow the procedure prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure. This governs his proceedings both in trial and execution, whether the suit is a Small Cause suit or not. If the two jurisdictions assigned to the Subordinate Judge's Court and to the Subordinate Judge personally are locally co-extensive, there is no distinction of sides or branches. But where, as in some cases, the ordinary jurisdiction is wider locally than the Small Cause jurisdiction, the Court is, in that part of its territory which lies outside the Small Cause Court jurisdiction, to be regarded as a separate Court so far that a decree in a Small Cause should not generally be executed on property beyond the Small Cause jurisdiction without a transfer, i.e., a dealing with the execution as in a suit tried in the usual way, for reasons to be recorded in writing. As all is done by the same Judge, a suggestion and an order recorded in the case are sufficient, without a formal transmission as to a distant Court. DHARAMDAS SANIDIAS v VAMAN GOVIND

18. — Power of Subordinate Judge to try Munsif's case.—Act XVI of 1868, ss. 13, 15, 16—Bengal Civil Courts Act (Act VI of 1871), ss. 19, 20—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 15, 575.

SUBORDINATE JUDGE.—Power of Subordinate Judge to try Munsif's case—
continued

—Per PETHERAM, C. J., and BRODHURST, MAHMOOD, and DUTHOIT, JJ.—The object of sections 19 and 20 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, 1871, was to create in the District Judge, Subordinate Judge, and Munsif concurrent jurisdiction up to Rs. 1,000. Per PETHERAM, C. J.—Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a proviso to those sections. The word “shall” in that section is imperative on the suitor. The word is used for the purpose of protecting the Courts. The suitor shall be obliged to bring his suit in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it. The object of the Legislature is that the Court of the higher grade shall not be overcrowded with suits. Whenever an Act confers a benefit, the donee may exercise the same or not at his pleasure. The proviso is for the benefit of the Court of the higher grade, and it is not bound to take advantage of it. If it does not wish to try the suit, it may refuse to entertain it. If it wishes to retain the suit in its Court, it may do so; it is not bound to refuse to entertain it. Per DUTHOIT, J.—The words in section 57 of the Civil Procedure Code “shall be” are an instruction which the Court is bound to follow, and they are therefore a restraint upon jurisdiction. The effect, therefore, of the concurrent jurisdiction of Subordinate Judges and Munsifs is not to allow to a Subordinate Judge discretion as to accepting or not accepting for trial by himself suits cognisable by the inferior tribunal. BRODHURST and MAHMOOD, JJ.—Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a rule of procedure, not of jurisdiction, and whilst it lays down that a suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade, it does not oust the jurisdiction of the Courts of higher grades. Russick Chunder Mohunt v Ram Lall Shaha, 22 W R, 301, and Sufee-ool-lah Sircar v. Begum Bibee, 25 W R, 219, followed. Per OLDFIELD, J.—Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code is a provision entirely of procedure as distinct from jurisdiction, and its effect on section 19 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act is that the jurisdiction of the District Judge and Subordinate Judge extends to all original suits cognisable by the Civil Court, subject in its exercise to a certain procedure,—namely, that the suits be instituted in the Court of lowest grade competent to try them. Held, therefore, by PETHERAM, C. J., and OLDFIELD, BRODHURST, and MAHMOOD, JJ., where a Subordinate Judge had tried a suit which a Munsif, a Court of a lower grade, might have tried, that the Subordinate Judge had not acted without jurisdiction. The plant in such suit had been in the first instance presented to the Munsif, who had returned it, to be presented to the Subordinate Judge. Per DUTHOIT, J.—The decree of the Subordinate Judge would not be liable to be reversed in appeal for want of jurisdiction, for the jurisdiction was there, though it ought not to have been exercised. This view of the matter was consistent with the received canon of construction, that unless the Legislature uses negative words, or words showing an intention to treat the observance of a rule of procedure as essential, the rule will ordinarily be treated as a direction only. Under the circumstances, therefore, the District Judge had, in appeal, correctly refused to entertain the plea of defect in jurisdiction. NIDHI LAL v. MAZHAR HUSAIN

SUBSISTENCE-MONEY.

1. ———— Payment of subsistence-money.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 276—According to Act VIII of 1859, as it stood at the end of 1876 and until October 1877, the batta for the maintenance of a debtor could not become payable until he was arrested and brought before the Court, and the order made for his committal to the civil jail. KASTURCHAND v. RAOJI SADASHIV

Under the present Code it has to be paid into Court before the order for the arrest can be made.

2. ———— Illegal commitment.—Duty of jailor—Unless subsistence-money is paid before the commitment, the commitment is illegal. The jailor is bound by the words of the Act. It is for him, and not for the prisoner, to see that the money is paid. IN THE MATTER OF THOMSON

3. ———— Fixing subsistence-money.—Detention in jail on decree of defendant arrested prior to decree—Right to discharge—Where a defendant is arrested prior to decree under Act VIII of 1859, section 78, and a decree is afterwards obtained against him in the suit, the plaintiff, if he wishes to detain the defendant in prison, must have him brought before the Court, and his subsistence-money fixed, in the same way as in the case of an arrest in execution of a decree, and if he fails to do so, the defendant is entitled to his discharge from prison. IN THE MATTER OF CALLACHAND DASS

4. ———— Order for allowance.—Application for discharge in absence of order.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 276, 278—S. H. and two other debtors in the custody of the Sheriff on a ca sa appeared on a habeas corpus for the execution-creditor to show cause why they should not be discharged. S. H. had been arrested in execution of a decree in a suit which was begun under the old procedure in the Supreme Court, and the question was whether the procedure in his case should be regulated by Act VII of 1855 or Act VIII of 1859. The grounds relied on by all three prisoners (besides the above in S. H.'s case) were, that no order for their allowance had been made by the Court, nor had they been brought before it for that purpose. Held that the case of S. H. was to be regulated by the old procedure, and as under Act VII of 1835 no order for allowance was necessary, he must be remanded to jail. Held, also (PEACOCK, C. J., dissentiente), that a prisoner arrested on a ca. sa. must, within a convenient time, be brought before the Court to have his allowance fixed; that an "allowance" within the meaning of sections 276 and 278 of Act VIII of 1859 meant subsistence-money fixed by order of the Court; that the Court must have the prisoner before them to exercise their discretion upon a matter which must be determined before he can be formally committed to prison, and which may be so determined as to entitle him to be discharged; that a decree must be carried into execution by and under the direction of the Court which pronounces it by means of a special application to the Court, and an order passed thereupon; that a jailor or other officer cannot lawfully receive a prisoner for debt under commitment unless the preliminary payment of subsistence has been made in compliance with the order of the Court, and that the jailor cannot lawfully detain a judgment-debtor when the time limited for payment of any subsistence-money under the order of the Court passes without due payment accordingly. *IN RE SUMBOO CHUNDER HALDAR. 5. ——— Right of debtor to discharge.

—Omission to make order for allowance.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 276, 278.—A debtor having been imprisoned on a writ of ca. sa., was brought up on a habeas corpus, and applied for his discharge, on the ground that his arrest and imprisonment were illegal, as no order for his allowance, under section 276 of Act VIII of 1859, had been made. Sufficient subsistence-money, however, was paid to the Sheriff previous to the arrest, and he was kept amply supplied with it. Held that sections 276 and 278 of Act VIII of 1859 applied as much to the execution of a motu decree as to an arrest by writ of the High Court; that no one is to be imprisoned in execution of a decree unless subsistence-money for a month in advance be paid to the person to whose custody he is committed; that a similar payment must be received in advance every successive month pending the imprisonment; that if any such payment be not made the prisoner is entitled to be released; that the "allowance" referred to in section 276 of Act VIII of 1859 meant subsistence-money of 4 annas per diem; that section 276 of Act VIII of 1859 enacted only that the prisoner shall have an allowance of 4 annas per diem paid monthly, unless the Court shall specially fix a less amount, that an order for an allowance to the prisoner was not necessary, and was intended only as a relief to the execution-creditor; that the omission to have such order made did not render the arrest and imprisonment illegal, that in the absence of such order, section 278 of Act VIII of 1859 ensured 4 annas a day as subsistence-money for the prisoner. AGA ALI KHAN v JOYDOYAL PERSAUD Bourke, O. 6. ——— Non-payment of subsistence-money in advance.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 276.—The monthly subsistence-money under section 276 of Act VIII of 1859 must be paid in advance, therefore, where a debtor was arrested and subsistence-money paid for January, but no further deposit was made till 4th February, the prisoner was held entitled to his discharge. IN RE KONNOY LOEL DOSS Bourke, O. 7. ——— Application for discharge on non-payment of subsistence-money.—Petition for discharge—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 278.—A prisoner was arrested on the 30th of December on a ca. sa. dated the 24th of December, on which day the execution-creditor paid subsistence-money for thirty days. This failing on the 29th of January, the prisoner made a fruitless application to the Sheriff for more, and then applied to the Court for his discharge, upon which notice was directed to be given to the execution-creditor. Held that no particular form of petition of discharge was required from a prisoner applying for his discharge for non-payment of subsistence-money, that subsistence-money must be paid in advance by the execution-creditor before putting a writ of ca. sa. in force; that the discharge by the Sheriff of a prisoner detained on a writ of ca. sa. was equally imperative on the happening of any of the contingencies specified in section 278 of Act VIII of 1859; and that on failure of subsistence-money the prisoner should be released, and further detention of him by the person in whose custody he is, was illegal. SPEYER v. JANSSEN [Bourke, O. C., 28]

8. ——— Non-payment of subsistence-money in advance.—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 276, 278.—A prisoner was arrested on August 4th, and committed to prison on the evening of the same day. Before his committal, the execution-creditor paid into the hands of the jailor a sum sufficient for his subsistence-money for twenty-seven days, at the established rate of 4 annas per day. On the 6th August, a writ of habeas corpus was applied for to bring the prisoner up, and on the 6th a further sum of 4 annas was paid to the jailor to cover any deficiency in the former payment. Held that the requirements of section 276, Act VIII of 1859, had not been fulfilled, and that the prisoner was entitled to his discharge under section 278. DUTT v. CORNELIUS 5 B. L. R., Ap., 79

9. ——— Mode of payment of subsistence-money.—On the 30th of September, the plaintiff, a detaining creditor, paid to the jailor of the Calcutta jail subsistence-money for thirty days, for a prisoner confined at the suit of the plaintiff, the jailor then having a balance of 4 annas over from the subsistence-money for September. Held that there was a sufficient compliance with section 276 of Act VIII of 1859. HALADHAR DEY v AMBUXA CHARAN BOSE 5 B. Act IV of 1865—Where the defendants were arrested through the Munsif's Court in execution of a decree, but were released at the request of the execution-creditor before they had been sent to the civil jail, it was held that the execution-creditor was entitled to a refund of the balance of subsistence-money advanced by him that remained in the Munsif's hands at the time of his debtor's release. The marriage was contracted after the passing of the Succession Act. Held that section 4 of that Act did not prevent the operation of the clause in the marriage settlement in restraint of anticipation. Held, further, that section 8 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, does not apply to contracts made before the passing of the Act. *See, per COUCH, C. 4. ——— Test of summary case.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 222.—Jurisdiction to try summarily.—It is the nature of a complaint which should determine whether a case should be tried summarily under section 222 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 6. ——— Value stolen in case of theft as determining jurisdiction to try summarily.—Evidence, Mode of taking.—In a case in which the accused was charged with theft of a box containing Rs50 in cash and of the box worth 8 annas 6 pie, the Magistrate considered the box to be of no value, and struck out the 8 annas 6 pie, and thereupon tried the case summarily under section 222 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1872. Held that the Magistrate was not at liberty, upon his own authority and without taking evidence, to throw the box entirely out of consideration, as upon that depended his jurisdiction to dispose of the case summarily. Such evidence should have been taken precisely in the same way as evidence upon the merits of the case, and as it was not taken the Court held that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction in this case. *QUEEN v. The Sessions Judge, on the Magistrate's own judgment, recommended that the convictions should be set aside, on the grounds (1) that the facts showed that the accused should have been convicted under section 353 or under section 342, and (2) that the Magistrate had no power to convict of the lesser offence, and so give himself jurisdiction to try the case summarily. Held, in concurrence with the Sessions Judge, that the accused ought to have been tried under section 353. SUNDERBUNS BOUNDARY.

— Beng Reg III of 1828, s. 13 —
Section 13, Regulation III of 1828, was intended to make provision for the immediate settlement of the limits of the Sunderbuns, hence it fixed peremptorily a period after which the demarcation of those limits, made by the Special Commissioner to that end appointed, should be final. No person could come in*after that period (namely, three months from the date of the Commissioner's proceeding fixing boundary) pleading infancy or other ground for reopening the question of boundary, since the geographical boundary line was necessarily to be one and the same for all the world. Even within the period of limitation allowed, no one could be heard to object to the line, unless he declared and offered proof that at the time of the survey he was in the occupation of a definite quantity of land cleared and under cultivation within the line. After the line had once become final, no party could be heard to say that even cultivated lands within it were part of his settled zemindari. BARADAKANT ROY v COMMISSIONER OF THE SUNDERBUNS

1 ACT XXIII OF 1861, s. 35.

1. — Exercise of superintendence.
— Orders of Court of first instance and Appellate Court — The High Court could interfere, under section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, with the order of the Court of first instance, as well as of the Appellate Court, where the orders of both the Courts appeared to be without jurisdiction. SHEO DYAL SINGH v MAHOMED KAMIL . . . 3 Agra, Mis., 2

2. — Case tried in two Courts without jurisdiction — Where a case properly cognisable by a Small Cause Court had been heard and determined by the Subordinate Judge, and on appeal by the District Judge, the High Court, in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, annulled the proceedings of the two lower Courts. BHIMRAY JIVAJI v. BHIMRAY GOVIND . . . 11 Bom., 194

3. — Trial with jurisdiction—Error in decision on facts. — The High Court cannot, where an inferior Court has jurisdiction to try a case, and has tried it, merely because there is an error apparent in the decision on the facts, alter that decision, where the law allows no appeal. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF PEARSEE LALL SAHOO . . . 7 W. R., 130

4. ————— Courts of revenue officers.—Courts acting without jurisdiction.—The provisions of section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 extended to the Courts of revenue officers acting without jurisdiction under Act X of 1859. HURPERSHAD v. LALU

[3 N. W., 60 : Agra, F. B., Ed. 1874, 246]

5. ————— Act X of 1859, s. 103.—Sale by Deputy Collector.—Appeal.—A Deputy Collector sold an under-tenure in execution of a decree for rent. An appeal was made to the Collector on the ground that the tenure could not be sold unless execution had been previously issued against the moveable property of the judgment-debtor. The Collector affirmed the decision of the Deputy Collector, but on review set aside his former order, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction, the sale having taken place under the provisions of Act X of 1859. An application was made to the High Court under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 to set aside the order of the Collector, on the ground that the Collector had no power to review his own judgment, and consequently his first order stood, which the High Court ought to set aside, and pass such order as it might think right, and reverse the order of the Deputy Collector. The question was referred to a Full Bench, whether section 35 applied to the order of the Collector. The Full Bench refused to consider the question referred, on the ground that it was the intention of Act X of 1859 that the sale by the Deputy Collector should be final. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF DOGOWRI KAZI

6 W. R., Act X, 53]

6. ————— Order illegally made.—Appeal entertained without jurisdiction.—In execution of a decree, the District Munsif made an order which he was not legally authorised to make at the instance of the purchaser of the property sold in execution. No appeal could be made against the order, but the Civil Judge entertained an appeal and reversed the order of the District Munsif. The High Court set aside the order of the Civil Judge under section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, but, by virtue of the powers given by the section, the order of the District Munsif was also annulled. SUBRAYA GOUNDEN v. VENKATAGIRI AIYAR . . . 6 Mad., 22

7. ————— Court exceeding its jurisdiction.—Appeal heard without jurisdiction.—The true construction of section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861 was, that the High Court might call for the record in any case in which a subordinate Court exercised a jurisdiction when it had none, or exceeded it when it had jurisdiction. The words in section 35, "the Sudder Court may set aside the decision passed on appeal in such case by the subordinate Court, or may pass such other order in the case as to such Sudder Court may seem right," meant that, where a Court exceeds its jurisdiction, the High Court may set aside that part of the order which is in excess of jurisdiction, and that, where the decision of the subordinate Court is made on appeal in a case in which it has no appellate jurisdiction, the proper order is to set aside the decision altogether. If an appeal be heard by a subordinate Court which has no jurisdiction to hear it, when it ought to be heard by another subordinate Court which has jurisdiction to hear it, the Court may set aside the decision of the Court which had no jurisdiction, and may, if it think right, refer the case to the Court which had jurisdiction, even if it be too late to prefer a fresh appeal to that Court. The Judge having entertained an appeal where none lay, is no ground for interfering with a decision which the Legislature intended to be final. JACKSON, J., differed. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF SUBJAN OSTAGUE

8. ————— Power to call for record.—Discretion of Court.—Under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, there was a discretion in the Court to call for the record or not; and in cases where the application was made a considerable time after the decree, the Court refused to call for it. BOONHHEE v. ALLEE HYDER . . . 1 N. W., Ed. 1873, 271

9. ————— Appeal from order refusing to rectify a decree.—The general powers of the High Court do not enable it to hear an appeal from an order of a Zillah Judge refusing to rectify a decree. MAHOMED BUSHEEROOLLAH CHOWDHRY v. RAMKANT CHOWDHRY . . . 9 W. R., 394

10. ————— Application to transfer appeal.—Laches.—An application to the High Court, under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, to order a subordinate Court to receive an appeal, which in ordinary course ought to have been received within fifteen days of the original decision (in this case to transfer an appeal from a Court which had dealt with it without jurisdiction) ought to be made either immediately upon the quashing of the order of the subordinate appellate Court, or promptly and without any avoidable delay. IN THE MATTER OF RUSSIOK LALL CHATTERJEE . . . 15 W. R., 518

11. ————— Appeal preferred in Court having no jurisdiction.—Extension of time for appealing.—When an appeal had been preferred by the plaintiff to the Judge which ought to have been preferred to the Collector, the Court made an order giving the plaintiff thirty days within which to prefer his appeal to the Collector instead. ADHIRANI NARAIN KUMARI RAJANI OF BUDWAN v. 16. ————— Refusal to set aside Collector's order made without jurisdiction where it reversed an illegal order.—A rule having been issued calling on a judgment-debtor to show cause why an order of the Collector in appeal, reversing an order made by a Deputy Collector in execution, should not be set aside, the rule was discharged with costs, inasmuch as, although the Collector had no jurisdiction to make the order which he made, the Deputy Collector's order was wrong, being a violation of the provisions of section 92 of Act X of 1859, and could not be upheld. TARACHUND MUNDUL v. 19. ————— Act XXIII of 1861, s. 35.—Order made without jurisdiction.—Interference with order of lower Courts.—Petitioner bought at a Court sale certain property which had been attached in O S No. 30 of 1860 on the file of the District Munsif's Court. Before, however, the sale certificate was issued to him, the plaintiff in O S No. 79 of 1866 presented a petition praying for a re-sale of the property, on the ground that it had been sold at an undervalue. On this petition the Munsif cancelled the former sale and ordered a re-sale. Before this re-sale took place the property was sold in execution of the decree in suit No. 3 of 1866 on the file of the Civil Court, and purchased by the plaintiff in that suit. Thereupon petitioner applied to the Munsif to re-sell the property in satisfaction of his claim. The Munsif refused to do so, and the Civil Judge, upon appeal, confirmed the Munsif's order. Held, on special appeal, that the Munsif's first order, annulling the sale, was a nullity, and the subsequent attachment and sale under the decree in O S No. 3 of 1866 was inoperative against the property that, consequently, the appellant was entitled to have these proceedings set aside and the validity of his sale upheld, if the respondent's objection that the orders were not open to question in the High Court should not prevail. Upon the latter point,—Held that no right of appeal existed, but that, therefore, the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal to that Court, and, giving effect to the petition of special appeal as a petition under section 35 of Act XXIII of 1861, that the orders of the lower Courts should be annulled and the petitioner declared entitled to an order and certificate perfecting his title. ANNAMALAI CHETTI v. 93. ————— Dismissal of ministerial officer—With reference to the rule that its extraordinary powers of superintendence should not be exercised except for the purpose of protecting a complainant in a matter wherein otherwise he would not be able to obtain redress, and where the applicant showed himself worthy of its interference, the High Court declined to interfere on behalf of a party who complained that a District Judge had acted ultra vires in dismissing him from the post of serishtadar of the Munsif's Court, seeing that it was open to the applicant, under the Civil Courts Act, to seek his remedy from the Local Government. 94. ————— Dismissal of ministerial officer.—A Munsif having charged his serishtadar with carelessness and irregularities recommended his transfer to some other Munsif. The Judge after calling for and receiving an explanation from the serishtadar dismissed him from office. The High Court refused to interfere in the exercise of its general power of superintendence, holding that although the Judge had exercised an original power where he had only an appellate jurisdiction, he had done so on a complaint made by the Munsif, and the petitioner, if aggrieved, had a remedy under Act VI of 1871 in an application to the Local Government. 95. ————— Dismissal of suit in absence of original plaintiff, after adding third party as plaintiff.—Per NORMAN, J. (SETON-KARE, J., dissenting).—Where a Court added a third party as a plaintiff, and, in the absence of the original plaintiff, improperly dismissed the suit, it was held that the suit was still pending, and undisposed of by the lower Court as regards the plaintiff, and the lower Court was ordered, under the High Court's power of superintendence vested in it by the 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap 104, section 15, to take up and try the case accordingly. 97. ————— Order substituting name of purchaser instead of plaintiff.—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—A Civil Court is not competent to order the name of a purchaser of the rights of the plaintiff in a suit to be substituted for that of the plaintiff, or, upon the application of the party so substituted, to allow the suit to be withdrawn. Such an order, if made, is made without jurisdiction, and is not an order of that description in respect of which the Legislature intended either to give or to deny the right of appeal. But the order is one which the High Court may set aside in the exercise of the superintendence vested in it by section 15 of 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 104. JUDOOPTTEE CHATTERJEE v. 99. ————— Recorder of Moulmein.—Act XXI of 1863, ss. 16 and 17.—Suspension of pleader.—The High Court has, under section 15 of 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 104, general superintendence over the Court of the Recorder of Moulmein, established under Act XXI of 1863. An order passed by the Recorder of Moulmein under section 16 or 17 of Act XXI of 1863, granting or withdrawing a license to practise as a pleader in the Small Cause Courts of Moulmein, is an exercise of power which comes under the superintendence of the High Court. 101. ————— Review, Admission of, after prescribed time—The High Court refused to interfere with the order of a Court granting a review of its judgment, although the application for review was not made until three years after the date of the decree, the party who preferred the application for the review having satisfied such lower Court of the existence of just and reasonable cause for his not having preferred his application for review within ninety days. *AJONNISSA BIBEE v. 102. ————— Review, Admission of, after prescribed time—The lower Appellate Court admitted a petition for review of its judgment after a lapse of ninety days from the date of the decision without recording that just and reasonable cause for the delay had been shown. On an application under section 15 of the Charter Act to the High Court to set aside the order of the lower Court, on the ground that that Court had no jurisdiction to entertain an application for review after a lapse of ninety days without recording that there was just and reasonable cause for the delay, the High Court refused to interfere. *ASRAFANNISSA BEGUM v. 104. ————— Sale made pending inquiry under Act XVII of 1873 (the Nawab Nazim's Debts Act)—Order refusing to confirm sale.—Certain immoveable property having been brought to sale in execution of decrees against Ameer Saheb at the time that the right, title, and interest thereof were under inquiry by Commissioners appointed under Act XVII of 1873 (the Nawab Nazim's Debts Act), it was sold with an intimation that the purchaser would purchase an empty title. Subsequently the Commissioners came to an actual finding under section 12, declaring the property to be held by the Government of India, and their opinion that it could not be alienated by the Nawab Nazim. In consequence of this, the Court which had sold it refused to confirm the sale. The High Court refused to interfere under the High Courts Act, section 15, holding that it was so manifestly right and proper in the interests

The Sudder Ameen afterwards reversed the sale on the ground of the inadequacy of the price. The Judge having refused to entertain an appeal, the purchaser applied to the High Court. Held, the parties being precluded from appealing by section 364 of Act VIII of 1859, the High Court had no power to grant relief. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF DACOSTA

107. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 290 and 622.—Irregularity in sale in execution of decree.—Order of Judicial Commissioner—Certain immoveable property was on the 15th day of February 1879 notified for sale under a decree of a Civil Court on the 15th of March following, so that only twenty-nine instead of thirty days elapsed between the day of sale and the notification. The sale having taken place, the execution-debtor applied to the Deputy Commissioner to set it aside, upon the ground that the sale was illegal, the requirements of section 290 of the Civil Procedure Code being essential to its validity. Upon that ground the sale was set aside as illegal by the Deputy Commissioner. On appeal, the Judicial Commissioner reversed this decision, on the ground that the fact of the sale having taken place twenty-nine instead of thirty days after the notification was merely an irregularity, and that, as the execution-debtor had not shown that he had suffered any damage from the irregularity, the sale ought to be confirmed. An application was then made to a Division Bench of the High Court to set aside the order of the Judicial Commissioner confirming the sale, upon the ground that it was manifestly erroneous, and the Division Bench referred the question to a Full Bench.

whether, assuming the requirements of section 290 to be essential to the validity of a sale, the High Court had any power, either under section 15 of the Charter Act or section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, as amended, to set aside the Judicial Commissioner's order. The Full Bench, without answering the question referred, held that, assuming the requirements of section 290 to be essential, the High Court had a right, under its summary powers, to set aside the sale itself, notwithstanding (and apart from the question whether it would set aside) the order of the Judicial Commissioner. BHEKRAJ KOERI v GENDH LAL TEWARI . . . 108. ———— Application to set aside sale in execution of decree.—Circumstances disentitling party to relief—A party applying to the High Court for relief under section 15 of 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 104, must clearly show that he has not contributed by his own conduct to his being placed in the position he finds himself in. A decree for possession with wasilat of certain lands appertaining to an indigo concern was obtained in a suit against D. as manager on behalf of G. M. & Co., the proprietors of the concern, although no member of G. M. & Co. was living when the suit was instituted. In execution of this decree the plaintiff obtained possession of the lands. The executors of M., the last surviving member of G. M. & Co., having subsequently assigned the concern to A., who also took upon himself the dena-paona, the plaintiff applied under section 210 to execute the decree against A. in respect of wasilat, and two successive notices under section 216 were issued to A. to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him. A. being advised that the suit was a nullity, and that under no circumstances could execution be had against him as heir or legal representative of any of the judgment-debtors, neglected to appear; and certain property belonging to him was sold in execution of the decree without opposition on his part, and the sale having been duly confirmed, the purchaser, who was also the decree-holder, was put into possession. A. thereupon applied to the Court executing the decree to have the sale set aside, and his application being refused, petitioned the High Court under section 15 of 24 and 25 Victoria, Cap. 104, for the same relief. The High Court, however, refused to interfere, both upon the principle above stated, and likewise because the purchaser, being also the decree-holder, could not successfully oppose a suit by A. to have the sale set aside. the surplus proceeds should be rateably distributed among other judgment-creditors who had subsequently attached. On the application of the unsuccessful claimant again preferring his claim to the property, the Principal Sudder Ameen made another order, setting aside the previous order for distribution so far as it affected some of the creditors. Held that the Judge ought not to have granted the certificate to the party who produced the will unless he was quite satisfied that the will was genuine. from District Judge—It is only on the application of a party interested that the High Court can act as a Court of Revision under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Accordingly, where a Munsif, considering that the Subordinate Judge had acted without jurisdiction in setting aside on appeal certain orders made by him, brought the matter to the knowledge of the District Judge, who took the same view, and the latter referred the case to the High Court under that section, it was held that the Court had no power to interfere. 138. ———— *Case where other specific remedy exists.—Bom. Reg. II of 1927, s. 5.—Certiorari.—Mandamus.—Prohibition.—Specific Relief Act, I of 1877, ch. VIII.—A Division Bench (PINHEY and NANABHAI HARIDAS, JJ.) of the High Court referred the following question for the determination of the Full Bench “Whether the High Court should exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or otherwise, on behalf of persons who feel themselves aggrieved by orders passed by Courts below in cases in which it appears the law has specifically prescribed another remedy by suit or otherwise?” Held that the question did not admit of a precise categorical reply, that the High Court could not impose on itself limitations without regard to circumstances, but that the general principles governing the exercise, by the High Court, of its visitatorial or superintending powers to be deduced from a general survey of the authorities on the subject might be reduced to the form of the following seven propositions, the fifth of which would ordinarily govern in the class of cases alluded to in the question: (1) The visitatorial or superintending power of the High Court is so necessary and almost indispensable, that it is not to be wholly excluded even by a clause in a statute withdrawing cases under the statute from its control. When such a statute has been made a mere pretext, or has been wholly misapplied, the case will be treated as one not really arising under the statute, but on an evasion or perversion of the statute, and as such, subject to the general control of the Court. (2) The Court, having called up the record or proceedings of a subordinate Court, will itself investigate the facts on which a jurisdiction has been assumed or declined, on which it depends whether the subordinate Court could or could not legally deal with the matter in question, either at all or on the principle to which it has referred the case; or according to which its mode of inquiry or of action may or may not have been in contradiction rather than obedience to the rules of procedure, or the principles implied in them, to such a material extent as to defeat the purpose of the law. (3) If the Court finds that the external conditions of jurisdiction, of investigation, and of command, have been satisfied by the inferior Court, it will not substitute its own appreciation of evidence, or its own judg-* ment thereon, for the determination of the inferior Court, in any matter committed by the Legislature to the discretion of such Court. (4) Where an appeal is provided, the Court will not interfere by any peremptory order with the ordinary course of adjudication, save in cases wherein a defeat of the law and a grave wrong are manifest, and are irremediable by the regular procedure. (5) Where a decree or order of a subordinate Court is declared by the law to be, for its own purposes, final or conclusive, though in its nature provisional, as subject to displacement by the decree in another more formal suit, the Court will have regard to the intention of the Legislature that promptness and certainty should, in such cases, be in some measure accepted instead of juridical perfection. It will rectify the proceedings of the inferior Court where the extrinsic conditions of its legal activity have plainly been infringed; but where the alleged or apparent error consists in a misappreciation of evidence, or misconstruction of the law, intrinsic to the inquiry and decision, it will respect the intended finality, and will intervene peremptorily only when it is manifest that by the ordinary and prescribed method an adequate remedy, or the intended remedy, cannot be had. (6) The Court will, in all cases, regard its exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction as discretionary, and subject to considerations of the importance of the particular case, or of the principle involved in it, of delay on the part of an applicant, and of his merits with respect to the case in which the interference of the Court is sought. Should other special causes appear for or against the Court's intervention, due weight is to be given to them, regard being always had to the principles already enunciated. (7) The Court will "sedulously abstain" from making any order or refusing to make it on grounds the appreciation of which is exclusively assigned by law to some other authority, provided the legal competence be exercised in good faith on matters that may reasonably be understood as within its lawful range. 141. ———— Order amending decree under s. 206, Civil Procedure Code, 1882.—High Court's powers of revision.—A District Judge, by an order passed under section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, altered a decree passed by his predecessor in the terms, "I dismiss the appeal," to read "I accept the appeal," on the ground that his predecessor had obviously meant to say that he accepted the appeal, and that the decree as it stood failed to give effect to the judgment. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the order passed by the Judge under section 206 could not be made the subject of revision by the High Court under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, because there was an appeal from the amended decree, which became the decree in the suit, and superseded the original decree. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That an order passed under section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code constituted an adjudication separate from that concluded by a decree under the Code passed after the parties had been heard and evidence taken, and that the order in the present case was therefore a separate adjudication, and was not appealable under section 588. Also that, in saying that by "dismissed" his predecessor meant "decreed," the Judge had altered the decree in a manner not warranted by the terms of section 206, that he had therefore exercised his jurisdiction "illegally and with material irregularity," within the meaning of section 622 of the Code, and that the Court was consequently competent to revise his order. *Raghunath Das v. Subsequently the Court, professing to act under section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, passed an order directing the amendment of the decree by calculating the pleader's fees upon the actual value of the property. Held per OLDFIELD, J.—When an original decree is amended under section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, it as amended is the decree in the suit; and an appeal therefore lies from it under the provisions of section 540, when the validity of the amendment can be questioned. The matter of amending a decree under section 206 does not by itself constitute a "case" within the meaning of section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, but forms part of the proceedings in the suit in which the decree is made. Held, therefore, per OLDFIELD, J., that, where an original decree, which was appealable, was amended by the Court of first instance, under section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Court had no power to revise such amendment under section 622 of the Code. Per MAHMOOD, J., contra. RAGHUNATH DAS v. RAJ KUMAR

[I. L. R., 2 All, 276]

Held on appeal under the Letters Patent that the alteration of the decree was improper, and was not an amendment of the kind authorised by section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. An order passed under section 206 amending a decree is a separate adjudication, and is not merely a part of the original decree, and such an order is not appealable under section 588 of the Code. Such an order, therefore, can be revised by the High Court, under section 622. The judgment of OLDFIELD, J., reversed, and that of MAHMOOD, J., affirmed. RAGHUNATH DAS v. RAJ KUMAR. I. L. 143. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 44—Order refusing leave to join claims.—Rejection of plaint—In a plaint filed in the Court of a Subordinate Judge, the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of a house, together with some grain which was stored in it. The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for leave, under section 44, Rule a, of the Civil Procedure Code, to join the claim for grain with the claim for possession of the house. The Subordinate Judge refused leave, and returned the plaint, with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits for recovery of the house and the grain, respectively, in the Court of the Munsif. Held that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaint, on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immoveable property, that, although this might have been a misapplication of section 44, Rule a, of the Code, its effect was to reject the plaint, that such an order was a decree, with reference to the definition in section 2, and was appealable as such to the District Judge and that therefore a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court, and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under section 622. BANDHAN SINGH v. The decree-holder thereupon brought a suit to contest the order allowing the objection. He did not seek in this suit relief in respect of the costs. He obtained a decree setting aside the order allowing the objection. He then applied to the Court which had made the order to order a refund of the amount of the costs which had been paid to the objector. Held that the application being regarded as one with regard to a portion of an order made under section 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court was functus in the matter, and could not make or enforce such an order as was sought for; and that its order disallowing the application was not appealable, as it was not one made under section 244, and if taken to be one passed with reference to section 280, an appeal was barred by section 283. *Jurisdiction, Interference with exercise of.—Second class Subordinate Judge—Subject-matter of suit under Rs.5,000 and within jurisdiction.—Amount of decree with accumulations of interest exceeding Rs.5,000—Application for execution—Second appeal—*The plaintiffs obtained a decree in the Court of a second class Subordinate Judge for a sum less than Rs.5,000, which with accumulations of interest subsequently exceeded Rs.5,000. The plaintiffs applied in execution to recover the total amount. The application was rejected by the Subordinate Judge, on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction under section 24 of Act XIV of 1869. On appeal the District Judge made an order confirming the decision of the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiffs filed a second appeal in the High Court. Held that no second appeal lay to the High Court from such an order, but, as the Subordinate Judge was wrong in refusing to exercise his jurisdiction, the High Court would give relief under the extraordinary jurisdiction conferred by section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882). The subject-matter of the suit was within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Judge, and his jurisdiction continued, whatever might be the result of the suit, in all such matters in the suit as were within his cognisance, amongst which were matters in execution in the suit. The mere circumstance that the amount actually due by process of accumulation exceeded Rs.5,000 could not oust him from the jurisdiction he hitherto had over the suit. *SHAMRAV PANDORI v. *Jurisdiction, Interference with exercise of.—Error of Mamlatdar.—Possessory suit in a Mamlatdar's Court.—*The opponents had obtained a decree for the possession of certain land against the brother and father of the applicants in the Court of the Mamlatdar at Karad, in the Satara district. The applicants were not parties to the suit. The decree was executed, and the opponents were put into possession. Thereupon the applicants, on the 19th May 1884, presented a petition in the Mamlatdar's Court, under section 4 of Bombay Act III of 1876, alleging that they had been in actual possession of the lands and had been ousted from them in execution of the decree, and praying that they might be again put into possession. The Mamlatdar was of opinion that the matter was res judicata, and dismissed the petition. He relied on a circular of the Executive Government as his authority. The applicants applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction. Held that it was not a case for the exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court. The Mamlatdar was, no doubt, guilty of a formal error. In the exercise of

In that suit he applied to the Court in which his suit was brought for an injunction under section 492 of the Civil Procedure Code to stay the sale of the property attached by B in the execution proceedings, but that application was rejected, and R thereupon applied for and obtained from the Court of the First Subordinate Judge an order staying the sale of the attached property until the hearing of the suit brought by him to establish his right to it. Held, in an application under section 622 of the Code to set the latter order aside, that section 492 of the Code of 1882 has, and was intended to have, a wider application than section 92 of Act VIII of 1859 had, and provides a remedy where property is "in danger of being wrongfully sold" if the circumstances justified it, an order could have been obtained under that section from the Court of the Second Subordinate Judge to

On the same date the High Court, on appeal by S, set aside the order rejecting his claim. The District Court, in ignorance of the order of the High Court, having subsequently put the purchaser in possession of the land, S applied for restitution, but his petition was rejected by the District Judge. In an application under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code to revise the Judge's order, on the ground that he refused to exercise his jurisdiction to restore S to possession,—Held that the order of the District Judge confirming the sale was passed without jurisdiction, and that the District Judge had no power to restore possession to S. raised a question affecting the title to property exceeding Rs.1,000 in value, held that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and accordingly returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court under section 57 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held by the Full Bench, that the Munsif had acted upon an erroneous view, as the only subject-matter of the suit was the R49, that he had consequently failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him, and the High Court was therefore competent to revise his order under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. The result of Amir Hassan v Sheo Baksh Singh, I L R, 11 Calc, 6, and Magni Ram v Jwa Lal, I L R, 7 All, 336, is that the questions to which section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code applies are questions of jurisdiction only. The meaning of the decision of the Privy Council in the former case is that, if the Court has jurisdiction to hear and determine a suit, it has jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions which arise in it, either of fact or law, and that the High Court has no jurisdiction under section 622 to inquire into the correctness of its view of the law, or the soundness of its findings as to facts, but that, when no appeal is provided, its decision on questions of both kinds is final. Per STRAIGHT and TYRELL, JJ—Clauses (a) and (b) of section 584, specifying the grounds on which a second appeal lies to the High Court, embody what section 622 refers to in the word “illegally,” that is to say, to cases where the Court below has, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, come to a decision which is contrary to some specified law or usage having the force of law, or failed to determine some material issue of law or usage. Clause (c) of section 584 indicates the meaning of the words “material irregularity” in section 622, i.e., some material irregularity in procedure, “which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case upon the merits.” *Muhammad v. In May 1885, on application by the decree-holder, the Court passed an order amending the decree, the amendment having reference to an arithmetical error. The judgment-debtor applied to the High Court for revision of this order, on the grounds that the amendment of the decree was barred by limitation, and that the decree itself being barred by limitation and finally pronounced to be incapable of execution, the Court had acted beyond its jurisdiction in amending it. Held that the application for revision must be rejected. Per

The meaning of the term “jurisdiction” used in section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code must not be confined to the territorial or pecuniary limits of the powers of a Court, or to the nature of the class to which the case belongs. It implies, in addition to questions of these kinds, the presence or absence of a positive authority or power conferred by the law upon tribunals in cases which satisfy the other conditions referred to. In framing the section, the Legislature gave to the High Court power to interfere with the action of subordinate tribunals in cases where there is no remedy, either by appeal or otherwise, and where those tribunals have either exceeded or wrongly declined to exercise the authority, the power, and the jurisdiction which the law confers upon them, or, under the pretence of exercising such authority, power, and jurisdiction, have acted against a positive prohibition of the law. *Combe v. During the pendency of this suit the two infant sons died, and the widow was made a defendant as representing the estate of her deceased sons. The suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiffs in 1875, and on the plaintiffs applying for execution the widow objected that 5 16ths of the properties, against which execution was sought, was the property of her adopted son, whom she alleged to have adopted in 1874. The adopted son was not made a party to the suit this objection was overruled, but the same objection was taken by the adopted son through his natural father as his guardian and next friend, and the Court released the 5 16ths share from attachment, and allowed the objection. The defendant then applied to the Court of first instance to order restitution of the shares, which had been realised by the plaintiff. Upon being ordered to produce the shares, R. made an application to the Court, professedly under section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, in which he alleged that, pending the appeal to the Privy Council, he had transferred the shares to G., his counsel in the case, who had failed to restore them, and he prayed "that the said person might be brought upon the record, and that execution for recovery of the said shares might be given against him." The Court passed an order upon this application, calling on G. to show cause why he should not be called upon to restore the shares made over to him by R., and he thereupon filed an answer denying that he was the custodian of the shares, and alleging that he was then purchaser for value. The Court passed an order directing that G.'s name should be placed on the record, so that the decree might be executed against him. Held that the application by R. was meant to be and actually was one praying that, in respect of the scrip, restitution of which was being enforced against him, the person to whom some interest in it, more or less, had come pending the suit, might, in addition to himself, in so far as such interest had passed from him, be brought under the operation of the execution proceedings; that this was an application under section 372 of the Civil Procedure Code; and the order passed on it, being appealable under section 588 (21), was not open to revision by the High Court under section 622. *RAYNOR v. 193. — Sale in execution of decree—Fraud—Setting aside order confirming sale—The purchaser at a sale by public auction succeeded, by the exercise of fraud and collusion with the agent of the execution-creditors (though without the creditors' personal knowledge), in becoming the purchaser at a depreciated value. There was no material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. Held that the High Court had power under section 622 of Act X of 1877 to rescind the order made by the Court of first instance confirming the sale. *SUBHAJI RAU v. 194. — Sale in execution of decree—Pre-emption—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 310, 311—Locus standi of pre-emptor in execution proceedings—A person claiming to be a co-sharer in certain undivided immovable property, a share of which had been sold in execution of a decree, objected to the confirmation of the sale in favour of the person recorded as the auction-purchaser, and prayed that it might be confirmed in his favour, with reference to the provisions of section 310 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Court disallowed the objection and confirmed the sale in favour of the auction-purchaser. The objector thereupon applied to the High Court for revision of the order of the lower Court under section 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, having been allowed to object to the confirmation of the sale, and treated as a party to the proceeding held therein, it was competent for him to make such application, notwithstanding that he was not one of the persons mentioned in section 311 of the Code, that there being no appeal in the case, so far as he was concerned, the High Court was competent to entertain the application under section 622 of the Code, but that, as he was not one of the persons who was competent to avail himself of the provisions of section 311, he had no locus standi to justify his application to the lower

Neither decree was satisfied. A then applied for attachment of other property, and the sale was fixed for 28th September. On 25th September B filed a petition for further attachment under sections 250, 274, and also a petition for rateable distribution under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The District Judge rejected the application for execution as being too late, and then the application under section 295, because no application for execution was pending. Held, on appeal, that the petition for execution was wrongly rejected, but that the High Court could not, under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, reverse the order rejecting the application under section 295 for rateable distribution. *VENKATARAMAN v. The sum of the two claims exceeded the pecuniary limit of the Court's jurisdiction. The suit for the rent of the first year was dismissed under section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that the claim ought to have been included in the suit for the second year's rent. Held, in an application under section 622 to the High Court to set aside the order, that although section 43 did prevent the maintenance of the two suits, yet as the petitioners had no intention of abandoning either claim, the proper course was to allow them to withdraw both suits and file a fresh suit in a competent Court. *ALAGU v. heritance, and succession to lands, rents and goods, and all matters of contract and dealing between party and party, should be determined, in cases of Mahomedans, by the laws and usages of the Mahomedans; and where the parties are Gentoos, by the laws and usages of the Gentoos, or by such laws and usages as the same would have been determined by if the suit had been brought in a native Court" and the 37th section directs that "the Court shall frame such process, and make such rules and orders for the execution of the same, in all suits, civil and criminal, to be commenced, sued, or prosecuted, within their jurisdiction, as shall be necessary for the due execution of all or any of the persons thereby committed thereto, with an especial attention to the religion, manners, and usages of the native inhabitants living within its jurisdiction, and accommodating the same to their religion, manners and usages, and to the circumstances of the country, so far as the same can consist with the due execution of law, and the attainment of substantial justice" Held, upon a construction of these sections, that as the law of limitation is a matter of procedure, and the Supreme Court at Bombay had power to frame its procedure different from the native Courts, the Court was right in allowing the plea of the English statute of limitations, in an action between Hindus upon a Hindu contract, as the judgment of the Court on such plea was no determination relating to any right arising out of any contract or dealing involved in the cause of action. Semble,—The mere allegation in the plaint that the parties are Hindus is a sufficient averment of the fact to raise an objection to the cause being decided by the English law of limitations. misappropriation was proved against the mohurrir in Court the property might be seized. There was a proviso that if he deposited Rs100, the money and not the property would be liable, if he failed to deposit the money, the property was to be liable for the payment of the amount of the security. The mohurrir fraudulently allowed certain goods to pass the choongee without payment of duty, whereby he caused the Municipality a loss of Rs8. He was convicted under section 161 of the Penal Code. The plaintiff sued to recover the amount of the security. Held that the defendant could only be liable under the bond for sums shown to have been misappropriated, and that he could not be held liable for losses which accrued to the Municipality from misconduct on the part of the mohurrir other than misappropriation, and that in any case he could only be liable for the actual damage sustained by the Municipality. *TORAB ALI v. Held (by MARKBY, J.) that the decree on the compromise was not one upon which execution could be carried out, at any rate for the sum which was only conditionally due, as the inquiry relative to the fulfilment of the condition could only be made in a regular suit; and that execution could not be taken out against M. 15. ————— Civil Procedure

Code, 1877, ss. 210, 253.—Execution of decree against surety.—Payment of decree by instalments.

—A judgment-debtor, whose property was about to be sold, appeared before the officer appointed to conduct the sale, and applied for its postponement, producing a surety and a bond, in which such surety promised to pay the amount of the decree within one year, if the judgment-debtor did not do so. Such officer thereupon applied to the District Judge to postpone the sale, stating that such surety was willing to pay the amount of the decree by instalments within one year, and forwarding such bond. The District Judge ordered the sale to be postponed and the papers to be sent to the Munsif who had made the decree and ordered the sale of the property. The Munsif made no order regarding the security, but merely made an order that the amount of the decree should be paid by instalments within one year. The judgment-debtor did not pay the amount of the decree within the time fixed, and the decree-holder therefore applied for execution of the decree against such surety. Held that inasmuch as the decree-holder had not been a party to the proceedings of the sale-officer or of the District Judge, and as the parties had not appeared before the Munsif, and as such surety had not agreed to pay the amount of the decree by instalments, the provisions of section 210 of Act X of 1877 were not applicable, and such surety had not become a party to the decree as altered by the Munsif; that such surety had not made himself a party to the decree by promising to pay its amount within one year, and that, therefore, his liability was not one which could be enforced in execution of the decree under section 253 of Act X of 1877. *CHANDAN KUAH v. Where a person became surety, and gave a security bond undertaking to pay all sums of money that might be decreed against the plaintiff on the defendant's appeal, and the appeal was dismissed for default, and on the application of the plaintiff the Recorder made an order cancelling the bond, and returned it to the surety without notice to the defendant, and afterwards the defendant's appeal was on application restored, and a decree passed against the plaintiff,—Held that the Recorder's order was invalid, and execution could issue against the surety notwithstanding that order. AKHUT RAMANA v. 18. ——— Security for restitution of property taken in execution.—Reversal of decree—Execution against surety—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 253, 545, 546—Section 253 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates a suit pending at the time security is given for performance of the decree, and does not apply to a case where the litigation in the Courts of first instance and of first appeal has ended, and no second appeal has been instituted in the High Court when security is given. The holder of a decree affirmed on appeal by the District Court took out execution to recover costs awarded. Costs were deposited by the judgment-debtor and paid to the decree-holder, and a surety gave a bond by which he undertook to refund the amount to the judgment-debtor in the event of the latter succeeding in appeal to the High Court and of the decree-holder failing to repay him. The judgment-debtor, subsequently filed an appeal to the High Court and was successful, and he then applied in the execution department to recover the amount from the surety. Held that the Court executing the High Court's decree had no jurisdiction to execute it against the surety. HARDEO DAS v.
